Kingston, March 22.—The city has received a more favorable proposition from the Seymour Electric Power Co. of Campbellford, and it was considered by the light, heat and power committee yesterday afternoon. The proposition is now so far advanced that an expert has been appointed by the city to report on the proposition. The offer of the company is on a basis of $25 per horse-power.

TAMING A SHREW

It Was Tried at Sea and Was Not Successful

By EVAN D. BALDWIN

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

How Jack Stoughton came to fall in love with Emily Gunter no one could ever find out. Jack was a fine, manly young sailor, and whenever he came home from a voyage all the girls made a dead set for him. Emily was the only girl in the village who paid no attention to him. Perhaps he was piqued on that account. Emily was fairly good looking, though she had a square jaw and the corners of her lips were drawn down, denoting a strong will.

On one of his homecomings Jack sidled up to Emily either from pique or curiosity or a little of both, and they were seen walking together on the beach or sitting on the dunes. Their friends observed that Emily usually had a scowl on her face and Jack seemed to be trying to get her into a good humor.

"What do you want with that girl, Jack?" one of his messmates who was ashore with him said to him one day. "She seems to be continually quarreling with you. You're the best natured man in our ship, so I know it's no fault of yours. If you marry her you'll get a wasp, take my word for that."

"I know you're right, Billy, but somehow there's a fascination in being treated as if she didn't care a rap for me and being hammered by her. The nearest I ever came before to an infatuation was by a little Mexican girl at Vera Cruz who tried to stab me. Singular, isn't it, how we men find a zest in that kind of women?"

"I can understand that so long as you're not married to one of 'em. But you just put your neck in a halter and give Emily Gunter the loose end and she'll make it hot for you all your married life."

"There was Petruchio, who tamed a shrew"—

"Petruchio be hanged! All imaginary! No man ever tamed a shrew. You can tame that kind of man, but not that kind of woman."

But Jack Stoughton was too intent upon tampering with gunpowder to heed his friend's advice. Shortly before they sailed he told Billy he had married Emily, that she seemed very amiable and that she was so averse to parting with him that she was bent on taking the voyage with him.

The Albatross, in which they were to go to Japan and return, was commanded by Captain Larkins. Billy Anderson was first mate, and Jack was second mate. Emily went to Captain Larkins and induced him to let her go on the voyage with them. He had never seen her before and thought a woman on board would have a refining influence on the crew. He had given his consent before Anderson told him what kind of woman Mrs. Stoughton was; but, having given it, he would not withdraw it.

The lady was very pleasant till the ship was well on her way—indeed, too far out to warrant a return—then she began to belabor her husband in no uncertain tones. What the trouble was no one knew, but Mrs. Stoughton's voice could be heard in her stateroom even in stormy weather above the whistling of the wind in the rigging.

It was not long before poor Jack was an object of pity on the part of the crew, and not a man but condemned his wife. The captain finally went to Mrs. Stoughton and besought her to let up on Jack, but got such a berating himself that he was glad to beat a retreat.

It is surprising that Captain Larkins, who had some twenty men under him, not one of whom dared to give him the least back talk, should have been driven from the after cabin and up on to the poop deck by a woman. The day this occurred and it had been discovered that Mrs. Stoughton was virtually in command of the ship each one of the crew went about his duties as if something momentous had happened. They had most of them been at sea for years, they had encountered hurricanes, some had lived for days on a raft without food or water, some had been cast upon desert lands, but none of them had ever passed through an experience like this. Their captain, whom they respected and feared, had been downed. They were as much taken aback as if their rudder had been put out of commission.

The captain had become a different man. He walked the deck with a hangdog look. He gave his orders in a humble tone, as if he would be much obliged if the men should obey them, and the men themselves did their duties languidly, as if some misfortune hung over the ship. Only one man, Jack Stoughton, seemed to have been improved by the incident. Before it occurred he had the demeanor of a whipped cur; now he went about as if he felt himself as good a man as any aboard.

The crew, sympathizing with their captain and one another in the presence of a strange misfortune, between watches consulted as to means of relief.

"What's the matter with ye, ye lubbers?" said Tom Billings, a married man. "There's 'usbands as lives their whole lives with squalls 'angin' over 'em all the time, and yet you duffers is knocked out by one 'ooman to a hull ship. Stoughton 'asn't got used to it yet, but he will. I got used to it long ago. 'My old 'ooman's a corker. When she's mad ye'd think the thunder was a-rollin' When I see one o' them storms a comin' I've l'arned to take in all sail, batten down the 'atches and let the storm blow itself out. Then there's a dead calm for a spell, and a fair breeze follers."

Billings, an experienced man, talked to those without any experience whatever. To be out on a trackless ocean dismasted was one thing—there was still discipline—but to be there with the captain and all hands subdued by one who had never studied navigation and couldn't make an observation was another. The first would be in the line of a sailor's life; the second there was no precedent for. Something must be done. One proposition after another was made, discussed and discarded. Finally Dick Smalls, one of the younger members of the crew, spoke up:

"It's plain that Mrs. Stoughton has mutinied and took the ship. I don't see that there is anything for us to do but mutiny agin the new master and take the ship ourselves."

"That's all werry well, mates," put in Tom Billings, "perwidin' you can get rid o' the 'ooman. But after ye got the ship what ye goin' to do with her? Hain't she still in command? That's my experience."

This was a poser, especially as the crew, nearly all of whom were single men, had great respect for Tom Billings' opinion on anything concerning the opposite sex.

"It seems to me, mates," continued Billings, "that ye're up agin a want o' knowledge o' navigatin' the female craft. All ye got to do is to put 'em afore the wind and let 'em scud. Ye can't steer 'em, and if ye try ye'll sure come to grief. But I knows there hain't no use o' talkin' to you. You're bound to run this here business yer own way, so ye can count me out."

With that he went on deck.

The next day the mutiny plan was carried out. The men, except Stoughton, who was not consulted, marched aft in a body and demanded the person of the "'ooman as has took this ship." The captain made a pretense of resistance, confining himself to words instead of acts, then told them that, being powerless in face of a united crew, they could do what they liked with the woman.

A round robin of four men was appointed to take Mrs. Stoughton down into the hold and turn her adrift, where she would have plenty of room to walk back and forth like a caged lioness. They put bedding down with her, and it was understood that her meals should be let down to her regularly.

"Did ye observe the look on her face, mates?" remarked Billings after the woman had been safely put away. "When they looks that way it means the weather glass is a-goin' down like lead."

Three days passed without any trouble so far as the prisoner was concerned. From the moment she was put below the accustomed cheerfulness came back to the crew, enhanced by contrast with their late condition. But on the fourth day when the captain was standing on the poop deck and a large sea rolled under the vessel he noticed that she didn't rise with her accustomed buoyancy. Billings was standing by at the time.

"What's the matter with her?" growled the captain to himself.

"It's my opinion, sir," said Billings, putting his knuckles to his cap, "that there's somepin in the cargo as don't belong there."

"What do you mean?" asked the captain anxiously.

"The 'ooman."

"Well?"

"When she was put in the hold I was wonderin' what she'd do, so I've kept my blinkers open. The ship's drawin' more water, sir, than she did three days ago."

"You mean"—

"She scuttled."

The captain made a dive for the companionway, calling on Billings to follow. Entering the hold, they found four feet of water. The point of leakage was covered so that they could not see it, but they found some of the carpenter's tools of which Mrs. Stoughton had possessed herself. All hands were called to man the pumps, and when the water had been removed a large auger hole was discovered a few feet above the keel.

The hole having been plugged, the captain ordered Mrs. Stoughton locked in her own cabin, then called the crew aft and asked for suggestions as to what to do with her. Every man jack of them looked at Billings, so the captain asked for his advice.

"There's just two ways o' managin' 'oomen, sir," said the old salt. "The first is to git away from 'em, the second to let 'em have their own way. I can only judge by my own experience. After I was married I observed that to keep the family peace I'd got to knuckle under. There is 'usbands as is 'ead o' the 'ouse, but this is where the 'ooman 'asn't the usual female grit. Them as lets their wives command the fambly ship gits on just as well as any of 'em. Some un's got to be boss, and if the 'ooman has the dominatin' faculty in her why not?"

The captain decided that Mrs. Stoughton should have the free run of the ship for that voyage, after which no woman was to be permitted aboard. So he issued orders to that effect, and Mrs. Stoughton was not again interfered with from that moment until the vessel reached port.

Strange to say, having conquered, the lady made herself quite agreeable, and when she left the ship half the crew felt a heartsickness they had never felt before.

Censure and Curiosity.

"Mr. Johnson," says Mr. Miggles, "I don't want to hurt your feelings, but that story you started to tell at my house last night was one no gentleman of refinement would have told in mixed company. I feel that it is my duty to express my disapproval of such conduct."

"I'm quite sorry," says Mr. Johnson. "I should have thought before beginning it. Halfway through I realized what I was telling, and, you remember, I did my best to end the thing at once."

"Yes, I noticed it fell pretty flat, and everybody could see that you were terribly ashamed. Er—how does the story finish, Johnson?"—Chicago Post.

Family Cured of Eczema By Cuticura Remedies

"The Cuticura treatment has absolutely cured me and family of eczema which I, my wife and two-year-old child had for eight months. It started with small pimples on the head of my child which gradually broke out in sores, and it was not long before I and my wife got the same. Our heads were one mass of sores, we could not sleep and the itching was terrible. We suffered for eight months. We tried different kinds of ointments and medicine but it did us no good and soon it began to break out on our bodies until a friend who had the same trouble told me about Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Resolvent, and I was surprised. After the first few days our heads began to heal and in two months we were absolutely cured of this terrible eczema."

PROVE PSYCHINE

(PRONOUNCED SI-KEEN)

With a 50c. bottle free from your Druggist

It's not so long ago that the doctors bled a man to make him strong.

"Stuff a cold and starve a fever" is miles behind our to-day's knowledge of curative science, yet our fathers had it preached to them time and again.

You may not know it, but to-day there are just as ineffective methods of cure being preached and practised.

All because most people do not know the real cause of disease.

There are two kinds of corpuscles in the blood—red and white.

If for any cause the white corpuscles become depleted and are not sufficiently strong to destroy the germs of disease, then disease controls the body.

That's the cause of disease.

* * *

They didn't know how or why in those days, they do to-day.

These herbs are contained in Psychine—they're responsible for the great results obtained from Psychine a third of a century ago.

They're responsible for the hundreds of thousands that Psychine has cured since that time.

It's because of these herbs that we have received hundreds of thousands of testimonials attesting to wonderful cures that Psychine has made.

And it's because of these very same herbs that we will buy within the next twelve months hundreds of thousands of 50-cent bottles of Psychine and give them away free to whomsoever sends us the coupon in this announcement.

Now if you wish to relieve or prevent any of the disorders in this list send in that coupon:

La Grippe	Bronchial Coughs
Bronchitis	Weak Lungs
Hemorrhages	Weak Voice
Sore Throat	Spring Weakness
Anaemia	Early Decline
Female Weakness	Catarrhal Affections
Indigestion	Catarrh of Stomach
Poor Appetite	Night Sweats
Chills and Fevers	Obstinate Coughs
Sleeplessness and	Laryngitis and
Nervous Troubles	Dyspepsia
After-effects of Pleurisy, Pneumonia and La-Grippe.

Now, we don't ask you to take our word for the tremendously beneficial effect of Phychine. Fill out the coupon below, mail it to us and we'll give your druggist an order (for which we pay him the regular retail price) for a 50-cent bottle of Psychine to be given you free of cost.

We will undoubtedly buy and distribute in this manner, hundreds of thousands of these 50-cent bottles of Psychine.

And we do that to show our entire confidence in this wonderful preparation.

A confidence that has been based on our 30 years' experience with this splendid preparation, with a full knowledge of the hundreds of thousands of cures it has made.

Mabee Carried It.

There is a good story told of Chairman Mabee of the Railway Commission. It has to do with a certain bylaw which was to be submitted in Stratford, the purport of which is a matter of no moment. Mr. Idington was city solicitor. He was violently opposed to the proposition. He was to address a public meeting, and the friends of the bylaw were almost panic-stricken, for they had no material heavy enough to oppose him. At this critical moment, however, a member of the Board of Trade had an inspiration. He imparted his idea to a few of his colleagues, and they at once sought out Mr. Mabee. He took little interest in civic affairs, had no knowledge of the question at issue, but he loved a "scrap," and he quickly fell in with the plan. The meeting was held, and after Mr. Idington had fired all his big guns, Mr. Mabee appeared on the platform. To all but those concerned in the plot, his arrival was a surprise. Then, for the space of an hour or so, to the infinite delight of his hearers, he proceeded to twist Mr. Idington inside out. It cannot be said that he had his "case" well prepared. He did not know the intricacies of the situation, but he did know how to make fun of his opponent. After that night there was nothing to it but the bylaw.

"Go It, Dad."

Rev. Jesse Gibson, the traveling secretary of the British and Foreign Bible Society, delights to tell this good story on himself. He is a member of Jarvis Street Baptist Church, and occasionally takes one of his young hopefuls with him to prayer-meeting. On one of these momentous occasions, the lad noticed that his father was seeking a chance to get to his feet and make a contribution to the devotions of the evening, but each time some one else got the floor ahead of him. Suddenly there was a lull, and quick as a flash the boy leaned over, poked his sire in the ribs, and in a stage whisper that could be heard all over that side of the room, said: "Go it, dad! Now's your chance!" Needless to say, it was up to Mr. Gibson, and he had to make his little speech.

A German Title.

In the matter of titles the Germans show more courage than we do. On a card which reached London the other day the sender describes herself as Frau ——, Rasiermesserhohlschleifeidirektorswitwe. Would any English woman venture to describe herself as widowofthemanageroftherazorbindegrindingworks? When this was shown to a German friend he produced a card on which the sender was entitled "Staatsschuldentilgungshureaurausgeberswitwe," a description which she held to be her due as the widow of an official in the national debt office.—London Chronicle.

NERVOUS DEBILITY

OUR NEW METHOD TREATMENT will cure you and make a man of you. Under its influence the brain becomes active, the blood purified so that all pimples, blotches and ulcers heal up; the nerves become strong as steel, so that nervousness, bashfulness and despondency disappear: the eyes become bright, the face full and clear, energy returns to the body, and the moral, physical and mental systems are invigorated; all drains cease—no more vital waste from the system. You feel yourself a man and know marriage cannot be a failure. Don't let quacks and fakirs rob you of your hard earned dollars.

BEFORE TREATMENT

AFTER TREATMENT

Peter E. Summers relates his experience:

"I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, but received little benefit. I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the New Method Treatment and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and continue to do so.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Is the best of all medicines for the cure of diseases, disorders and weaknesses peculiar to women. It is the only preparation of its kind devised by a regularly graduated physician—an experienced and skilled specialist in the diseases of women.

It is a safe medicine in any condition of the system. THE ONE REMEDY which contains no alcohol and no injurious habit-forming drugs and which creates no craving for such stimulants.

THE ONE REMEDY so good that its makers are not afraid to print its every ingredient on each outside bottle-wrapper and attest to the truthfulness of the same under oath.

It is sold by medicine dealers everywhere, and any dealer who hasn't it can get it. Don't take a substitute of unknown composition for this medicine of known composition. No counterfeit is as good as the genuine and the druggist who says something else is "just as good as Dr Pierce's" is either mistaken or is trying to deceive you for his own selfish benefit. Such a man is not to be trusted. He is trifling with your most priceless possession—your health—may be your life itself. See that you get what you ask for.

Could Not Rest at Night.

Back Was So Weak.

Weak, lame and aching backs are the primary cause of kidney trouble. When the back aches or becomes weak it is a warning from the kidneys that everything is not right with them.

Heed the warning: cure the weak, lame, aching back and dispose of any chances of further trouble.

If you don't do this, serious complications are very apt to arise and the first thing you know you will be troubled with Dropsy, Diabetes or Bright's Disease, the three most deadly forms of Kidney Trouble.

On the first sign of anything wrong Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken. They go to the seat of the trouble and strengthen the kidneys, thereby strengthening the back.

Mrs. John Pugh, Parkdale, Man., writes: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and find nothing to beat them. I could not rest at night my back was so weak. I tried everything, but could not get anything to do me any good until I was told by a friend to use Doan's Kidney Pills. I tried them and I am not the same weak woman I was before. I am very thankful to have found so speedy a cure."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box or 3 for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

If ordering direct specify "Doan's."

THE TRIBE OF MAC.

It Has the Clans of the Smiths and Joneses Beaten a Mile.

The tribe of Mac is greater even than the Smiths, the Joneses or the Cohens, and you never will mistake them for anything else. You might accidentally address a man whose real name was Smith as Cohen, but you would not do it to a Mac, and you would not commit the blunder of thinking a man whose name is Mac Somethingorother was named Jones. The Macs have the advantage of being able to come from everywhere, and most of them do. Furthermore, most of them go everywhere. They may be descended from the pioneers who settled in America, or from the persons who were forcibly settled at Botany Bay, or from kings or chieftains, or almost anything.

It is the easiest part of a name there is, and it is an open question as to whether the collective Macs do not exceed the sons, sohns, sens and vitchs of the rest of the world. One thing is certain, the Macs have such a flying start that they never can be overtaken. Even now the directories and other lists have to divide them into sections under Mac, or Mc, or M', but they are all Macs.

If you walk along the streets of most Nova Scotian cities and yell "Hey, Mac!" two-thirds of the people will turn around to look, because you have pronounced at least a part of their name. In St. John perhaps half have been interested, and in the streets of every other city and town of Canada there will be some. Just now it is a safe bet that there are Macs in the Mexican rebel army and other Macs in the regular army are chasing them around or being chased about.

But while it is a satisfying thing to belong to such a multitudinous and ubiquitous family, it has its disadvantages. A person who does not have the name finds it easy to walk up to one who has the name and say: "Mac old man, let me have $10 until to-morrow, will you?" Now you couldn't act in the same familiar, easy, confident way with a man whose name was Mr. Whiddicomb, or Jameson, or Petersen, or Berkowitz, or Simkovitch, or Mandelsohn.

Any name that inspires you to put Mr. before it robs you of confidence, and very few persons with a Mac to their name ever hear the whole of it pronounced, and the Mr. is prefixed still less often. They go through the world as Mac from boyhood till they forget what their name really is. Another disadvantage the wide family of Mac have is that it is easy for a tempter to say: "Come on, Mac; let's go out and get something." It is also easy for one who has but slight acquaintance with the person to say, "Got a smoke about you, Mac?"

Kitty—Where are you going in such a hurry?

DYSPEPSIA Can Be Cured.

This disease is the all prevailing malady of civilized life, and one which oftenest baffles all ordinary treatments. It gives rise to a great variety of distressing symptoms, such as distress after eating, rising and souring of food, wind in the stomach, heartburn, etc.

Nearly everything that enters a weak dyspeptic stomach acts as an irritant; hence the great difficulty of effecting a cure.

The long train of distressing symptoms, which render life a burden to the victim of dyspepsia, may be promptly cured by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters.

B.B.B. regulates the stomach, liver and bowels, stimulates secretion of the saliva and gastric juice to facilitate digestion, purifies the blood, and tones up the entire system.

Mrs. Herman Dickens, Benton, N.B., writes: "I have used Burdock Blood Bitters and find that few medicines can give such relief in dyspepsia and stomach troubles. I was troubled for a number of years with dyspepsia, and could get no relief until I tried Burdock Blood Bitters. I took three bottles and became cured, and I can now eat anything without it hurting me. I will highly recommend it to all who are troubled with stomach trouble."

WHAT'S LIKE HIM?

The West Mourns the Loss of Dr. Lundy of Portage.

Dr. Frank B. Lundy, of Portage la Prairie, died a few weeks ago. A short time before his death he drove fifty miles across prairie, got caught in a blizzard, and slept all night under his upturned cutter. Such an experience was no novelty to Dr. Lundy. He belonged to the swift-passing type of prairie doctor that went the trails before there were railroads. In all Manitoba there was no character better known. He went to Portage in 1882 when the caravans of Red River carts came honking up from Fort Garry en route to Edmonton, Battleford and Calgary. Portage, now the junction point of four railways, three of them transcontinentals, was then the point where the old trails diverged. Dr. Lundy knew every trail, every coulee and every hill in that part of Manitoba. He was a young man when he started trailing; had spent a short while in Bruce County, Ontario, after graduating from Trinity in 1880. In the twenty-seven years of his trailing he saw many changes; more transformations in the country than in the science of medicine. He was a characteristic "old-timer," who knew as much about Indians as about white men. To doctor up a sick man best of a hundred miles away was part of Dr. Lundy's practical religion. He was never known to send a patient a bill; and he was never known to need money.

But one morning this "Dr. McClure," of the prairie, was found dead in his office. With a score of doctors in the town where once his had been the only shingle, he just quit—and the long trails of Manitoba will never feel the click of his horse's hoofs again.

The citizens of Portage were deeply interested in Dr. Lundy. There is much talk of a handsome stone memorial in the form of a statue, to adorn a public square in the town. If this act of benevolence is carried out, it will be but a feeble echo of the long line of benevolences practiced unostentatiously by Dr. Lundy.

The late doctor was born at Shakespeare, Ont., eldest son of Dr. J. B. Lundy, once of Preston, Ont. He was educated at the old grammar school at Galt, Ont. He entered Trinity Medical School, Toronto, in 1877; graduated Fellow of Trinity, and M.B., Toronto, in 1880; passed examination for license to practice in Ontario that year. He practiced a short time in Bruce County, Ont., going to Portage la Prairie in 1882. He lived there continuously until his death. Member of the Manitoba Medical Association; he was also past president of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Manitoba.

Three Macdonalds in the Senate.

In the Senate there are three veterans of the Clan Macdonald, whose combined ages total 239 years. There is Andrew Archibald, from Charlottetown, who has seen 82 summers and as many winters. William is a political stripling of 79 years. He hails from Cape Breton, and can address the Upper House in Gaelic. Lastly comes William John, of Victoria, B.C., who is 78 and has a son old enough to be a commander in the new navy. The Hon. William John gave his colleague a rude shock recently when he suggested that the only thing the matter with the Senate was that the majority of its members had become too wearied with the burden of years to take any interest in public affairs. This humble expression of opinion was called forth by a motion of Senator David, himself 71 years of age, who, when he is not writing pamphlets eulogizing Sir Wilfrid Laurier, or acting as clerk of the City Council of Montreal, is trying to solve the problem of better distribution of work between the Commons and the Senate. Mr David, therefore, moved that a committee of both Houses be appointed to discuss this matter, but the champion of "more work for the money" was obliged to go about his task with that diplomacy brought to a high state of perfection during his long experience with the aldermen of the metropolis.—Saturday Night.

Paterson's Career.

Hon. William Paterson, Mr. Fielding's colleague in the reciprocity negotiations, the proprietor of an extensive and thriving industry, has had an interesting business career. Born in 1839, he was but ten years old when his parents were both carried off by cholera. He was adopted by Rev. Dr. Ferrier, a Presbyterian minister, and early entered the house of Ignatius Cockshutt, Brantford. When 24 years old he went into business for himself, as one of the founders of the enterprise which he now owns. In his bakery and confectionery business he was first in partnership with Mr. H. B. Learning, but on that gentleman's retirement in 1876, he became sole proprietor.

PROF. HUTTON'S HUMOR.

He Discusses University Staff In Classic Fashion.

Prof. Maurice Hutton, principal of University College, has a reputation for classic wit and refined speech perhaps without parallel in all Canada. His recent address at a college dinner was a masterpiece. Replying to the toast of the Faculty, he discussed the "University Professor" as a genius, in his inimitable style, and concluded with mirth-provoking allusions to the Faculty of our own University.

"And now, sir," he said, "by these cautious and innocent periphrases and paraphrases I approach our own professors. But, sir, I have already on other occasions paid my glowing tribute to these friends of my bosom; and here, in his Residence dining-hall hot chestnuts are not served; it is only in Paris that the delicious fruit is at hand at every corner, to cheer and console the dark and waning autumn days; and to Paris it is a far cry.

"Suffice it then to say that our professors also are as incalculable, as diversified, as those elsewhere. Ye never know them by their appearances only; you never can interpret them merely from their chairs. We have a Professor of Ethics, and he drives, or drove at least when I last left Canada, a horse; would that all dealers in horseflesh professed ethics; so would some of them at least practice it, nay, more, it was a pale horse, and one's imagination turned to the Book of Revelation and to the pale horse there and the man who sat thereon; whose chair was a pale horse. And yet you would be mistaken if you set down our professor horseman as a soldier and a man of Death and Slaughter; he is the keenest anti-militarist on our staff."

"And yet once more: in England (it has been said) men carry the spirit of sport into war; in America the spirit of war into sport; well, we have our sports professor, the Professor of Oriental literature; no football game is complete without him; he is as inseparable from the Rugby team as their mascot; but, be careful, or you will be again mistaken, this lover of athletics has a horror of war; he also is anti-militarist.

"And our militarists then, where are they? Why in the department of Mathematics of all places, two of them in that department already militarists, and the third half-way towards militarism; for the third member of the department, the third (or solid) dimension of their space, besides being the greatest punster and humorist of our staff, and the best dancer, is also the invariable attendant at Niagara Camp dances and at other military dancing; the virus of militarism has reached at least his legs. Have I not said enough to prove that our professors are as incalculable, as many-sided as their polygons.

"You cannot prophesy of them from their chairs I said, neither can you interpret them by their appearance. The Professor of Greek is a young layman, very young and very lay indeed; his speech betrayeth him, but our Professor of History, who is an elderly clergyman, is invariably taken for a stock broker, with whom indeed he has deep affinities; he might have passed into aviation, and we should none of us have wondered, one form of sky piloting succeeding another, but to become a stock broker is a sea-change rich and rare, possible only to a professor. Let me conclude my eulogy by quoting of our Faculty the words used by a previous orator on a kindred theme, 'age cannot wither, nor can custom stale their infinite variety'."

Learning His Voice.

Dr. Rutherford, Live Stock Commissioner for Canada, used to be a member of the Dominion Parliament, although you'd never guess that in view of the way he now keeps clear of politics in his speeches. It was while a member that there happened to him what he believes to be about the best thing that was at his expense.

The doctor was boarding at the home of two matronly ladies, who had, as a pet, a parrot that was credited with considerable intelligence.

The parrot was a great Tory, and one of its finest bits of talking was "Hip, hip-hooray for Sir John A." But, notwithstanding the doctor's political allegiance, Polly made friends with him. He had a knack of handling such pets, and when he scratched Polly's head she forgave him for being a Grit.

A little later, while the doctor was talking to one of the ladies, they heard the parrot making strange, guttural noises that might have meant that it was suffering. The noise grew to something almost terrifying. "Is there anything wrong with Polly?" asked the doctor, but the ladies merely smiled and said, "No."

Polly kept up the strange, deep noises, and finally Dr Rutherford said that he must go and see what was wrong.

Both ladies laughed again, and one of them said, "Well, if you must know Polly's trying to imitate your voice."

TWO INVENTIVE GENIUSES.

The Duncans Are Winning Fame In Different Fields.

The inventive bump is large in Canada. There are Canadians making a fat living by devising ingenious stories which tickle the national intellectual palate. There are other Canadians who are being paid big salaries for the use of their expert services in manufacturing.

The classical outlet for persons of abnormal wit was formerly literature and art. Machinery came to be a force in civilization. A great part of the brains which used to go in for writing and painting went to help build up industry. Some people say that poetry on earth is dead. Other people say that more poetry is being written in the world to-day than there was yesterday. They class Mr. Marconi with Homer.

There is a family in Canada, who are making poetry, old style and new style. Their name is Duncan. One of the members of this family works with pen and ink. Any person who is at all interested in the Northland country knows something about Norman Duncan who wrote "Dr. Luke of the Labrador." Norman Duncan is one of the blood-red fictionists on this continent to-day. His stories appear in all the big magazines of Canada and Europe.

Norman Duncan, novelist, has a brother, Robert Duncan, who looks like him, with long, shaggy hair, dreamy eyes, and that sort of thing. For all the world Robert Duncan might have been an inventor of stories, too, like the highly original and interesting Norman. Except that it happened he became an inventor—in the realm of applied science.

Down in Pittsburg, where Dr. Robert Kennedy Duncan now is, the papers of the "Smoky City" have been talking recently of him as one of the biggest "smokes" in the town, calling him the "new Edison," and other pet names like that. It seems that Dr. Duncan for some years has been doing a lot of big things in a quiet, unassuming, manly, Canadian way, and people are just beginning to find it out.

They are recalling that he was the law scholar, expert in chemistry, whom the United States Government sent a few years ago over to Germany to study the chemistry of commerce, and report to them its application to United States industry; and whom after his return the University of Kansas called to the new chair of industrial chemistry. To have revolutionized many processes of manufacturing in a highly organized commercial community like the United States, that's the credit they are giving to Robert Kennedy Duncan.

Their Destination.

Mr. Bung—When Ripper was married he and his bride went away in his motorcar. Miss Bing—So? Where did they spend their honeymoon?

"In a hospital."

They Are Rarities There.

I went to breezy Gotham,
And I visited the zoo.
I wished to see the nimble bok,
The zebra and the gnu.
And there I found a mighty mob
And cried, "What is it now?"
And butted through the gaping crowd—
And saw a Jersey cow!

Leading in Spelling Reform.

The Schoolmasters' Club of London, Ont., is an organization of professors and male teachers of the University, Normal school, Collegiate Institute, Public Schools, and business college. At its annual meeting recently, after the discussion of a paper on the Improvement of Spelling, a resolution was adopted in the following terms:

"The Schoolmasters' Club desires to express to the publishers of the journals of this city its approval of their practice of spelling words as 'labor,' 'governor', 'honor, etc., with the 'or' ending, and further begs to suggest that they take steps to introduce approved simplifications and improvement of the spelling of some common words, for example, 'program,' 'catalog,' 'tho,' 'altho,' 'thoro' 'thoroly,' 'meter,' 'center,' 'theater.'"

Tired of the Game.

"Billingsly tells me he has moved his gasoline tanks into his garage."

"But that's awful dangerous, isn't it? The garage may catch fire at any moment."

"That's what Billingsly hopes."

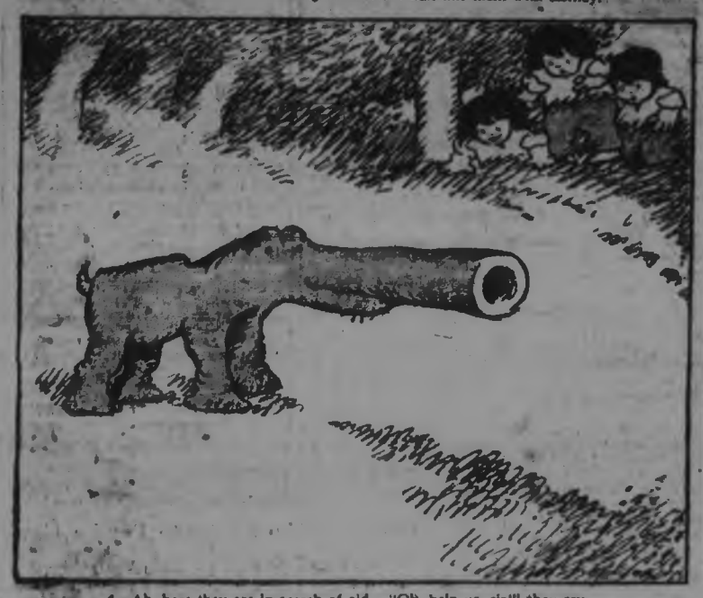
ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

THE TERRORS OF THE TINY TADS

1—The Tiny Tads are climbing up a rocky bluff one day,
When all at once they see a beast that fills them with dismay.

2—A queer tripoddity is he, and on a hill he stands,
His legs and tail spread wide apart, a picture in his hands.

3—"Oh, we must flee!" the Tinies cry, but one of them is slow.
I guess the beast will catch him soon. Where did the others go?



4—Ah, here they are in search of aid. "Oh, help us, sir!" they cry.
"Kind Hippopotamusket, do not let our comrade die."

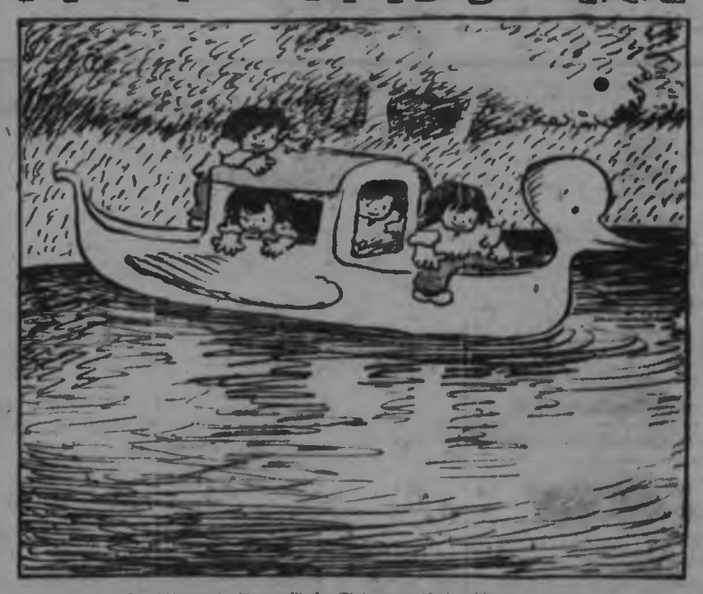
5—The Hippopotamusket shoots, the monkey creature falls,
And then the Tiny Tad escapes, and to his mates he calls.

6—"What was that funny thing?" they ask. "We hope you're not all in."
"That was a Chimpanzeesel," says the Taddy with a grin.

THE TERRORS OF THE TINY TADS

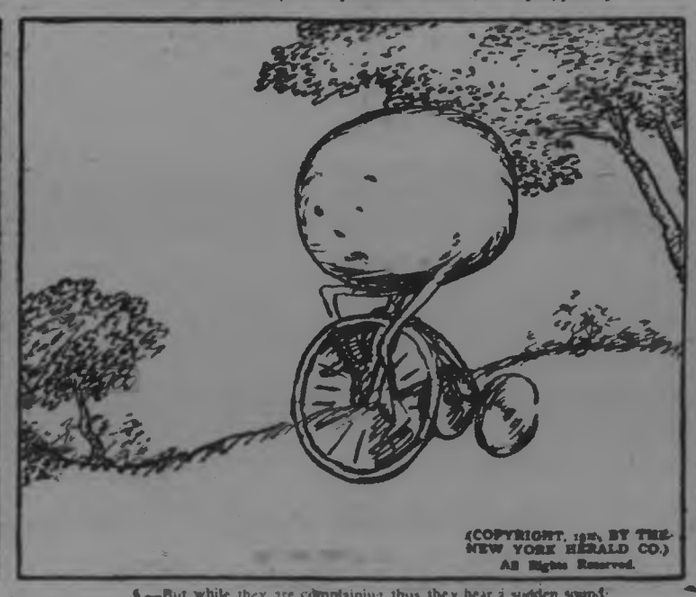
1—What is the matter with the Tiny Tads? They've fallen in the water!
Oh, some one ought to save them now; oh, surely some one oughter!

2—Oh, pretty little Gondolark, who flitteth o'er the trees,
Come down and save the Tiny Tads, dear birdie, won't you, please?



3—"Hooray! Hooray!" the Tinies cry, "he's taking us to land!
"He's such a Paragondola, he certainly is grand!"

4—They dry their little shirts and pants, and then they dress again.
They're acting kind of hungry like, this matter now and then.



5—But while they are complaining thus they hear a sudden sound,
As the Velocipedan-cheese who trundles o'er the ground

6—"Just what I wanted!" cries a Tad, "I'm hungry as a bear."
"We'll have him for our supper," all the other Tads declare.

BROKEN-DOWN NERVES

HOPELESS CONDITION CURED BY "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

MILFORD HAVEN, ONT., Aug. 20th, 1910

"I was a complete invalid, three years ago, with Stomach Trouble, Constipation and Broken-down Nerves. I could not sleep at night and my Doctor did me very little good. I was almost helpless until I began to take "Fruit-a-tives" in small doses. I have taken about three dozen boxes in all and, Thank God, to-day I am well and strong—able to do my own work—and have a baby fifteen months old, and six children in all.

I would not be without "Fruit-a-tives" in the house, and I can highly recommend them to anyone suffering as I did."

MRS. D. GUINEY.

Nervousness is not a disease in itself, but is the result of some of the vital organs becoming diseased. In Mrs. Guiney's case, her nervous condition was caused by a very weak stomach and torpid liver. "Fruit-a-tives" strengthened her stomach—helped digestion—made the liver active—and cured Constipation. Then her nerves became well.

If your nerves are "all unstrung", take "Fruit-a-tives". 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size 25c. At all dealers, or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

A FIRE IN MEXICO CITY.

Department's Amusing Mode of Procedure—One Incident.

Fire apparatus few and far between in Mexico City, as most of the buildings are built either of stone or adobe, with walls two feet or more in thickness. The fire department, writes an observing tourist, is therefore elementary in character and when it turns out on parade it resembles a dog and pony circus. The engine is about the size of a tea kettle and is spiritedly dragged around by a little long-eared burro.

There was a fire in a photograph gallery not long ago and the department was called out. The gallery was situated on the third floor and the totally inadequate engine was unable to get a stream that high. When the fire company arrived at the scene the officer in charge lined all of his men up along the sidewalk and carefully called the roll before they were permitted to get busy with the fire. The fire of course took every advantage of this opportunity and by the time the firemen got on the job it was beyond control.

Among the fire-fighting equipment was a small extension ladder and it required fifteen minutes to erect it and then no one seemed to care to ascend it and they cannot be blamed in view of what happened afterward. Finally, some five minutes after the ladder had been set in place one brave soul essayed the ascent and just as he reached the top of the ladder it collapsed and slid together. This landed the daring fireman opposite the second story balcony.

He stepped off on the balcony into safety and was rewarded with a thunder of "bravos!" from the spectators below. Tipping his hat in appreciation of the applause, he stood there, the admired of all beholders, while his companions in arms below cheered as wildly as the rest. Having faithfully performed their duty, they watched the fire burn itself out and then called a policeman and arrested it — also the proprietor, because in Mexico if a fire occurs in your establishment you must tell the authorities all about it, give your real name and be glad to escape with a life sentence.

He Had to Pay.

A farmer, calling at the village school, was asked by the master if he would like to question the scholars.

So he said to the class: "If either of you can tell me the weight of the moon, the depth of the sea and what I am thinking about I will give a prize of sixpence."

There were twin brothers in this class named Sam and Joe. Now, Joe put up his hand, and the farmer said, "Well, Sam, what is your answer?"

Joe replied, "The weight of the moon is four quarters, the depth of the sea is a stone's throw," and then he paused.

The farmer responded, "Well, Sam, what am I thinking about?"

"Why, you are thinking you are talking to Sam when it is his brother Joe!"

Just Like the Men.

The discussions of the question of votes for women which have taken place in Toronto of late as a result of the visit of Miss Sylvia Pankhurst recalls a story of a retort once made by Sir Wilfrid Laurier to a member of a party of ladies which waited upon him as a deputation, asking for several things.

The main point was the necessity of enacting anti-cigarette legislation. The members were well-posted W. C. T. U. workers, and they presented their arguments with force and ingenuity. But presently one of the ladies strayed from her subject, in an attempt to bring tact as well as argument to bear an appeal to the Premier.

"If you would only do this for us and then give women votes, we would be glad to do something for you," she said.

"Ah," observed the Prime Minister, with his courtly smile, "you are as bad as the men, after all. Before you will give anything, you want something for yourselves."

The Wrong Quotation.

It is related of an absent-minded Canadian professor that he once ordered a wreath to be sent as a floral tribute to a deceased trustee and, on being asked what message was to be written on the card expressing sympathy, replied abstractedly, "I really don't know. I'll think of something."

Taking out his fountain pen he wrote a line on his card and returned it to the florist's assistant, who sent it with the flowers, little knowing the translation of the line which had been written in a fit of abstraction, but which was fatally apropos. "Facilis decensus Averni." (Easy is the descent to Lake Averni—the mouth of Hades.)

Stood the Test.

The hour was 1 a.m.

Inside the dimly lighted hallway stood Mrs. Dorkins, with a grim smile on her face.

The front door was bolted.

"John," she said in cutting accents, "you have been dissipating at the club again."

"Maria," spoke a voice outside rapidly, clearly and distinctly, "he blew lugubriously on the blooming bugle!"

Instantly she unfastened and opened the door.

Mr. Dorkins had not been dissipating.

PROMOTER AND PRIEST

FATHER PARADIS IS A UNIQUE FIGURE IN THE NORTH.

The French-Canadian Who Was Once a Teacher of Civil Engineering at Ottawa University For Six Years Was Also a Lawyer, and His Skill Bankrupted a Lumber Company—Owns Forty-Five Claims.

One winter on the Gatineau River a settler "put in" a good, big cut of logs, writes S. H. Howard in The Toronto Weekly Star. In those days a settler was entitled to the timber which grew on his own place, and it was the custom for him to cut it himself and sell it to the lumber company on the river. The lumber company would measure it, and pay so much a stack, board measure, for it. The settler used to wonder how it was he could work all winter and receive so little for his labor, to say nothing at all about his logs. He was not an expert lumber himself, to be sure, but he could estimate more in his cut than the lumber company's scaler ever could, and he suspected something wrong.

This sort of thing, however, had been going on for years. There seemed no help for it. The settlers were poor French-Canadians with little influence and less education. There seemed no way of checking the lumber company save by approximate estimates and guesses that sounded conclusive to no one but the settler himself. But at the same time the settler knew in his own mind that he was being cheated; knew that his season of logs contained more than he was being paid for; knew just as a man who does much walking to do knows how far he has come in a day.

That Gatineau settler was very much put out. He went to the priest, and to him he told his suspicions. He knew he was being robbed. If he could only get some one to scale his logs, some one independent of both the company and himself, then maybe he would get justice. But who was there? Whom could he trust?

"I will scale your logs," said the priest. "You may trust me."

That priest, it seems, had taught civil engineering at the University of Ottawa for nine years. He could scale logs and do a great many other things. His name was Father Paradis, born in Kamouraska County, "three weeks below Quebec."

Father Paradis scaled up the logs of this Gatineau habitant, measured them as they floated in the river inside the boom, and found the worst suspicions fell short of the mark. On his own responsibility he broke the company's seals on the booms, and replaced them with his own. Then he obtained the company's tally to agree with the true measurements, and left word that in case of any dispute he was prepared to be called upon.

He was called upon. The company paid full price for the logs and sued Father Paradis for breaking their boom-seals. The astounded father pleaded frivolous case. Law, too, had formed part of his remarkable education. The court decided in his favor. The lumber company appealed. Again Father Paradis had his own case, and again he won. There was a further appeal. He won in the Supreme Court. The company took the case to the Privy Council, and the unabashed father, nothing daunted, crossed the Atlantic and fought the habitant's battle out again in England. And again he won, with costs. This, of course, was final. The lumber company was done. Legal expenses had mounted to a disastrous height. Unlike Father Paradis, they had not been able to present their own case. Other misfortunes pressed upon the company, and it went bankrupt. Their old mill, one of the largest in Ontario in its day, has fallen in, and the machinery has been taken away and sold.

Father Paradis figures now in the Porcupine country. He owns a stopping place on the all-bush road, and he is the prospector and promoter of the Bon Trovato. He owns some 45 claims in the north country altogether.

The prospector of the Bon Trovato, Father Paradis, is one of the most famous and the most picturesque personalities of New Ontario. Sixty-two years of age, he is as straight, as wiry, and as sound as an athlete. This very winter he walked from the centre of Dekoro Township, eight miles south of the Hollinger mine, to the railway at Kelso, a distance of forty odd miles, starting in the middle of the afternoon and walking all night, with the thermometer down to about 40 below! He has the face and head of a man of intellect, and wears the dress of the cleric. He came north thirty years ago in response to the old craving for the wilderness for which French-Canadians have always been noted. The missionary and the coureur des bois combine in Father Paradis with something else—the desire to be practical, to do something tangible. It was this phrase of Father Paradis' activities that brought about a rupture with his bishop. There was too much material business about Father Paradis; the spiritual element was like to be over-balanced.

Father Paradis has been a priest, a lawyer, a farmer, a missionary, a colonizer, a prospector, a road builder, a lodging-house keeper, and a promoter. He is 60 years of age, but still as young as a city man in the prime of his activity. He wears light clothing and doesn't cover his ears or face on the coldest of days.

"I stoop," he explains, "hold my breath, and cause a flux of blood to the head."

As a scientific method for keeping one's ears from freezing, the formula holds the supreme merit of simplicity. Also it is typical of the mind-over-matter attitude of the Rev. Father Paradis of the Frederick House.

Serious.

"What charge did you wish brought against him?"

"I wanted him tried for kidnapping."

GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING

An Energetic Britisher.

Mr. J. Ellis Barker, the well-known English writer on politics and economics, recently paid a flying visit to Canada to take a hand in the reciprocity controversy. Many persons picture the writers for the stately British reviews and similar journals as academic gentlemen, whose fighting blood is not allowed to run away with them. Mr. Barker does not belong to that type. He has the swinging stride and the masterful way of the man who will not put up with contradiction, and he lays down his views in the most decided manner.

Mr. Barker came to Canada with a plan of campaign for the fight against the treaty, and he gave it out in speeches and interviews. He hurried round to the sympathetic newspaper offices in Toronto and proceeded to wake things up with a vigor that suggested the militant American politician. He gave his instructions and departed. In one office he saw a map of grain areas which interested him, and before anyone could gasp, it had been given to him. He took out the nails and departed with it. Mr. J. Ellis Barker would quite upset the views of anyone who thought that English public men preferred to move with a minimum amount of speed.

As one Torontonian remarked: "Really, if I did not know otherwise, I should think he had the British Empire in his pocket."

Whitefish Are Dying.

To arrest the rapid depletion of the Great Lakes of whitefish, the Marine and Fisheries Department require to place in the five great fresh water bodies 3,000,000,000 of fry annually. This would be the beginning of the work of restoring to its former abundance the supply of whitefish. The food value of such a fish supply cannot be estimated by Ontario.

The yearly catch of whitefish in Lake Superior, Georgian Bay and around the Manitoulin Islands has decreased approximately 5,000,000 pounds annually from the year 1890 to 1899, at a value of over $500,000, and not one whitefish fry from the hatcheries has ever been planted in these waters. On the other hand most of the fry propagated at the hatchery at Sandwich has been liberated into Lake Erie, and the result has been an increased catch of 400 per cent. during the same period.

There has been no decrease in the salmon trout supply in the lakes. This fish cannot be caught in gill nets, and when caught is only half the value of whitefish.

While British Columbia and Manitoba lakes receive some attention, the Great Lakes system seems to be deserved. Hatcheries are needed at the Soo, Southampton, Goderich, Collingwood, Owen Sound, Hamilton, Toronto, Belleville and Kingston, if the whitefish are to be saved from extinction.

Jostling the Newspapers.

The Mail and Empire, one of Toronto's three morning papers, recently ceased publishing an evening edition. The Globe, however, still continues to publish in the evening, although the great bulk in its circulation is on its morning editions. The staffs of the Toronto evening papers have made a lot of good-natured fun over the evening editions of the two papers mentioned. Probably the best enjoyed jibe was that sprung by a newspaper man soon after The Mail and Empire cut off its evening edition. He said: "The Evening Mail has ceased publication. Its subscriber died, and The Evening Globe's subscriber is pretty sick."

The Fault He Discovered.

A teachtr wrote this line on the blackboard: "Tommy and Mary is not going home."

"What is wrong with the sentence?" she asked one of the boys.

He looked at it long and earnestly. "May I come a little closer?" he asked.

He came a little closer.

"Well, what is it?"

He looked around.

"The down stroke on the 'g' ain't heavy enough," he said.

Proper and Common.

"What is the difference," said the teacher, "between a proper noun and a common noun?" The answer was not devoid of logic, but rather unexpected. "A proper noun is a noun used properly, and a common noun is a noun used commonly."

"The Strange Case Of Eleanor Cuyler"

By KINGSLAND CROSBY

(Cntinued from Tuesday)

"I want to find Abraham Laskovitch. Has he been here lately?"

"Oh, yes," Bernstein replied in tones of disappointment, resuming his chair; "yes, Abie was here only a day or two ago, and sold me a fine bill of goods. That's why I offer all these beautiful garments inside at cut-prices—at bar-gains!—to make room for the new stock. Come right in and look around! No obligation to buy, you understand? Just come in and see my artistic goods, as a very special favour to me!

He had sprung to his feet again, and stood by his door, smiling, bowing, urging the others to enter.

"Some time, perhaps, not now. I can't wait. I want to find Laskovitch and put him in the way of making a little money before the opportunity is gone. Now tell me the names of other people in your line that he calls on."

Bernstein said he could remember only two or three—one away out on the Ridge Road and anther in North Eighth street—both so far away from his own shop that they could not draw any trade from it. As a matter of fact Laskovitch sold goods to a little clothig store within a stone's throw of where they stood—but this shop was a competitor, and therefore must be ignorea.

"That's good as far it goes," Wotsirb remarked, noting down the addresses Bernstein gave him. "But I want one thing more. I want to know where Laskovitch hangs out when staying here in Philadelphia? Where he stops, I mean—his hotel?"

"Oh, that's easy," Bernstein answered. "He stays with an old friend away down at Second and Race Sts., three doors from the corner. Two-story brick house with wooden steps—you can't miss it, for every other brick house in Philadelphia has white marble steps." He laughed heartily at his feeble joke, and added. "I wasn't born a native here, you see."

"Evidently," Wotsirb assented. "I am much obliged to you, Mr. Bernstein—now let's be going on," he concluded, turning to Mrs. Brown and Miss Smith.

"If you should ever want anything in my line—" Bernstein called after them; but they were stepping into a street-car and heard him not.

Northward along the interminable streets the car slowly lumbered, until it arrived at Ridge Avenue, where they waited until another came along which took them out to their destination. This second shop had been visited by Laskovitch the day previous. He was not coming back for several months.

Another journey in another slowly moving horse-car to Eighth street, a considerable walk, and Wotsirb arrived with his companions at the second address Bernstein had given.

Laskovitch had called here that very day, only a couple of hours previous, in fact. He had mentioned that it was the last call he intended to make in Philadelphia, before going away early the next morning.

There was only one thing to do, and it must be done quickly, for evening was almost at hand. Wotsirb and the two women must hasten to Second and Race streets and somehow locate the object of their search. It was a short journey from North Eighth Street, compared with the distances hey had already travelled that afternoon, and on reaching the corner a single glance showed Mrs. Brown where Laskovitch was staying; for he sat on the front steps of a house near by—an old man with Semitic features, long greyish beard, and bowed shoulders by carrying burdens for many years. The three went directly to him, and at Wotsirb's request Mrs. Brown spoke.

"Good evening, Abraham Laskovitch."

The aged Jew glanced quickly up at her. Only his beady black eyes showed that he was surprised at her unexpected visit. In response to her words he mumbled indistinctly, then looked down the street, at nothing in particular.

"I've come over here from New York to find you," Mrs. Brown continued. "This gentleman wants to know the place those parties bought tickets to, when they took the sick lady from my house to the Desbrosses Street ferry two weeks ago."

"It vasn't two weeks ago," Laskovitch replied with a shade of annoyance. "That vas on July sixteen. It was now July tventy-fife."

"You're perfectly correct, Mr. Laskovitch," Wotsirb remarked, "but the exact number of days doesn't matter. I am a friend of the sick lady's family. I want to know where the two men and the woman were taking her—the place to which they bought railroad tickets. . . . .Where was it?"

"Der sick lady's vamily should know vere it ias. . . . I don't vant no droubles."

"You won't have any if you tell me the truth."

"I always dells it. I vas afraid of no mans. I dells anypodys. Der fat mans, he gets dree dickets for Erie, Bennsylvania."

"Are you sure it was Erie?"

"So hel'p me!" the old peddler replied reverently, lifting his eyes upward.

"Thank you—that's all I want to know. It was about eight o'clock at night when they arrived at the Desbrosses Street ferry."

"Seven-fifty—just."

"Good. I am obliged to you."

That was all Wotsirb needed. He would hurry uptown and send an operator to Second and Race streets to keep Laskovitch under surveillance in case he were trying to deceive as to the destination of those who had Eleanor in their possession. It would not be necessary for Mrs. Brown to stay longer in Philadelphia. She could go back to New York that night or the next morning—accompanied by Miss Smith.

These details attended to, Wotsirb went directly to the Broad Street Station, and ascertained that a train would leave for Erie at 11.25 p.m., after the arrival of an express starting from New York at eight o'clock. Unless Laskovitch lied, this was undoubtedly the train on which Miss Cuyler had been taken away. The question that bothered him was whether the conductor in charge of that train on the night of July 16th would be in charge of it now, or whether he had been laid off, or transferred to another train. If he had been running on it continuously, he should be returning from Erie to Philadelphia this night instead of going from Philadelphia to Erie; but in case he had taken a day off meanwhile, he might be travelling out of Philadelphia to-night after all. Much depended on finding that conductor, and Wotsirb was greatly relieved to ascertain on further inquiry that the man in charge of the P. & E. Division train July 16 would be in charge of it to-night—old John Martine, one of the most experienced and highly respected employees in the whole railway system. Sleeping-cars would be open to receive passengers at ten o'clock, when he could be seen.

So far so good. The Secret Service man was thoroughly satisfied as to the situation when he left the station and walked down Broad Street to the old Lafayette Hotel, where he dined leisurely and well. Later he wrote a careful, succinct statement of the recent developments for Mr. Cuyler. According to his custom he had refrained from informing the banker concerning mere speculative clues which might mean nothing; but here was something tangible, so he told fully of his interview with Mrs. Brown, his talk with Laskovitch and his prospective journey to Erie. "I will write or wire you to-morrow," he concluded. Then he mailed the letter, and at half-past ten started again for the railway station. Nearly an hour remained before the train should leave, and he did not want to appear anxious. So he leisurely walked down to his sleeping-car, placed his handbag, umbrella, and hat in the section he had reserved, and put on a travelling cap. Then he stepped out to the platform again lighted a cigar and carelessly strolled up and down several times before speaking to the Conductor. Finally, however, when the big clock on the wall pointed to eleven, he stepped up to the official.

"Going to have a heavy train to-night, Mr. Martine?"

"Good evening, sir!" the conductor replied. "No, not very heavy this season of the year, I guess. . . . .You haven't been out with us lately, have you?"

"No," said Wotsirb, flicking the ashes from his cigar, "but a friend of mine went out with you, ten or twelve days ago—a sick lady in a Shaker bonnet, travelling with another lady and two men. Remember 'em?"

"Oh, yes, very well," the conductor responded. "They had tickets through to Erie but got off at Corry, and took a B. N. Y. & P. train there down towards Pittsburg."

"Yes, they're the ones—that's the lady, I mean," Wotsirb remarked easily. "Don't see, though, why they bought tickets through to Erie when they intended to change trains at Corry."

"Well, they did, anyhow; and they had a hard time making connections with the other train at Corry, too, for we were very late—held up by a coal wreck earlier in the day. Your friends didn't have a minute to step into the station at Corry either, and buy tickets down the other road."

"Oh, they could pay the conductor" said Wotsirb. "By the way, does he run that other train regularly?"

"Yes. Sperry is his name. It leaves Corry about three-twenty or twenty-two, and he's been on it a good many years."

"Well, I think I'll go back to the station and buy a magazine. I'll see you later, Mr. Martine."

"Yes, sir, certainly. You have plenty of time."

Wotsirb did buy a magazine. Also he exchanged the ticket he had purchased to Erie for one which was good only as far as Corry. There was no need of unduly arousing further remark in the Conductor's mind.

He would see Sperry at Corry the next day, and find out from him at what point Eleanor had been taken from his train by the gang who had her in their control.

XIII.

Winthrop and his two friends spent the greater part of Tuesday in making a list of asylums, and retreats near New York, to anyone of which Eleanor might possibly have been taken; and the next morning commenced a careful, systematic search of them.

Several times the painter telephoned Johnson, but without receiving any news, and Thursday afternoon he took Barrett down to Gull Point to see Mrs. Hazard, but it was a depressing experience. Eleanor's aunt had aged perceptibly under the strain of anxiety, and while she kept up a brave appearance yet the men knew how she must be suffering.

"There is absolutely nothing I can do," she said late that afternoon, as her visitors were leaving for the city. "You and my brother can go out in the field and fight and search, hopefully, determinedly. But I must stay here, day by day, calm before the servants, smiling before friends—tossing and trying not to sob aloud through sleepless nights. It is woman's lot, always; and always has been, and always will be—to wait and suffer in silence. . . and wait. . . .and wait."

Her guests drove to the railway station without exchanging a word. It was true that their very activity in the search had more or less prevented them from realizing the full horror of the situation—the disappearance, the probable captivity for ten days, of an innocent, helpless girl.

"Good God!" Barrett said to himself as he stepped aboard the train. "it's awful—and it's almost hopeless. . . . . No, by Jingo!" he continued, taking a firmer grip on himself. "It's not hopeless! We'll find her yet, and before long."

Winthrop turned towards him.

"Curious dream Mrs. Hazard told us about, wasn't it?" he said, inquiringly.

"Curious in a way, but not at all unusual, unnatural, I mean," Barrett responded.

"She said it was about a week ago she first had the dream, didn't she? And that it had recurred twice since then?"

ECZEMA FOR 20 YEARS

What is so annoying and disfiguring as itching Eczema? Mr. Fred W. Clark, Petworth, Addington Co., Ont., writes that his mother suffered from Eczema on both legs for 20 years unable to get relief or cure from doctors or medicines. She found that Dr. Chase's Ointment brought great relief and it soon made the cure complete. He states that no one could have the disease worse or suffer more.

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, March 21.—Liquidation of May wheat started in earnest here today. General selling of that option by houses desiring to purchase July narrowed the spread to 1c. Lower cables and a promise of rain made the markets as a whole take the down-grade. The close, which was weak, showed a net decline of ¼c to 1c to 1¼c. Latest figures were unchanged to ⅜c to ½c under last night for corn, and were off ⅛c to ⅜c on oats. In provisions the outcome of the day was a rise of 5c to 25c compared with twenty-four hours before.

The Liverpool wheat market to-day closed ¼d to ⅝d lower than yesterday. Corn was ¼d lower. Antwerp closed ⅛c lower on wheat. Berlin unchanged, and Buda Pest ⅛c lower.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, March 21.—Export trade in Manitoba spring wheat dull. Cables weaker owing to heavy offerings from Argentine and bids were 1c to 1¼c per bushel below cost, even at the decline in Winnipeg. Local trade in coarse grains dull and feeling easier, especially in oats. There was an improved demand for flour from local buyers and outside buyers, and sales of several small lots were also made over the cable. The demand for bran and shorts is good, and millers in some cases are now in a position to fill orders promptly.

Nature's Cure For A Cough

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is the Most Largely Imitated Medicine in the Country

What to give the children for croup and colds is the problem mothers now have to solve. Most of them finally decide on Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and make it a rule to always have some in the house.

In this medicine are linseed, turpentine and other well-known ingredients of unmistakable value in the cure of colds. It is pleasant to take, so much so that children delight to use it.

So generally is this great medicine used that several imitations have been put on the market. All alike in name only. They are not made from the same formula, nor do they bear the name of Dr. Chase.

You know what you can expect from the use of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, but you cannot put much faith in an imitation which sells on the reputation of the articles it imitates.

On every bottle of the genuine will be found the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author. This is for your protection and for the protection of your children. Be sure to get the genuine, even if it costs a few cents more. 25 cents a bottle, family size, 60 cents; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

Organized Board of Trade.

Palmerston, March 21.—An enthusiastic meeting of the business men and citizens of Palmerston was held in the council chamber Monday night, when a board of trade to promote the business and industrial interests of the town was organized with the following officers: Hon. president, Mayor M. O. Burns; president, J. M. Skerton; hon. vice-president, Reeve G. G. Lawrence; vice-president, Seth Mathers; secretary, R. E. Young; treasurer, J. Y. Donaldson.

A Specious Proposal.

London, March 21.—The Newcastle Chronicle says anent arbitration: "If we withdraw our forces it would not be long before the United States annexed every inch of territory from Alaska to Winnipeg. It is not improbable that the next move of American diplomacy will be the offering of some concession like the free passage of warships through the Panama Canal as a recognition of the cession of Vancouver Island, Alberta, British Columbia, the Yukon, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Ontario. Despite the disclaimers, we need be in no doubt as to the desire of the United States to see the entire wheat belt of Western Canada under the Stars and Stripes, so that the territory from Chicago right up to Alaska would be under the jurisdiction of Washington."

Cured His Rheumatism In Three Weeks.

James LeB. Johnstone, a prominent member of the Citizen's Band, of Chatham, writes:

"I contracted Rheumatism by exposure, five years ago, and was ailing for two months and in great pain all the time. I got Father Morrisey's No. 7 Tablets and took them for about three weeks, when the Rheumatism all left me and I have had no return of the pains since."

Father Morrisey's "No. 7" Tablets have cured thousands of this terribly painful disease.

Rheumatism is generally brought on by exposure, but is really caused by Uric Acid in the blood. This Uric Acid is an irritating poison, formed from the waste matter of the body. The kidneys should remove it, but when they fail it poisons the blood, and, settling in the joints, causes Rheumatism.

"No. 7" Tablets clear out the clogged-up Kidneys and stimulate them to perform their task of filtering the Uric Acid out of the blood. When this is done the Rheumatism simply and naturally vanishes.

"No 7" Tablets cost 50c. At your dealer's. 28

SCHOOL IS ALL RIGHT

School Inspector Mowat Indignant Over Letter From "Anxious Parent" Which Has Kept Pupils From Attending

THOROUGHLY DISINFECTED

That the school was thoroughly cleansed and disinfected and that no further cases of scarlet fever have been reported to the teachers, M. H. O. or police station is the gist of the statement made to the Examiner this morning by Inspector Mowat, as regards what he terms, was a malicious statement which appeared in last night's Examiner signed Anxious Parent, in reference to the condition of the Central school.

The Inspector further stated that the proper authorities had done everything in their power to render the school free from infection, and he regretted that such a groundless supposition as that which appeared in a communicaton in last night's issue of the Examiner should have been the means of preventing a large number of scholars from attending school this morning. About $13 had been spent in thoroughly fumigating the school, which was done on Monday and Tuesday of last week and was subject to the approval of the M.H.O., Therefore, no fears need be entertained by anxious parents or others as to the safety of the children.

PETERBOROUGH GEORGES ORGANIZED LAST NIGHT

Successful Meeting Was Held in the Council Chamber Last Night---Subscriptions Will be Taken and Lists Placed in Different Sections of the City---Enthusiasm Shown.

If your name is "George," your contribution to the "King George Coronation Fund," will be welcomed. It's not how much you give, but in the spirit you give it, any amount between cents and five dollars will be welcomed. The amount donated will not be published. At a meeting of the Georges of Peterborough, held in the Council chamber last evening, His Worship Mayor Morrow presiding, it was decided to have a number of subscription lists printed and placed at different stores in the different wards where the Georges of the city can give their donation. A committee was formed, the names of which are given below, to take charge of the proceedings, and also a committee to take charge of the subscription lists.

For the benefit of those who have not yet grasped the full meaning of the movement, the following letter to His Worship Mayor Morrow, from the Mayor of Toronto, will enlighten them. It reads as follows:

Dear Mr. Mayor,—His Honour, the Lieutenant Governor of Ontario, has transmited to me a commmunication received by him, from His Excellency, the Governor General, in which it is announced that a movement has been set on foot with the effect of enabling all the "Georges of the Empire," to present a coronation gift to the King.

It is announced that subscriptions shall be accepted from 5 cents to $5. A list of the names of all the donors (but not the amount given by each) will be presented to the King.

May I suggest that you, as Mayor of your Municipality, call a meeting of the Georges residing in your city, for the purpose of securing contributions to this fund.

Our committee here, will try to take general charge of the province, which is not covered by your committee and similar committees, which I have asked to be formed.

Would you be good enough, if this commends itself to you, to call a meeting at once, so that I can arrange to take up the matter with the rest of the province.

My idea is, that the Treasurer of each Municipality, who goes into the matter, should receive contributions and acknowledge same in the press. The money could then be forwarded to our City Treasurer, who will take charge of it until the date fixed for the closing of the subscriptions, when he will transfer all funds to the Bank of Montreal at Ottawa, to be placed to the credit of the "King George Coronation Fund."

As His Excellency is anxious to have the matter undertaken at once, I hope this letter will receive your prompt atention.

Thanking you in advance, and with kind regards, I am,

Faithfully yours,
R. A. GEARY

His Worship, the Mayor presided, and called for speakers to produce their ideas on the matter.

The first to comply was Mr. Geo. A. Hatton, who suggested selecting a committee to look after the whole affair, unless it was decided to get out subscription lists and place them in the banks and in the City Hall, and other such places. Then another suggested looking at the directory and making a list. And again another thought that it was not intended that it should be solicited by personal solicitation. Another enterprising man suggested the organizing of a King George's Society to be combined with the present movement. It was feared that this would result in jealousy and the changing of names, in short, everybody would be a 'George.' The suggestion of a free will offering was made and met with some favour.

The Mayor thought that the last clause in the letter suggested soliciting, but Major Bennet was inclined to think that the King would not appreciate the gift so much if he was that it wouldn't be necessary to solicit ed. Then again, another speaker argued that a number of people would not give unless they were asked, for the simple reason that they felt that their donation would not be appreciated unless it was asked. Mr. Howson was in favour of this also, stating that it would do no harm to ask anyway. His Worship Magistrate Edmison expressed his opinion to the effect that, "the subscription should be pure and voluntary and not begged like as if it were a charity subscription," to use his own words. He regarded it in the light that it was not so much the amount that was given, but the number of names secured. Another speaker was also of the opinion that it would be necessary to solicit the donations, by personal request, if the matter was set before the public through the press.

The following resolution was moved by Ald. Geo. Duncan, seconded by Major Bennet, that this meeting of the Georges, endorses the idea of the Georges of the Empire, making a presentation to his Majesty, King George at the time of the Coronation, and that a committee be formed to take charge of the matter of receiving subscriptions, to be composed of: Mayor W. Geo. Morrow, Geo. W. Hatton, Dr. Geo. S. Cameron, Geo. H. Howson, Geo Duncan, Geo. Ball, Geo. Austin, Geo. A. Gillespie and Geo. Maitland.

Mr. F. Adams City Treasurer, was elected general treasurer. Subscription lists were already prepared and given to those present to make their donation and City Clerk, Armstrong acted as temporary treasurer.

The above committee then gathered around to proceed to business, while the other Georges took their departure. It was agreed unanimously, that subscription lists be printed and placed in the following places:

South Ward—R. C. Braund's store, Mrs. Halpin's and Mrs. Goheen's groceries, and one at the entrance to the C.G.E. works.

Auburn (East Ward)—Bell's grocery, also Kylie and Kerr's.

Then came the election of officers to look after the subscription lists. The following were elected:

North Ward—Messrs. Geo. Ball and Geo. Howson.

West Ward—Dr. Cameron and Geo. Giroux.

The suggestion of having notices in schools also arose, and communication will be accordingly made with Principals and Inspectors to that effect.

A meeting of the committee will likely be held in the near future.

A BANQUET IN HONOUR OF POPULAR MEMBER

MUCH REGRETTED

A meeting and banquet of the Royal Astronomical Society, was held last night, the meeting in the Collegiate and the banquet at Hooper's palm parlours, to honour Mr. H. B. Collier, on the eve of his departure for Toronto, where he and his family will reside in future. Mr. Collier has been President of the Peterborough centre of the Royal Astronomical Society of Canada, during the last year and has been an active member of that organization since its inauguration and as a token of thy respect in which he was held, and as an evidence of the regret they felt at his leaving, a number of ladies and gentlemen, composing the Council of the Society, assembled. The event was one of mixed regret and pleasure. Regret for the departing member, and the pleasure they were enjoying during the very sumptuous repast. At the close of the supper a number of speeches were made, all present manifesting their regret at the departure of Mr. Collier. Mr. T. A. S. Hay made a neat speech in which he expressed his appreciation of the work done by Mr. Collier during his term of office in the local branch of the Society, and wished him every success in all his undertakings in his future place of labour. He stated that the enthusiasm displayed by Mr. Collier here, was evidence of the fact that he would make a splendid member for the Toronto branch of the society. He also

A TEST OF THE PUMPS

Big Turbine With a Guarantee of Three Million Gallons in Twenty-four Hours is Inspected

ENGINEERS HERE

To-day the official efficiency test of the turbine pump installed in the Peterborough Waterworks plant is taking place, the test being conducted by Mr. Wm. Kennedy, Jr., C.E., of Montreal, the consulting engineer, of the Water Commissioners, and Mr. Lionglon, his assistant. The pump, which was manufactured and installed by the John McDougall Caledonia Iron Works, Limited, of Montreal, is a turbine, geared to the water wheel shaft, and is the first pump in Canada with helical gears. It is guaranteed to pump three million Imperial gallons of water in 24 hours, against a pressure of 180 pounds to the square inch. The pump has been in operation for six months, but the official test upon which the payment of the contract depends, was not made until to-day.

Mr. Brown, the pump designer of the John McDougall Company, and Mr. C. Lester, one of their Engineers, are here in the interests of the firm, while Mr. Percy Day, a Milwaukee gear expert, was also present during the test.

Messrs. R. Cooper and J. R. McCollum, Water Commissioners from Welland, also visited the plant to-day. They are contemplating some change in their system, which Mr. Kennedy is planning for them, and so decided to come to Peterborough and inspect the magnificent pumping station here with which, needless to say, they were delighted.

The result of the test will not be made known until Mr. Kennedy makes his official report to the Water Commissioners.

TEMPORARY APPOINTMENT

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, MARCH 22.—Preferring not to open a constituency in Toronto at present by the appointment of an M.P.P. to the position of surrogate court registrar made vacant by the death of Joseph Tate, the Ontario government has asked S. B. Harmon, K. C. to undertake the duties with the understanding that this is merely a temporary appointment.

FREE FIGHT MARKS THE TRIAL OF THE CAMMORA

Lawyer For Prosecution Waves Dead Man's Ring in Front of the Steel Cage and the Prisoners Make a Demonstration While Women Weep--Court Had to be Adjourned

Special Wire to the Examiner.

VITERPO, ITALY, MAR. 22.—During the debate between the opposing counsel at the trial of the Camorists to-day the prisoners in the cage made a demonstration which got beyond the control of the court officials, necessitating the suspension of proceedings. The accused men cursed in their rage and sobbed hysterically, while women friends in the audience cried in chorus. The trouble began when a dead man's ring was produced and declared to have been found in a mattress. The lawyer for the prosecution shook the ring in front of the steel cage, awakening the anger of the defence lawyers and precipitating a free fight. Everybody engaged in the turmoil except Abbatemaggio, the informer, who sat calm amid all the excitement. The President of the court finding order not to be obtained, announced a temporary adjournment.

"THE MAKING OF A NATION" A MAGNIFICENT ADDRESS

Lecture by Rev. John McNeill in the Murray Street Baptist Church Was Enjoyed by a Very Large Audience.

A SPLENDID EFFORT

A large gathering of people availed themselves of the excellent opportunity to obtain a grasp of the inner spirits of national life, as was provided in an able exposition given last night by the Rev. John McNeill, of Toronto. The distinguished speaker, who is a high authority on affairs pertaining to the betterment of national life, chose for his subject, "The Making of a Nation." Rev. J. McNeill, during the course of his lecture, enumerated a number of important features that are essentially necessary in the successful upbuilding of a nation, dwelling on the characteristics of nations from a moral, physical and political standpoint, nations that have risen to a predominating pinnacle of success, such as France, Germany, etc., and nations that have risen, only to fall and remain in oblivion.

Dr. Scott occupied the chair to the satisfaction of all concerned. The first number on the programme was a solo, "Oh, Canada," by Mr. McIlroy, which received a hearty encore, and was responded to by the above gentleman by the singing of the "Village Blacksmith." Next followed the introduction of the speaker of the evening, Rev. John McNeill, by the chairman.

Dr. Scott dwelt eulogistically on the merits of the distinguished gentleman who was to address the gathering, defining him as one of the foremost orators in the service of the Baptist church to-day.

Rev. J. McNeill, in his opening remarks, said that he had learned by bitter experience that lectures, as a rule, were not held in high regard, but was pleased to see such a large crowd present, and was delighted to find in Peterborough that the sentiments are otherwise. If we would go back over a period of two thousand years we would find nations were in oblivion whose star of ascendancy once climbed to the very highest of the heavens and have now fallen. We do not infer that this is the inevitable outcome of every nation. Some had died from diseases, raging madness and overwork, and had passed out of the record of national life. If that be true, it becomes the duty of every patriotic individual to study out the sources of the evil and endeavour to eliminate them. Location has a great deal to do with the failure or success of a nation, for instance a tropical climate will produce a sluggish, indolent race; while, on the other hand, a frigid climate will produce a sturdy and more energetic class of people. Great Britain today holds a position of prominence. She can guard the Atlantic, block the North Sea and, command such prominent points as Gibraltar and Malta. The Orient is the great centre on which all eyes are centralized, with Japan holding the position of strategy. Napoleon once said that "China is a sleeping giant—let her sleep." She is awakening to-day, while Japan is hovering near, ready to get a share of the spoil, should the occasion present itself.

National resources are needed for the upbuilding of a great national life. Italy is the most famous country, as far as natural resources are concerned. As many as four or five crops are grown during the course of a season. China is another fertile land, containing alluvial deposits that have been cropped for hundreds of years without any apparent deterioration. France is the best of them all. The fertility of the soil is phenomenal. A rough estimate of the productiveness of the country can be gained by the following figures. Thirty years ago, at the close of the Franco-Prussian war, France was burdened with a debt of five billion dollars, while an additional billion dollars of a war indemnity was added, making in all six billion dollars. France has succeeded in paying off the whole amount and is now in the market with money to loan. France will never sleep as long as Germany

DIAMOND HALL

Remarkable Display of Diamonds in Warne Bros' Windows

A glance at the window of Warne Bros. jewellery store proves without a doubt that the enterprising proprietors were not guilty of a misnomer when they called their store "Diamond Hall". Certainly a finer lot of diamonds has never been seen in Peterborough, the window containing a magnificent assortment of splendid stones. Messrs. Warne Bros. buy their diamonds direct from the Amsterdam cutters more reasonably than by securing them from the wholesalers and they are, therefore, in a position to supply these magnificent stones at unusually low figures.

TO HOLD AT HOME

The Canadian General Electric Soccer Club, champions of the Midland Football League last year, and one of the fastest and best teams that ever represented Peterborough, have reorganized for the season and have decided to hold an "At Home" and dance in the Sons of England Hall on Wednesday, March 29th. This will undoubtedly be a popular event and will be liberally patronized, as the C. G. E players have a host of friends in the city.

Canada's Champion Dancer

Cured of Piles by Zam-Buk

Mr. Thomas J. Hogan, Champion Clog and Pedestal Dancer of Canada, who resides at 59 Chambord St., Montreal, writes: "It gives me much pleasure to let you know my opinion of your wonderful Zam-Buk. For some time past I have been troubled with piles, but this year I suffered so much that I was obliged to cancel a number of engagements. I tried all the so-called remedies that were recommended, but they seemed to do me no good. Having been advised to try Zam-Buk, I purchased a box, and after applying it a few times I felt marked relief. I continued with the Zam-Buk treatment, and the relief was extended into a permanent cure. I gladly permit you to use my experience as an illustration of the great value of Zam-Buk for piles."

Another illustration of how Zam-Buk cures long-standing cases of piles is provided by Mr William Kenny, of Upper Nine Mile River, Hants Co., N.S. He says: "I suffered terrible from piles, the pain at times being almost unbearable. Zam-Buk was recommended to me so I procured a supply and commenced with the treatment. After a very short time Zam-Buk effected a complete cure."

Zam-Buk is also a cure for ulcers, abscesses, eczema, cold sores, chapped hands, varicose ulcers, rashes, blood-poison, ringworm, cuts, burns, bruises, children's abrasions, tetter, salt rheum, etc. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Zam-Buk Soap, which may be had from any druggist at 25c. per tablet, should be used instead of ordinary soap in all cases of eruptions and skin diseases.

MORE CONTRADICTION.

The arguments of the opponents of reciprocity do not agree. Their opposition is based on political sentiment, or interest, and when they come to discuss the merits of the agreement their logic becomes tangled. For instance, the Mail and Empire scouts the idea that the United States market is of any value to the Canadian farmers. It declares that the United States is an exporter of food products, and therefore will not want anything from Canada. Of course it is, but that is not to say that a market is not needed for a surplus of products. Trade is a matter of convenience, as well as commodity. Take two countries situated as Canada and the United States are, with a large number of products coming to maturity at different times; there will thus be naturally at the same time a surplus in one country and a temporary scarcity in the other. In this event, with no obstructive tariff intervening, trade, like water, will find its level and there will be interchange of products. But the advantage would generally be with the Canadian products, for the prices in the United States are generally higher for the staple farm products in the United States than in Canada.

But the Mail and Empire, while at one moment it asserts that the United States market is of no value to Canada, at the next it joins the clamour of the special interests—that reciprocity will divert trade north and south, instead of east and west and destroy the business of our transcontinental railways and of our canals. If, as the Mail and Empire asserts, the United States market is of no value in Canada, there will be no trade north and south, nor any other direction, and the dreadful bogies of destruction of our railways, commercial union and annexation raised by the opponents of reciprocity are knocked on the head and "knocked out" by their own arguments. It seems profitless waste of words to combat arguments that so flatly contradict each other.

Nobody expects that reciprocity will be a boon, as manna from heaven was to the Israelites in the wilderness, but it will be a great benefit by giving Canadians a third market, in addition to the home and British markets. Canada cannot consume her own products any more than a farmer can eat all he grows. Expansion of trade is the spirit of civilisation. Great Britain's policy has been the expansion of her trade areas and the lengthening and multiplication of trade routes. She spends millions a year in naval construction in the interests of her overseas trade. In 1910 Great Britain built and launched, exclusive of war vessels, new vessels with a tonnage of 1,143,169 tons, nearly two-thirds more than the ship-building output of the whole world combined. This explains why "free trade" England, whose policy is trade expansion, last year had a total trade of 5,338 millions of dollars, nearly double the trade of any other country in the world; and equal to the combined trade of France and the United States, even with their combined population three times greater. Canada has spent millions in the encouragement of trade with other countries. Now she has a market of 90 millions thrown open to her, is it not worth while to try what this market, under reciprocal exchange in farm and natural products will do for us—try and see if it will not be the great boon to the farmers of Canada, and through them, to the country as a whole, that reciprocity proved to be forty years ago?

EDITORIAL NOTES

Ottawa's medical health officer is evidently a Law unto himself.

The manufacturers who are not affected by the reciprocity agreement are dead against it. The farmers, who stand to be greatly benefitted, are in favour of it.

The special interests, whose "organization" accounts for a good deal of the high cost of living, are apparently afraid of the competition which reciprocity will create. Free exchange of farm and natural products will tend to equalize prices and so benefit the consumer.

Points Where Civilization And Barbarism Are Closely Related

(Ottawa Citizen)

Are we barbarians The easiest way to answer the question is by an indignant "No." It is the customary thing to point to the many marks of our civilization and to speak in terms of lofty and somewhat contemptuous commiseration of the barbaric days of the past.

It is part of an age old conceit that a barbarian is always one whose methods of cruelty are somewhat dissimilar to our own. In all times and places the pagan has been considered to be the person on some distant isle whose ways of worship have been different and not to be understood.

Yet are we wise if we remember that civilization may be but a veneer of virtue, covering the same fundamental social defects. We are wise also if we realize that the pagan, so-called, may be one whose form of faith, however, foreign and repulsive may be just as real as our own.

It is not at all sure that the days of real barbarism and paganism are behind us. Indeed, it may easily be shown that ancient wrong masquerades under modern guise, that many of the old facts of the barbaric survive in our present life, and that we can set ourselves to no greater task than that of tearing off the disguises that betray us daily into the unthinking perpetuation of wrong and injustice.

Some of the facts concerning this continent of ours are worth considering. They are of such a character that it will be only by a very devious course of reasoning, or else a very dubious kind of unreasoning, that we escape the barbaric implication. It is at least better to know the worst, and to be able to rightly estimate our advancement and our present task.

One of the characteristics of barbarism was the shedding of blood. Life was little esteemed, and for small cause was taken. In the wars blood flowed like water. A conquered enemy had no rights whatever.

A recent magazine contained a grewsome article describing the extermination of the dogs of Constantinople. Some features in the Turkish religion prohibits the taking of canine life, and so, instead of putting the dogs to death in a merciful and quick way, they were carried in shiploads to a barren island some distance from the city, and there allowed to starve to death, or to feed upon each other in hideous postponement of the inevitable end.

However much this may shock our Canadian sensibilities, it is nevertheless to be recognized that facts concerning our own civilized and Christianized continent evidence a decree of extinction hardly above that of Constantinople and the "unspeakable Turk."

Take, for example, the fact that there are on this continent of ours 10,000 people yearly who commit suicide. As a matter of statistics, it might pass without notice. But, carefully considered, it presents a situation absolutely appalling. Worked out in terms of actuality, it tears our civilized conceit into paltry shreds.

This means that every day of the year 27 people are forced, for various reasons and because of different social influences, to take their own lives. Whenever the clock strikes, it sounds the knell of some human being, who flings himself into the blackness, and at midnight, four take the shuddering leap. Every year a procession, walking in close formation, almost six miles long, passes into the unknown from a life that holds for them no charm or promise.

There is terrible neglect somewhere that such a state of affairs should exist. It cannot be deemed any less than barbarism to have these ten thousand people driven, like the dogs of Constantinople, to their death. It presents a problem that every good Canadian citizen will endeavour to solve.

Another feature of pagan barbarity that we are wont to cite as characteristic of worse civilizations than ours is the act of the Hindoo mother in casting her child into the river Ganges, as a religious deed. Every one of us has shuddered as we heard for the first time of the ghastly sacrifice.

But so long as we have any kind of child labour that robs the young of life and joy we are not in a position to read an essay on civilization to the Hindoos of the past. It must be said to our shame that on the American continent we are yearly casting thousands of children into the maelstrom of industry, with about as much chance of escape from ultimate destruction as they would have of they were cast into the Niagara rapids.

And in the fact that a large percentage of babies die in infancy, we confront another refutation of our boasted civilization. The sooner we realize that every child's death is a secret murder, the sooner we shall be in trim to create a civilization that is not barbaric. Every child has a right to life, and so long as we allow the existence of any evil or injustice whereby the child's right is forfeited, we are no better than barbarians.

It is the fact, and not the form, that really counts. Veneers are vicious. Civilization must penetrate to the heart. The bad is barbaric. Goodness is from the ground up, not from the surface down. And our Canadian civilization will be unreal unless we establish it upon justice and the equal rights of all.

WOOD BLOCK CURLING.

Few Early Exponents of the "Roarin' Game" Had Real "Stanes."

In an article on curling in Canada in The Canadian Courier, A. W. Curran harks back to the days when wooden blocks were used.

There were very few stones in Canada before the sixties; though the Governor-General and the officers at Ottawa played with the granites.

The blocks were hardwood, larger at the bottom than the top. They weighed about four or five pounds, and slipped along the ice quite easily. The handle was made of any old piece of iron that could be found.

It was a great event in the different towns when the first pair of stones arrived. The owner would, without exception, want to play his forty pound rocks against the five pound blocks. One game was usually sufficient, as the rocks would clear the rink of blocks as though they were pebbles on the ice. After that, of course, everyone had to "dig down" and buy a pair of "Ailsa Craigs"; and as the players in these ancient days were all just fresh "frae old Scotia" it caused quite a tugging at the heart-strings when they parted with the wherewithal.

A pair of curling stones in those days were as highly valued as a house and lot, for the simple reason that if you lost them you had to wait for a pair to come from the old land—certainly not for their intrinsic value. If, perchance, a stone was broken then the man who broke it had to pay for it. That was one of the stringent rules of the game; and force of public opinion made it a good rule to observe.

They tell a story in a town of the north country of a prominent men, who had lost thousands of dollars speculating without a whimper. One day, in a close, hard game, an opponent, playing a running shot, broke his stone. That man raised more row about that old curling stone in five minutes than he ever had about losing thousands of dollars. It took him months to get over it. It was the only time his friends had ever seen him really upset.

In connection with the importation of the first stones into the town of Orillia, back in 1873, there is a rather good story. Stonewall Jackson, a braw Scot, was the proud owner of the first pair of stones—exact replicas of the pair used by the Governor-General. He tried to use his stones against the blocks, and, as happened in other places, the blocks were knocked all over the ring. So, the following year, the other members had to get stones.

It so happened that one day on soft ice Stonewall took a running shot, which "wabbled," and hitting the shot on the edge, a piece was chipped out of his stone. Of course, no one was to blame but Stonewall himself. So, as nobody was buying him a new pair, he had the stone with the piece out of the side cut down to about half-size—the stone at that time were flat, regular pancakes, and wide. After that, whenever Stonewall had a narrow port to run he would use his small stone, which was a great advantage, as it would go through a hole half the size the regular stone would require, and saved many games for him, 'tis said.

There is a decided difference between the stones used then and those in vogue now. They were flat, less than three inches high, and wide, about eighteen inches across. They sat very low on the ice and caught all the dirt in sight; consequently luck was a greater factor in their game. In fact, the game in those days was not the scientific game that is played to-day. It was more of a roarin' game—but so were the times. Now, it is a science, and must be practiced and played for years before a man can hope to play really well.

The old-timers never played anything but the in-turn, and the stones drew very little anyhow. They sometimes tried the straight handle, but the stone usually ended up with one turn or the other, dirt on the ice doing the trick.

Now, the out-turn is played nearly as often as the in, and the modern stones draw as much as ten feet on modern ice. The stones are so shaped that they brush aside almost any dirt, and so a great element of chance is eliminated.

One change significant of the times to which to a more or less extent is due the change in the tone of the sport, is the absence of whisky. In the fifties, and thereafter for forty years, no curling game was complete without a "guid old cuttie of whisky" guid old rye. As the "skey" has disappeared, so the boisterousness has faded away. However, the games, in those times, were much more interesting to the spectator, and goodly crowds gathered to see the curlers make merry. After every three ends

CARRIER PIGEONS.

Homing Birds Whose Messenger Service Has Proved of Great Value.

For centuries good and bad news, prayers for help, secrets of state and tidings of war's victories and defeats have been sent under pigeons' wings. Egyptian records show that they were used in the land of the Pharaohs 13 centuries before Christ. Ovid tells that they carried the news of the Olympian games to the distant friends and relatives of the victors.

First-class carrier pigeons are very expensive, some breeding birds costing as much as $300, and they can attain the remarkable speed of nearly 1,500 yards a minute.

During the Franco-German war pigeons proved their utility as Government letter carriers. When Paris was invested by the enemy and all the ordinary channels of communication with the outside world were cut off the attention of the authorities was directed to the fact that the carrier pigeons in the city could be brought into service. At first the suggestion was ridiculed, but the practicability of the plan was soon demonstrated and in a very short time birds were conveying news into and out of the besieged city almost hourly.

During the South African war, when Sir George White was beleaguered at Ladysmith, a few pigeons belonging to English fanciers which had been taken into the town before the siege proved of inestimable value to the gallant commander in conveying messages to the base at Durban.

The organization of pigeon posts for military purposes in Germany is of an extremely practical character. In addition to the various Government lofts in the fortresses and at important tragetic points most of the homing clubs place their birds in case of need at the disposition of the state, and in return for this the same protection is afforded to their pigeons as to those which are the property of the Government. They bear an official mark and it is a criminal offence to trap or shoot them or to detain them should they stray into a private loft.

A Manchester firm of millowners is reported to be possessed of a pigeon which has been employed as a messenger from one mill to another for over 10 years. During that period it has made over 2,000 journeys and traveled over 39,000 miles. It is calculated that to have sent the messages by wire would have cost $1,500.

Homing pigeons are not only endowed with marvelous speed, but with great endurance. A few years ago a bird belonging to the late King Edward, who was a great pigeon enthusiast, as is King George, won the national race from Lerwick, covering 510 miles at a velocity of 1,307 yards a minute.

It is a great evil as well as a mis fortune to be unable to utter a prompt and decided no.—Simmons.

ELLIOT'S

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

FRIENDSHIP is the supreme tie. It is stronger even than the bonds of blood, as we see in the case of Jonathan who stood by his friend David even against his own father. When two hearts have become one in the mystical union of friendship, that relationship should mean more to them than any matter of circumstances, fortune or individual benefit."

In a sketch of the life of Clarence Stedman, a man whose name this generation may not recognize, but whom their fathers will surely remember as the famous "banker-poet," occurs this sentence:

"Amid all discouragements he kept the friends of his youth."

It is surrounded by many more obviously flattering remarks, but to me it is as high as any praise his biographer gives him.

Says Anne Thackery Ritchie: "I often find myself going back to Darwin's saying about the duration of a man's friendship being one of the best measures of his worth."

With all my heart I agree with that. Indeed, I scarcely see how there could be a better test.

Beware of the man or woman whose friends are all of too recent a vintage. It makes no difference how highly they speak of him. Praise is not enough unless it be backed by knowledge. Where is his old friend? Why is his voice lacking from this symphony of praise?

Find that out before you accept him at the valuation these newly made friends would put upon him.

As an interesting experiment, why not reckon how it would fare with you if you were tried by Darwin'stest? Run over your list of friends and see how many there are of ten years' standing? of twenty years' standing? of school day making?

Of course, many times it is the accidents of circumstances and distance and widely diverging interests, rather than change in character that separates us from our old friend.

But if the friendship be what we thought it when we formed it, a heart friendship and not a mere affair of convenience, can we afford to let it lapse?

Of course, in the hurry of business and social life, the line of least resistance is all too often to let the genuine old friend slip gradually out of our lives and try to fill his place with two or three acquaintances of convenience.

But every man or woman who does that, is selling his birthright for a mess of pottage.

Friendship, love and toil—these are the greatest things in life, and he who willingly dispenses with the joys of any one of them misses a third of the happiness and inspiration?

Can't you take the first step this very night toward picking up the threads of your friendship?

And don't you want to?

Ruth Cameron

MICROSCOPIC MESSAGES.

How a Single Pigeon Might Carry a Whole Library.

For more than 2,000 years carrier pigeons have been used to carry messages when no other means sufficed, and during the siege of Paris, when 363 birds were sent out from the doomed city, one of the birds performed the almost incredible feat of carrying to the outside world on one trip no less than 40,000 messages averaging twenty words each. This was 800,000 words, or the equivalent of five or six average novels.

This marvel was accomplished by means of microscopic photography, the messages being first printed with ordinary type and then photographed and rephotographed until they had been reduced several hundred diameters. The final photographs were taken on films or pellicles of collodion, each of which, about two inches square, contained 50,000 words. A dozen of these films, rolled up in a quill, weighed but one twenty-eighth of an ounce. The messages could, of course, be read with a microscope without the necessity of rephotographing and enlarging.

Under favorable conditions and for comparatively short distances pigeons have carried as much as three-quarters of an ounce. Using the photo reduction method, it would therefore be possible for a single bird to carry messages equal in words to no fewer than 120 ordinary volumes.—Harper's Weekly.

Whistler's White Lock.

As long as the name of James McNeill Whistler lives among those who saw him it will recall the famous white lock which stood out so conspicuously from the mass of his black hair. It was, as he used to say himself, "well placed" and was always treated from the harmonious point of view to develop its greatest effect in his appearance. One day when Dorothy Menpes, daughter of the well known English artist Mortimer Menpes, was a baby and was asleep on her pillow Whistler went to see her. A white feather had by chance settled on her head and lay in a spot exactly corresponding with the white lock on his own head. "That child is going to develop into something great," he exclaimed, "for, see, she begins with a feather, just like me!"

Gypsy Queens.

On occasions America treats its gypsy monarchs with full regal pomp. Matilda Stanley was accorded an almost royal funeral in 1878 at Dayton, O., where, ten years later, another queen was crowned with all proper ceremonial. In England, too, gypsy queens have received all due honor. Esther Faa Blythe, who died in 1868, had many members of the aristocracy on her visiting list, and she, too, had a regular coronation. But, on the whole, the gypsy has not had a very good time in England. An act of 1592, for example, made it a felony without benefit of clergy to be merely seen for a month in the society of gypsies, while for actually being a gypsy no punishment was too severe.—London Standard.

Much is done in the name of friendship; so are many.—Exchange.

STOWAWAYS.

The Ocean Art of Ticketless Travel Extensively Practiced.

Stowaways being usually considered rather interesting personages to read about, a newspaperman waited upon a certain big steamship company to learn something about the methods of the passengers who don't pay.

Although he was not actually referred downstairs to "our Stowaways' Department," the visitor was at once taken up in a lift to a gentleman who might almost claim to have made a lifelong study of stowaways.

"Stowaways things of the past!" he ejaculated, in response to the caller's suggestion. "I should rather describe them as being decidedly of the present. Personally, I believe stowing-away has become more popular of recent years. The reason? The South African war, the rush to the Cape. No work there; so on to Australasia, anywhere, then home again.

Even to-day, after boats leave Cape Town, there is always a stowaway-hunt—a kind of 'I spy' for the crew.

"Stowaways are of two kinds. There are those who smuggle themselves on board anyhow, and hide amongst the cargo in the more usual, unsophisticated way. The others saunter aboard with the passengers' friends, and, ignoring 'All ashore!' pose comfortably as passengers themselves, trusting to luck and cool cheek to dodge the ticket-taker.

"Look at one of the Castle boats! Thirteen days at sea, twenty-four hours from Southampton, a well-groomed individual inquired of the chief officer if he could be provided with a railway ticket to London, instead of continuing the voyage to its end. It was finely done, but bluff, nothing else. The man had no right on board at all, and was given into custody.

"One stowaway went to New York in a packing-case. He was penned up for sixteen days, lying upon hay, with two dozen soda-water bottles of sweetened coffee and a packet of letters from his young lady with him. The man nearly lost his reason.

"The West Coast of Africa is a terror for colored stowaways, constant watch having to be kept on the steamers. Recently a mail boat arrived at Plymouth with twelve Krooboy stowaways on board, one of them bringing with him his tall silk hat!

"At some ports now dogs are kept, and trained to run loose among the cargo ere the vessel sails and nose out stowaways. The sailors call them 'bilge hounds.' One dog could not be induced to quit, so the ship sailed with him, and next day he dragged to light a man's wooden leg. There was a one-legged stowaway in hiding.

"Aboard liners, a stowaway is signed on as an assistant steerage steward. Place under the orders of the chief steward, it depends a great deal on his own demeanor and shrewdness whether he is handed over to the police or given a proper discharge at the finish of the trip.

"I have known stowaways to depart in the best of spirits and bodily condition, and with two or three sovereigns jingling in their pockets."

Her Own Ticket.

"Well, of course I don't know how the young man will turn out. Marriage is a lottery."

"Yes, mamma, I know, but a girl should hardly be expected to let her mother select her ticket."

"WELL, I'M WELLINGTONED!"

Some Marvellous Hands That Players Have Held at Cards.

Card-players sometimes get some miraculous "hands."

In 1901, four passengers on board the South African liner Greek were playing ordinary whist after dinner in the evening.

A. held all the thirteen hearts, B. all the diamonds, C. all the clubs, and D. all the spades. The odds against such a thing happening have been said to be as many as 158,753,-389,899 to 1.

One of the most surprising calls on record at solo-whist was made in a game between five gentlemen at Twickenham, where each man stood out in turn. On the cards being shuffled, cut, and dealt, with hearts as trumps, the caller went "Solo." The second player then called "Misere." The third man was this time standing out, and so the next, to everybody's amusement, said he was going "Abundance on diamonds."

"Well, you'll have to go, I suppose," exclaimed the other, "but you've done me out of a fine solo!"

"I'm going abundance declare!" the fourth man chipped in sweetly, putting his cards down on the table; for, of course, he had first lead, and made his own trumps with such a call.

And he put down the nine clubs, including the top seven, and also the ace, king, queen, and jack of spades! Of course, he won his abundance.

A writer to one of the morning papers last year mentioned two notable experiences within his own knowledge at local whist-drives at Bexbridge, Godalming. In one case, a player sat at the same table for fifteen hands out of twenty-four games, and another was one of the losing partners for seventeen hands out of the twenty-four games.

At Wakefield, in 1902, four friends—two gentlemen and their wives—met for a game at ordinary whist. On the cards being dealt, after several hands had been played, one of the men found he had no trumps. At the end of the game this was laughingly just mentioned. But he stared when, in the next hand, with different trumps, he again had none! And the company was more surprised at this. However, when, a third time in succession, the same man found he hadn't a single trump, he began to wonder what was the matter.

Some suburbanites, a few years ago, were playing nap. Owing to the "kitty" being doubled when a caller of "Nap!" lost, it had got to £2 10s., at midnight. The amount, then, to be doubled, frightened the three players, and it was certain that no one would again call until he had got an absolute "cert."

So, for two hours, not one "Nap!" was called. Then, at five minutes to two o'clock, the players agreed to divide the "kitty" between them if the next deal yielded nothing in that way.

The cards were dealt as usual. The caller looked at his five hearts—ace, king, queen, jack, and eight—and, of course, he promptly called "Nap!"

"Well, then, I'm going over you! Napoleon!" said the next man.

When the second player put down his hand, he had in it five spades—the ace, king, queen, jack, and eight—exactly the same value cards as the man who had called on hearts!

But, what was more extraordinary still, perhaps, the third man had in his three diamonds—seven, four, and deuce—and two clubs—ten and five. He could have gone "Wellington," and beaten the lot!—Answers.

Composer of "The Better Land."

Dr. F. H. Cowen, the famous musician, whose latest work, "The Veil," was heard for the first time in London at the Queen's Hall on Feb. 21, was a young man of twenty-five when he wrote the music of "The Better Land." It was written in an hour or two, on the suggestion of the late Mme. Antoinette Sterling. Dr. Cowen was calling one day upon the popular vocalist, when she read Mrs. Hemans' poem to him, saying she thought it would make a beautiful song for her. When the score was sent to her next morning, Mme. Sterling liked it so much that she offered to buy the copyright from the composer—an unusual course for a singer to take; but to this, fortunately for his pocket, Dr. Cowen would not agree. Dr. Cowen has a mascot which he would not part with for untold gold. This is a little pianette which he has had since he was a boy of fourteen, and every work he has composed has been written with its aid.

The Lord Chancellor's Pipe.

What he afterwards laughingly described as a "nerve-racking experience" once befell Lord Loreburn, who is a great smoker. During the course of an important speech in the Commons, he was pulling a bundle of notes out of his pocket when a much-smoked briar-root pipe rolled on the ground. Flinging his memoranda on the seat behind him, he made a dart for the pipe, and, amid the breathless interest of the House, examined it carefully to see if it was damaged. With an air of relief he restored the precious object to his pocket, and the House cheered sympathetically. Lord Loreburn is a Dumfries man — he comes of an old Jacobite family—and is justly proud of his county. He is one of the cheeriest and most genial of men.

SECRETS OF THE MINT

BE QUITE A DULL, SOBER PLACE AFTER ALL.

Place Where Britain's Loose Change Is Coined Is Not a Glittering Treasure-House, But a Plain Whitewashed Interior Where Everything Is Done In the Most Orderly Manner —Weighing the Coins.

A visit to the British Mint resulted in disillusionment to a representative of The London Express. The walls of what he had in imagination pictured was a sort of Aladdin's palace he found smiled with the whitewash of respectability, their dull, grey stone giving no hint of the millions they enshrine. Childhood's idea of the Mint workmen, gloating over glittering gold with difficulty restraining his hands from filling his pockets with the "solid-enduring" metal, proved a ridiculous dream. It was a case where familiarity breeds contempt.

You start with the melting rooms —one for gold, one for silver. The principle is very similar in each. In the silver melting room stands a red-hot crucible of plumbago. Workmen clad in leathern gauntlets and aprons tend amid the fitful glare. Showers of sparks scintillate.

The molten silver is tipped from the crucible into steel moulds some twenty inches long. These are placed upright in a frame, which resembles an ugly sled umbrella stand. When hardened the silver — looking like bars of chocolate done up in dirty silver paper—is removed. Each bar weighs some 15 pounds.

The rolling-rooms comes next. Metal is rolled out in long "fillets," each to the exact thickness of the coin it is destined to make. The thickness of each is equalised throughout its entire length. Drawn through two accurately adjusted rollers, it does not vary by the ten-thousandth part of an inch.

Flopping, wobbling, clashing on every side are fillets of gold—22 carat gold. They are countless, and they all look just like the long brass slats that are used for beds or brass fender-trimmings to support a muslin window-blind, and very unpolished at that. Each one is worth $15,000.

These fillets are passed through a little machine, which punches out circular discs at the rate of 150 a minute. The discs must next be furnished with a projecting rim, and the still brighter bit of mechanism which attends to this splits them out at the rate of 200 a minute.

These discs are too hard to be stamped. They must first be annealed or softened. They are placed in closed cases, and unlike the interior of a coal-box. Each of these is fixed to a rung of a strong iron endless ladder. Slowly the ladder travels down into a bath of water, passes beneath the water right through the hearth of a glowing furnace and the discs arise, softened and subdued, through water at the other end.

A heap of dirty yellow counters lies in each case, or they might be the flat chocolates that you buy neatly done-up in tinsel paper. Each box happens to contain, say $14,250, but it is difficult to be enthusiastic about it. It looks so little like what you expect $14,000 to be.

The discs are dried in sawdust, and each $250,000 is neatly placed in a sack. If you try to lift one they will impress you for the first time. The little chocolates are a good deal heavier than they look — over 50 pounds, for 250 sovereigns weigh exactly 50 pounds.

Even were it not for the elaborate weighing arrangements which ensure that exactly the same weight of metal eventually passes through each department, the enormous finished money, it is evident, that shoplifting is not a profession to be indulged in with impunity at the Mint.

Then comes a room where journey presses worked by electricity, whizz and whirr; there is a distracting jangle of falling coin. Hungry and insatiable machines consume the unassuming little discs—as many as 150 a minute; they glide down a tube, one after another, and halt for a second at the fatal spot—the obverse die, which is on the flat; the reverse comes down with great pressure—both impressions are thus taken at once—and the collar of the die is grooved so that the expansion of the metal forces its edge into this groove, and thus produces the milling — a three-fold operation at one blow.

Like Jupiter, who transformed himself into a shower of gold to win Danae, the modest discs go up by leaps and bounds in your estimation as they gush forth into a bowl on the ground; they are sovereigns at last—gold, "bright and yellow, hard and cold." They clink and glisten in bowls on every side, and on each gleams a portrait of King George V., the head turned to the left.

It is perhaps a wise guide who hurries you on before you have time to realise the fact that you are surrounded by millions.

Behind a glass partition in the following room sits a young man who seems to have so little to do that he whiles away the time by spinning coins in the air. But that is what he is paid for. He is the "ringer," and, allowing each coin to fall on a steel slab, he detects by the ring any cracked or flawed coins.

The greatest marvel of the Mint—quiet, unsensational, but none the less marvellous for that—is yet to come. The most delicate operation of all is performed in the weighing-room. Here are twelve machines each costing $1,250, so sensitive that each is protected by the slightest draught by a glass case. They are driven by an air-engine actuated by a motor.

At one end of a beam hangs a glass disc that is as nearly as possible the exact weight of a sovereign; at the other is a bonded pendulum whose swing is limited to the thickness of three sovereigns.

Those of correct weight drop through a slot into the middle drawer.

Traditions of Mother Shipton.

Of all British prophets Mother Shipton is beyond doubt the most celebrated. She was, in fact, all that a prophet and witch should be, in strange contrast to the serious and scientific nostradamus. The day she was born the sky became dark and gloomy and, according to her biographer, "Beleit not nothing for an hour but flames, thundering after a most hideous manner." Her personal appearance, described by her admiring biographer in 1662, is scarcely flattering: "Her physiognomy was so misshapen that it is altogether impossible to express fully in words or for the most ingenious to line her in colors, though many persons of eminent qualifications in that line have often attempted it, but without success."—Cornwallian Magazine.

SHAVING IS NOT FATAL.

Barbers Nowadays Do Not Use Hammers and Cold Chisels.

In reply to a correspondent who says he yearns to have his flowing beard removed and yet lacks the Spartan firmness of the early martyrs to face the ordeal and makes a pathetic appeal for advice the alfalfa editor of the Emporia Gazette unfeelingly remarks:

"The alfalfa editor can offer no advice or encouragement to such a trembling soul. It seems probable that he has worn his whiskers for many years. It is likely that he hasn't purchased a shave for a quarter of a century and therefore is ignorant of the improvements in the art tonsorial which have been achieved in recent years. It is no longer like going through a slaughter house to an open grave to be shaved by an expert barber. In fact, that operation has been so shorn of its terrors that many eminent citizens consider it a pleasure to visit the barber. It is no longer necessary to strap a patient down in the chair before shaving him; neither is it necessary to administer anaesthetics to his whiskers.

"The man whose only reason for wearing whiskers is the fact that he fears the barber shop will gain little sympathy. If he tries to explain that he cannot shave himself without suffering the agonies of the all fired he will gain less. Such excuses might have had some force long ago, when barbers used hammers and cold chisels, but science has made giant strides in recent years, and the country is full of painless barbers, and a clean shave costs no anguish or inconvenience."

Ups and Downs.

Not every statesman takes his dismissal with the humor of the Duc d'Epernon, who fell into disgrace with Henry of Navarre. Descending one day the great staircase of the Louvre, he met Richelieu ascending it, and on the cardinal asking indifferently if there was anything new taking place D'Epernon replied, "Nothing, except that, as you see, I am going down and you are going up!" Mr. Bissondale Burton tells the story in "The Fate of Henry of Navarre."

The Result of Careful Buying

A keen understanding of market conditions and a determination to do for customers better—a good deal better than most merchants think possible, have resulted in values of remarkable attraction.

Flawlessly tailored garments of fine wool fabrics in the newest and most exclusive models are selling at less than greatly inferior suits customarily cost. To fully appreciate the lowness of the price, see the garments.

RICHARD HALL & SON
GEORGE STREET

SENATOR COX STARTS THE STRAW HAT MOVEMENT

The Los Angeles Express says:

It remained for a man from Toronto, Canada, to spring the first straw hat of the season in the lobby of the Alexandria hotel. He did it yesterday afternoon, much to the surprise of the other guests of the hotel, yet in keeping with the torrid state of weather, so carefully arranged by the obliging Mr. Wollaber.

Were it not for the fact that George A. Cox is on the near side of three score years and ten and a man of public affairs in Canada, his temerity would have been looked upon as the irrepressible exuberance of youth. As it was, the hat was given but a passing thought, while the man beneath was looked upon with a feeling akin to that accorded a United States senator or a man of equal importance in government affairs.

For be it known, George A. Cox is a member of the Canadian senate, president of the Canada Life Insurance company, the Western Fire Insurance company and the British American Fire Insurance company. Also he is a liberal and an ardent advocate of the proposed reciprocity agreement. Upon this question, however, Mr. Cox preferred not to talk until later, perhaps. If he talks at all, it must be after he has had time to collect his thoughts or feel out the sentiment of the community in which he intends to sojourn for a brief period.

"THE MAKING OF A NATION"

is awake. Neither will England rest as long as Russia is on the alert. It needs the lion to watch the bear. Germany is the greatest intellectual nation of the world to-day. The whole system of education, which is under Government supervision, creates in educational force that is unparalleled throughout the world to-day. But over-intellectuality ruined Greek, they became so learned that they were not good for anything else. They were unable to resist the invasion of Persia. You will find the political power of the nation so much greater where the power to rule is accorded the common people. England well remembers the bitter lesson learned some years ago, which resulted in the loss of one of the finest colonies that ever came from her warm, loving heart—the United States of America. A matter of apprehension in connection with the American continent, was the race suicide question. Were it not for the steady inflow of immigrants the population of the United States would be at a standstill. The speaker made reference to the outlook and thrilling greatness of our own beloved people; our great natural resources are inexhaustible—such as our vast forests, our watercourses and mines. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, during the course of a speech, given in London, England, at the time of the Jubilee of our late Queen Victoria, said: "Someone has asked will Canada ever become a nation?" and he replied: "Canada is a Nation."

Laying aside partyism, the dream of annexation is forever dead, unless we annex the United States. The destiny of Canada will be realized, not on the grounds of her natural resources, but by her manhood.

Rev. Canon Davidson then moved that a hearty vote of thanks be tendered Rev. Mr. McNeill, on behalf of the audience. This was seconded by Mr Vincent Eastwood and carried unanimously by those present.

A RUNAWAY

A lively runaway occurred early this morning. A team hitched to a bus belonging to the Oriental ran away. They were captured out on the Lakefield road. The harness was badly damaged, but the damage to the bus was silght. It appears they had been left standing at the G. T. P. station for the early morning train when something frightened them, with the above result.

MASCOT INJURED

While Chief Howard was putting the men through an extra course of fire drill yesterday the hose waggon ran over the firemen's pet dog, which is, by the way, a mascot in the Fire Hall, and commonly known as Dovey. The dog was very badly injured. The Chief summoned Dr. Rogers, V.S., who attended the injured animal. The dog is an Irish Wire-Haired Terrier and was purchased from his Worship D. W. Dumble.

VERSATILE M.P'S.

Members of British House Who Can Write and Draw.

British lawmakers have included men of almost every calling, from manufacturers to miners, and from barristers to "bruisers"; but we scan the lists in vein to find a painter or poet of any note. Literature has at present many worthy prose representatives; but a wooer of the Muse of poetry is as rare as a black swan or a knight of brush and palette.

In looking through the House of Commons lists for the last twenty years it is difficult to find half a dozen members who by any stretch of courtesy could be dubbed painters; and of the half dozen there are no more than three who might have made a name in art.

If Sir Herbert Maxwell had not been heir to a title and large estates there is little doubt that he would have been more famous to-day by his brush than by his clever pen. Forty years ago he was one of the most diligent and promising students at South Kensington; for seven years he worked as hard at his painting, both in oil and water color, as if his living depended on his skill; and many of his canvases, chiefly landscapes, have found places of honor on the walls of the Scottish Academy.

Sir Herbert's art covers a wide range, from cartoons worthy of Punch and book illustrations in black and white to portraits and landscapes painted all over Europe; and all of it is excellent. In his younger days he traveled thousands of miles in pursuit of his art, and he tells remarkable stories of his adventures, not the least unpleasant of them being the story of his arrest as a spy when sketching outside the ramparts of Strasburg, and being taken through the streets followed by a howling, stone-throwing mob of Germans.

Another clever artist M.P. was Lord Granby (now Duke of Rutland) who has an enormous collection of pictures of every conceivable kind, painted as far apart as Khartoum and Canada. Lord Granby began to study art as a very small boy in knickerbockers, his teacher being Mr. J. C. Schetky, marine painter in ordinary to Queen Victoria, who, he says "taught me to draw marine subjects almost exclusively, and took infinite pains to initiate me into the mysteries of rigging and nautical matters of the like nature." So industrious and gifted was the youthful student that some of his best canvases, notably "A Newfoundland Cod Boat Among Icebergs" and "A Fishing Boat," might well have made him a Royal Academician.

But, few as M.P. artists are, they are more numerous than legislative poets, the best of whom would scarcely call himself more than a stringer of rhymes. The late Sir George Trevelyan wrote many very clever and amusing verses, notably a fragment after the manner of an old Athenian comedy, entitled "The Ladies in Parliament"; while that late king of good fellows, Sir William Allan, was far fonder of writing verses in his beloved Scots dialect than he was of making speeches.

Mr. Timothy Sullivan, for ten years an Irish member, produced hundreds of poems, pleasant and musical, including a volume of prison poems, written in Tullamore jail. And was there ever a more amusing and maddest versifier than Sir Wilfrid Lawson, jugger in jingles and quips, whose last volume, "Cartoons in Rhyme and Line," gave infinite delight to his many friends, and was dedicated to "the best of wives from the worst of poets"?

Birds of Great Price.

The British working-man has done more than any other class to evolve and perfect the varied types of the canary. The largest specimens barely exceed one ounce in weight, yet one breeder obtained $150 and $250 respectively for pairs of birds matched for breeding which, in the latter case, assuming the birds to average one ounce each in weight, would amount to $125 per ounce for live canaries. Here one might think the climax was reached. Not so!

This sum had been exactly doubled previously by a Norwich firm of breeders and dealers who disposed of a remarkably fine-crested canary universally admitted the best of the breed ever produced up to that time, for $500. The same firm bought another notable crested canary for $400 from a workingmen fancier who had only been in the fancy a short time.

Perhaps one of the keenest speculations in bird-breeding was that of a fancier who bought a Lancashire hen canary for thirty shillings, and from her bred several hundreds of pounds' worth of high-class crests.

Advanced Past.

"Mike, didn't you have some trouble when you landed at New York?"

"Divil a bit, sor."

"You hadn't any password admitting you to the country, had you?"

"No, sor, but before I had been in the country tin days I had the grip."—Chicago Tribune.

Not Always Desirable.

"Shall we advertise for a man with experience?"

"Well, I don't know. The last man had so much experience that we couldn't teach him anything."—Philadelphia Press.

Great Interest In The Big Canadian Marathon

HAMILTON, MARCH 22.—Great interest is being taken in athletic circles over the grand Canadian Marathon, popularly known as the Spectator Marathon, to be held at Hamilton, on Wednesday, May 24th, 1911, under the auspices of the Hamilton Spectator. When the race was inaugurated in the spring of 1909, the athletic world was aroused by the announcement that the Spectator would send the winner of each year's marathon to England the following spring to compete in the English championship marathon, held in May each year, over the English Olympic course, under the auspices of the Polytechnic Harriers of London, for the Sporting Life Trophy, and this year the interest has been augmented by the announcement that any Spectator winner who wins in England will be sent by the Spectator to the following Olympic games, wherever they may be held. This means that if Mike Ryan, of the Irish American A. C. of New York, who won the big race a year ago, is successful in England this year he will go to Sweden next Spring for the 1912 Olympic marathon, while the winner of this year's Spectator race, if successful in England next spring, will also go to Sweden, with the result that the inducement to win in the old country is just as strong as it is to win in Hamilton.

The first runner to finish in the Spectator race will receive, in addition to the trip to England, a solid gold commemorative medal, while the huge Marathon Challenge trophy will become his possession for one year. The second and third men to finish will receive very elaborate silver cups, which will become their own possessions as well as silver commemorative medals. All the starters who finish within the time limit of three hours and thirty minutes will also receive commemorative medals. The prize list, including the trip to England, is valued at $1,000, the largest sum ever spent on amateur prizes for a long-distance race in Canada or the United States, making the Spectator race the long-distance classic of the American continent.

Entry blanks, rules and particulars of the race, in addition to maps of the course, which is 26 miles, 176 yards in length, and a chart of last year's race, can be secured from M. M. Robinson, Sporting Editor, The Spectator, Hamilton, Canada. Entries close on Saturday, May 13th.

Several Cases Heard In Police Court To-day

A man named Bert Preston has been served with a summons to appear in the County Court, before his Worship Magistrate Edmison, next Friday, March 24th, on a charge of peddling tea without a license. According to information received Preston has been peddling tea with a one-horse waggon, back in Smith and Douro, during February and March. The case will be tried on Friday.

Wm. Foster, who was charged with being drunk and disorderly in a public place, was remanded for a week to straighten up by Magistrate Dumble.

Michael Murphy, a blacklister, was charged with being drunk, thereby violating the liquor law. He pleaded guilty, and was remanded for a week to give him a chance to get the liquor out of his system. The Chief gave evidence to the effect that the accused was creating a disturbance at his (the accused's) home, and smashing things around, as is his usual custom when drunk. Murphy was put in the box, and stated that he was renovating the house and came across a bottle of liquor, which his wife had for sickness, and it looked good to him, and as a matter of fact he drunk it, with the result that he became drunk and got out on the street or somewhere, and secured more, how or where he was unable to say, as he could not remember anything that took place after drinking the bottle at the house. His Worship, Magistrate Dumble stated that he regretted to have to put on a fine of $10.00, or send him to gaol either, but for the present he would remand him for a week.

John Cook was charged with non-support of his wife and family. He pleaded not guilty, with the result that he was remanded for a week. County Constable Cochrane gave evidence to the effect that on Saturday night, he received a telephone message from a woman who lives near the Cook home, stating that the Cook family had no provisions. She said that she was going to visit the Cook family that evening and he told her that if they had no provisions that she could direct them to a certain store where he would leave an order for them to get so much stuff. This was accordingly done, and on Monday morning, they were out of provisions again. He stated that Mrs. Cook had the name of being a good housekeeper, and that the blame must therefore rest with the husband. His Worship remanded the case, warning the accused to get to work and support his family in the meantime.

AN UNKNOWN RACE.

Traditions of the Hohokam, Who Were the First Americans.

In the beginning the Hohokam dwelt in the land. They were the first Americans—before the pilgrim fathers, before the Spaniards, before the Indians. They were the unknown people who lived in the United States so long ago that their name is utterly lost. In the southwest old tribes of Indians like the Zunis and Navajos know nothing of them save by vaguest tradition. The Pimas and Papagos of southern Arizona, who occupy part of the land that once was theirs, know that another race possessed the country long ago. More they cannot tell. They and their fathers for hundreds of years have seen what we see—the scanty remnants of ancient villages. For the inhabitants of the villages they have no name except the Hohokam—that is, the "unknown."

The modern archaeologist describes the implements and pottery of the Hohokam. He cannot do much more, for their houses are laid low. Except in a few places, such as the ruins of Casa Grande, near the Gila river, the very walls have vanished. Casa Grande itself may be the work of a people later than the main body of the Hohokam. We can never know the whole story. Yet little by little we may learn its chief facts. Arizona and the adjacent regions are full of ruins unknown to scientists and even to the people who live within a mile of them. They are so nearly obliterated that there seems at first sight little to repay study.

Archaeology begins the task of reconstructing the past. Geography must finish it. Modern geography enables us to determine the mode of life which must prevail, especially among primitive peoples, under given conditions of physical environment. If we can correctly picture the geographic environment of the Hohokam we may learn much of the history of our earliest fellow countrymen.—Ellsworth Huntington in Harper's Magazine.

BOILERS AND BODIES.

Alike in Many Respects in the Treatment They Require.

The boiler has a certain temperature corresponding with the working pressure it is desirable to use and for which it was constructed.

The body has its normal temperature. Any variation above or below this means too high bodily pressure or a reduced vitality.

The fuel put into a boiler should be that which it is designed to burn. Differently constructed boilers will not economically burn the same fuel.

The body should receive the food it is best able to assimilate. Diverse constitutions require diverse nourishment.

A boiler should be fired with small, equal quantities of fuel at stated intervals; large masses irregularly fed are fatal to satisfactory results.

The body should be fed similarly; overloading the stomach produces imperfect digestion and deranges our physical systems.

Boilers are insulated by brickwork, cellular asbestos, etc., to prevent loss of heat by radiation.

Cellular tissue and fat aid in maintaining our normal temperature.

Some boilers well designed produce good results with a small fuel consumption; others are less economical. The more perfect the boiler the less the consumption of fuel.

Some individuals are so constituted that they exist on small quantities of food; others in the same circumstances consume much more. The more perfect the physical development the less the food required.

The above data, intelligently used, govern good boiler practice.

Why the Trunk Was Slow.

"I had a most delightful time last summer," gushed Miss Noling, "but I was dreadfully inconvenienced at Loughandville waiting for my trunk. I went there by the N. T. C. so as to take advantage of the scenery along the route, but I had to send my trunk on the slow B. C. and E."

"But why couldn't you have sent your trunk on the N. T. C., too?" murmured Miss Sterling.

"Because," explained Miss Noling, glad to show her superior knowledge, "I learned from a friend of mine that the N. T. C. is not a trunk line."—Brooklyn Life.

A Ready Sealer.

For traveling carry a candle with you, and when about to make a jump, as the theatrical people say, seal your bottles with it. It takes only a minute to light the candle, turn it upside down and let the rallow drip around the cork of a bottle, but it insures perfect carriage of the fluid content.—Good Housekeeping.

WHEN THEY HOWL.

Schoolboy Screamers That Have Tickled the Teachers.

Considering the number of facts that teachers endeavor to cram in to the youthful mind under the heading of Education, it is not surprising that ideas only half grasped and wholly confused should frequently end to amusing "howlers" that are well worth collecting.

For instance, one boy recently stated that Shakespeare founded "As You Like It" on a book previously written by Sir Oliver Lodge; while another put it down that Nelson was killed by a midget man, and buried in the cockpit of St. Paul's Cathedral. The confusion existing in the mind of the boy who wrote the latter sentence must have been pitiable.

But some howlers are a natural genius coming to the schoolboy's aid in his attempt to repeat a lesson but half learned. For instance, a boy asked to complete the proverb "Where ignorance is bliss . . . ." placed a comma after the word "is," and added "is not," making the proverb read "Where ignorance is, bliss is not."

There is a touch of genius, too, in the definition of an angle as a "triangle with only two sides," and also in "Gravitation is that which, if there were none, we should all fly away."

And surely there is a depth of philosophy in "Women's suffrage is the state of suffering to which they were born."

When a boy wrote "In India a man out of a cask may not marry a woman out of another cask, it would be difficult to say whether he had any real conception of the caste laws or not. The one who stated that "Lord Raleigh was the first man to see the Invisible Armada," however, probably just made a spelling blunder. And, of course, a great many amusing howlers are to be traced to this.

Among the best howlers that have arisen out of a confusion of words are: The Test Act of 1673 was passed to keep Roman Catholics out of public houses; James I. died from argue; a vacuum is a large empty space where the Pope lives; Martin Harvey invented the circulation of the blood; the teeth of animals are to domesticate their food; Louis XVI. was galvanized during the French Revolution.

In the English Courts.

The missing defendant at the Swansea Quarter Sessions who was found among the grand jury, and explained that he thought they were all prisoners, reminds one of the late Judge Morris.

He once said to the jury, "Gentlemen, take your proper places." "I give you my word," Lord Morris used to add, "they all walked into the dock."

A witness who gave his evidence very badly explained that he was unaccustomed to his position; he was more at home there, pointing to the dock.

Lord Morris was reputed the wittiest judge on the bench, and as a matter of course every witty story, especially if Irish, was attributed to him, just as every piece of judicial nonsense used to be fathered on Mr Justice Maule and examples of extraordinary politeness on Mr. Justice Graham.

"Surely," Lord Morris said, in despair, "you want to hear of the rint breaker of Ballyskibereen?"

"No, my lord," answered the incorrigible one; "that's the lie I told you myself yesterday."

In the Blood.

Willis—Are those Kentucky horses you bought scared of autos? Gillis—No, indeed. They never notice a train, either, but I can't get them used to a sprinkling cart to save my life!—Puck.

Getting the Particulars.

Nellie—Hasn't Mr. Fotswalley proposed yet? Nora—No, but he has gone as far as to ask what time we have breakfast and whether mother is a good cook.—Exchange.

BANQUET IN HONOUR OF POPULAR MEMBER

went on to say that Mr. Collier had been a first-class citizen and took a marked interest in public affairs, and he was sure that he would be greatly missed from the Charlotte street congregation, as would Mrs. Collier from the Society.

Rev. Mr. Henderson voiced these sentiments and assured those present that both Mr. and Mrs. Collier had been active church workers and that it would be hard to fill their places, and he expressed his own personal regrets at losing so worthy and beloved members of his congregation.

Mr. Henry also expressed his regrets at the loss of so active a member of the Society, also for the loss of a friend so esteemed, and wished him every success in his undertakings in Toronto.

Dr. Marsh stated that when the organization was first formed in this city, Mr. Collier was a leader in the work, and had continued to be a most useful and active member. He could not find words to express his regret, but could only endorse the sentiments of the former speakers, wish him every success and hope that if he would not return to be a citizen, that he would at least come back and see them occasionally, and remain a member of the Peterborough branch of the Society.

Mr. Collier made a few remarks in return for these expressions of regret and well wishes, in which he thanked them for the kindness they had shown and the sentiments expressed. He said that they had stood nobly behind him, during his term as President, and their assistance lifted a great deal of the responsibility off his mind. He again thanked them heartily for the kind words and gave them to understand that it would be with great pleasure that he would remain a member of the Peterborough branch, as requested.

MEETINGS IN TABERNACLE

On Monday evening Rev. Mr. Ruhl, missionary from Thibet, spoke on the changed conditions in China, the friendly attitude of the people toward the missionaries, how people everywhere are ready and many are eager, to hear the Gospel, and missionaries may now not only travel without fear of being molested, but are cordially welcomed to dwell among the people. The doors are open everywhere, and unless we speedily do our utmost to evangelize this people, the unparalleled opportunity will soon be lost forever. While the opportunities are great, there are also many hindrances ot the spread of the Gospel, the greatest of these being not from the Chinese themselves, but from the broadcast spreading by Europeans of almost every false doctrine, such as Atheism, Spiritualism, Christian Science, Higher Criticism, etc., and, above all, the indifference and neglect of the true Church of Christ in the home lands to do her duty.

Last evening Dr. Zimmerman gave a short, searching message on "Barnabas was a good man, full of the Holy Spirit and Faith". No higher testimony could be given to any man than this, such a life will be used of God still, and the same results will follow as are recorded of the life of Barnabas, "much people was added unto the Lord."

To-night Dr. Zimmerman will speak again, and Mr. Ruhl will also give a talk on Mission Work in North West China.

A LUMBERMAN'S BACKACHE

"The pains in my back were dreadful and the kidneys failed to do their work," writes Mr. L. J. McKinnon, Orillia, Ont. "Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills proved to be exactly what I needed brought relief promptly and cured me. Sorry I wasted time experimenting with other medicines.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

We would again remind all interested in Association work of the addresses to be given by Miss Macdonald of Tokio, on Sabbath afternoon, at 4.15 in St. Paul's church, and Tuesday afternoon at 3.30 in the Y. W. C. A. parlours. Miss Macdonald has spent six busy years in Japan, and has, through her rare power as a leader and organizer, accomplished more for the educated girls of Japan than possibly any other one woman.

Miss Macdonald is a good speaker and we trust a large number will avail themselves of this opportunity of hearing this gifted young woman.

We would also ask our friends to reserve Friday evening, March 31, for the stereopticon lecture on our great north land, to be given by Dr. Marsh in the Gymnasium Hall.

POST CARD COLUMN

Dear Sir,—The pedestrians on Water street would consider it a favour if the residents who don't clean off their sidewalks would do so. Is there not some by-law to compel citizens to keep their sidewalks passable? Would you not think that a minister of the gospel should set a better example? If he did so his neighbours might follow suit.

Heffernan To Play With All Stars In Cleveland

Frank Heffernan must have made a hit with the Toronto critics when he played for the junior All Stars against Kingston last week. To-day the sturdy defence man of the Grillers received a telegram from E. J. Livingstone, of Toronto, asking him to play for an All Star Toronto senior team in Cleveland on Saturday night of this week and the local youngster has wired his acceptance of the offer. The team will leave Toronto for Cleveland to-morrow night and will return on Sunday. To start in the Mercantile League, play junior and intermediate O.H.A. and City League hockey, and to be selected on an All Star junior team and on a stellar aggregation to play an International match all in two years, is a pretty good record for an eighteen year old.

Orange Lodge Conferred A Number Of Degrees

A large representation of members of the Orange Order assembled last night in the Orange Hall, Downer's Corners, for the purpose of advancing the work of the Order, there being present besides their own members a deputation from 1175 and also Nos. 50 and 457 brethren of the city district. The different degrees were put on in a very satisfactory manner by those in charge. During the meeting there were two candidates advanced to the purple degree, three to the blue degree and five took the royal arch purple degree. The secret work was put on by No. 50 degree team in a manner which reflected much credit on themselves and also on the order. After the heavy night's labour was ended, the members of No. 321 entertained the brethren to a well prepared luncheon, and the singing of "Should Auld Acquaintance be Forgot" brought to a close one of the most encouraging and instructive meetings in the history of the lodge.

500 Skaters At Opening Of The Brock Street Rink

The popularity of roller skating as a pastime was strikingly illustrated last night when the Brock street roller rink was opened for the season. In spite of the thoroughly unfavourable weather conditions there was an enormous crowd present, five hundred pair of skates being in use during the evening and this number would have undoubtedly been increased had the weather conditions been more propitious. The floor was in excellent shape, remarkably so when it is pointed out that the ice was only taken out ten days ago. Mr. Pitcher and his staff have been working overtime to get the arena ready for the opening and many complimentary remarks were passed concerning the floor by last night's crowd.

Annual Meeting Of All Saints' Women's Auxiliary

The Women's Auxiliary of All Saints' church held its nineteenth annual meeting yesterday afternoon in the Parish Hall. It was well attended by members and friends, and it is noteworthy that some present had been members since its inception.

The chair was occupied by the President, Mrs. T. H. Hooper, who conducted the devotional exercises.

Reports were read by Mrs. W. H. Wilson, the Recording Secretary; Mrs. Buller, the P. M. C. Secretary; Miss May Hopkins, for the Junior Girls' Auxiliary, and Mrs. A. Gilbert, the Treasurer. The past year has, without doubt, been in many ways the banner year of the Auxiliary. The usual missionary work was kept up and considerable help given towards furnishing the new church.

Miss Chamberlen, president for many years after its organization, and now Honorary President, was present and spoke words of encouragement.

Hon. President—Miss Chamberlen.
President—Mrs. T. H. Hooper.
1st Vice Pres.—Mrs. Hopkins.
2nd Vice Pres.—Mrs. A. Taylor.
Rec.-Sec.—Mrs. Curry.
Cor.-Sec.—Mrs. Latimer.
Treasurer—Mrs. Gilbert.
P.M.C. Treasurer—Mrs. Buller.
Babies' Branch—Mrs. McCulloch and Mrs. Alexander.
Jr. Girls' Auxiliary—Mrs. Blois and Miss May Hopkins.
Executive Committee—Mrs. W. H. Wilson, Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Irwin.
Dorcas Committee — Mrs. Best, Mrs. Cooney and Mrs. J. G. Scott.

In a short address Mrs. Hooper thanked the members for their co-operation in the past, and spoke of greater work to be done in the future. Feeling reference was made to the break in the ranks last July by the death of Mrs. Evans, who was one of the oldest members of the Auxiliary.

? The Great Question ?
—OF—Spring Attire

WHAT IS going to be worn and what particular style or shade is most suitable, are two questions that confront about every woman at this season of the year. A visit to our store will very easily solve the problem for you.

Individual Suitings

Here is an opportunity for the woman who wants "something exclusive". There are no two patterns alike. There are checks, stripes and diagonal weaves in grey, cream, with black stripe, black, blue, cream, brown, etc., with the favorite pin stripe, the new homespun effects, and many others which space will not permit to mention. These are all of English, Scotch and French manufacture, and represent the best display we have ever shown.

French Silk Foulards

The preference for foulards this spring makes the mention of our complete stock unusually interesting. In black, green, navy, kings blue, etc., we are showing a splendid array in spot, diamond, ring and two tone effects. These are all shower proof.

New Laces & Trimmings

Laces are extensively used this season to garnish the new gowns and we are well prepared for the great demand. Every fashionable trimming is here in every desirable shade and color.

New Motor Veils

Imported direct from Paris, France; colors, white, black, cream, champagne, grey, pink, sky and navy. Ask to see them; they are very pretty.

Custom Tailoring & DRESSMAKING DEPT.

We are pleased to say this department has earned the well deserved praise of all its patrons. To avoid disappointment, orders should be sent in without delay.

Spring Millinery Exposition

This has proved more than any mere Fashion Display as evidenced by the great number of women who have already found and claimed the distinctive model that seems made for them alone. Shapes are varied as woman's needs. Hats of dainty tailored charms with just the right simplicity for the walking suit, side by side with the picture hat, makes a delightful study; each striking some new note and embodying some new ideal of elegance. We extend an invitation to all to come and see the season's latest productions.

POST CARD COLUMN

Editor Examiner.

Sir,—Please allow me to give your many Christian readers a very interesting item from "Northfield Echoes" giving the kind of work done by a certain brand of so-called 'scholarship,' for the world of to-day. "The church of Iceland is troubled by "liberal" intrigues. Harold Mulen, professor in the theological seminary in Reykivik, in making a new translation of the Bible arbitrarily, (threw out the doctrine of the Virgin birth of Christ by substituting the word Feu (married woman) for Jomfeu (virgin.) As a result the whole edition has been suppressed, and largely attended meetings have been held to protest against the underhand interpolation." All honour to the Christians of Iceland. This is one of the doctrines of Christianity that Ingersoll so blasphemously railed against. When one reads the teaching and hears the preaching of some of our modern higher critics (?) one cannot help exclaiming, Oh, shades of Voltaire and Paine, ye ghosts of Bradlaugh and Ingersoll, have ye come back from the abyss to torment us.

If the people of Iceland had reason to rise in indignation over the cutting out of one word from the Bible, what are the people of Canada going to do when whole books, such as Genesis and Isaiah and others are so mutilated that if we believe the critics, we cannot believe one word in these books? When whole books, such as Daniel, Esther and Jonah are destroyed entirely for these books of the sacred canon are labelled "Religious Romance" or imaginary tales, by these false apostles.

The time is near when the people get aroused that public indignation meetings will be held to protest against these destroyers of the faith. Already public men are becoming alarmed for the welfare of the children and like heroes of the faith are not afraid to let their voices be heard, both in private and in public utterances, against these false teachers.

The Rev. R. R. French, writing against this higher criticism (?) in Montreal Witness, says: "Beware, men, how ye handle the word of God. Ye are making a plague a thousand times worse than the black death. Already it is among our people."

Yours,
JNO. CARLISLE.

The Cause Of Colds

Good Advice Regarding the Prevention of Coughs and Colds

If people would only fortify and strengthen the system, the majority of cases of coughs, colds and pneumonia might be avoided. These troubles are frequently due to weakness, which produces a catarrhal condition of the mucous membrane, which is an internal skin of the body. When this skin is weakened it becomes easily infected with germs which cause many of the diseases to which flesh is heir. Healthy mucous membranes are essential safeguards of the body's general health.

We have a remedy which we honestly believe to be unsurpassed in excellence for the prevention of coughs colds and all catarrhal conditions. It is the prescription of a famous physician, who has an enviable reputation of thirty years of cures gained through the use of this formula. We promise to make no charge for the medicine should it fail to do as we claim. We urge everybody who has need of such a medicine to try Rexall Mucu-Tone

It stands to reason that we could not afford to make such statements and give our own personal guarantee to this remedy if we were not prepared to prove the reasonableness of our claim in every particular, and we see no reason why any one should hesitate to accept our offer and try it. We have two sizes of Rexall Mucu-Tone prices 50 cents and $1.00. Sometimes a 50-cent bottle is sufficient to give marked relief. As a general thing the most chronic case is relieved with an average of three large bottles. You can obtain Rexall Remedies in Peterboro' only at our store,—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury, corner George and Charlotte streets.

CONDITIONS OF THE BIG ALFALFA CONTEST

The details of the alfalfa competition which has been especially arranged for the farmers of Peterborough County and which was announced in these columns last week are set forth in the following:

1. Competitors are to enter not less than three acres of alfalfa to be seeded in the spring.

2. Competitors may have fields of alfalfa larger than three acres if they wish and any three acres they select will be considered by the judge.

3. The alfalfa field will be judged twice before the prizes are finally awarded, 1st on or about the first of October, and the following year on or about the first of June.

4. Competitors will be free to follow their own methods of cultivation, selection of soil or fields, but Farm and Dairy will suggest through its experts in a special series of articles the most approved practice, which has given the best success in growing alfalfa.

5. It is recommended that 20 lbs. of the best alfalfa seed obtainable be sown to the acre.

6. In order to ensure the success of the alfalfa crop it must be inoculated with suitable bacteria. This bacteria, or nitro-culture, as it is called, may be secured from the O. A. College, Guelph, at 25 cents for enough to treat one bushel of seed weighing 30 lbs. This and other methods of alfalfa inoculation will be fully explained through the columns of Farm and Dairy.

7. An expert from the Farm and Dairy staff will supply any information required by competitors as to their alfalfa fields. In addition to the special series of articles to be published in Farm and Dairy special instruction when requested will be given by letter, or if occasion requires, a personal visit of an alfalfa expert will be made to a competitor's farm provided the competitor will drive for him and bear travelling expenses.

8. There will be no entry fee.

9. Five valuable prizes (silver cups) will be awarded to the winning competitors scoring the highest number of points.

Alfalfa is a money crop that Peterborough County farmers can grow. It is being grown on farms in this county where it yields from four to five tons per acre. Alfalfa hay is worth per ton for feeding purposes practically as much as wheat bran Since the crop may be cut for several or many years from the one seeding, it is worth while for every farmer to grow it. In fact we do not see how any farmer can afford not to grow it. We would advise our farmer readers to investigate fully the merits of this crop and to take advantage of the information they will gain through entering the Peterborough County Alfalfa competition.

ASTRONOMICAL SOCIETY HOLDS SPLENDID MEETING

A meeting of the Royal Astronomical Society, Peterborough Centre, was held last night in the Collegiate physics room, Mr. H. B. Collier President presiding. Two new members were elected, their names being Mr. S. J. Keyes, B. A., of the Normal school, and Mr. J. A. Seger, of 483 Bolivar street. After the election of the members and the routine business was transacted, Mr. T. A. S. Hay was called upon to give a lesson on "How the distance to heavenly bodies is measured." The lesson was very elementary, and very helpful to those ignorant on the subject. Rev. Dr. Marsh was called upon to give an address explaining astronomical terms which are frequently met with in text books, and in general work. The terms which he defined were the following: Planet, Star, Constellation, Disc, Rotation, Axis, Orbit, Equator (both Terrestial and Celestial), Declination, Latitude, Longitude, Horizon, (Sensible, Artificial and real Horizon), Nadir, Zenith, Ecliptic and Zodiac, Apogee, Perigee and Radius Vector.

After this, Dr. Winchester, of Knox church, Toronto, made a few complimentary remarks in which he stated that the Society was progressing admirably. Reports were also read from Mr T. A. S. Hay, who is now using the Stratton telescope. Mr. Hay's report showed a careful use of the instrument. Mr. T. C. Elliot reported the use of the Toronto telescope, giving a very nice account of his examination of Saturn, double size, also the Moon.

At the close of this very profitable meeting, the members of the Council gathered at Hooper's Palm Parlours, where they held a farewell reception to their departing President, Mr. H. B. Collier, a report of which appears elsewhere in the columns of this paper.

INDEPENDENT TIRE COMPANY BY-LAW PASSED BY THE CITY COUNCIL TO-DAY

New Concern Agrees to Have 40 Men at Work Within Thirty Days After Factory is Completed---Will Pay Back Loan at 4½ Per Cent.

NEGOTIATIONS CONCLUDED

The city council at a special meeting held at noon to-day passed the by-law confirming the agreement with the Independent Tire Company, on its first two readings and the ratepayers will have an opportunity of passing opinion on the measure on Tuesday, April 25th, when it is to be submitted to the people.

Mr. H. Hastings, the promoter of the company, had a conference with the council at a meeting last night at which the points over which there had been some difference of opinion were adjusted satisfactorily and without any difficulty. The chief point was that the agreement as first drawn up did not bind the company as to the number of operatives they should have in their employ when the second half of the city's loan was made. The council felt that a certain number should be at work at the time the last half of the loan was paid.

Mayor Morrow explained this to Mr. Hastings when the matter was introduced last night.

"We would not want to tie ourselves down to a certain number of men, explained the promoter of the new concern. "It is difficult for a few weeks after opening a new factory to get your working staff up as high as you will have it later on. We are figuring on 60 or 70 hands at the start but it might be two months before we would have that many at work, and we desire to use your loan to help pay for the machinery."

"How many men would you say you would have employed at the end of thirty days after your factory was opened?" inquired the Mayor.

"That is hard to say," was the reply. "Suppose we make it forty."

"How long would it be before you were employing one hundred?" was the Mayor's next question.

"Our agreement is that we are to be employing one hundred at the end of the first year," replied Mr. Hastings. "You can't put your men in the first two or three days. We want to employ desirable men and this will take some time. Of course the more men we are employing the more work we're turning out and I expect we will have three hundred at work in three years. We are going to erect a three storey building 100 ft. by 250 capable of employing 400 men."

"Suppose we pay you the second half of the loan in proportion as you increase the number of employees," suggested the Mayor.

Mr. Hastings suggested that the city loan $10,000 at the end of thirty days provided the company had forty men at work, and if at the end of sixty extra days there were sixty men employed, the company then receive the other $10,000. This suggestion met with unqualified approval.

In reply to a question from the Mayor, Mr. Hastings said that the company would guarantee to have paid up stock of $150,000 when the plant was completed.

Ald. Morgan pointed out that there would undoubtedly be objection from some of the ratepayers on account of the fact that while the city had to pay 4½ per cent. on the money they would have to borrow, the company was only paying back the loan at the rate of 3 per cent.

Ald. Brown agreed with this view, stating that it would be a considerable help in getting the measure passed if the company was to pay the same interest as the city.

Mr. Hastings agreed that the company should pay back the loan at the rate of 4 1-2 per cent. instead of 3 per cent. as originally stipulated.

Representatives of the Citizens' Committee, with Mr. D. W. Dumble as spokesman, waited upon the Council, and explained that they intended to assist in every way possible in getting the vote out. They asked, however, that the date upon which the by-law was to be submitted be decided upon

There was some discussion on this point. It was felt that Saturday was not a good day, and some of those present favoured Monday on account of the fact that the large number of commercial travellers residing in Peterborough and who are home on Sundays, would be able to vote.

It was pointed out, however, that if the vote was taken Tuesday the final organization could be arranged on Monday night and it was decided on this account to have the by-law submitted on Tuesday, April 25th.

CITIZEN COMMITTEES TO HELP PASS BY-LAW

Strong Committees Formed in the Different Wards Who Will Help to Get Out Vote for the Independent Tire Company Measure---No Opposition to the Proposition in Sight.

A meeting of representative citizens who are anxious to have passed the by-law to assist the Independent Tire Company was held last night in the office of Mr. Duggan, the Industrial Commissioner. The greatest possible enthusiasm was shown and judging from the spirit of the meeting there will be no opposition to the measure. The only difficulty will be to get the necessary vote out and this the Citizens' committee will undertake to do. The following committee of which the first named in each is chairman, have been asked to lend their assistance, and meetings will be held in each ward, called by the chairman at an early date, to complete arrangements for looking after the matter:

South Ward—Henry Winch, Clem. Gordon, J. McCann, R. C. Brand, E. G. Patterson, Capt. Carson, John Digman, W. C. Ackerman, Frank Matthews, N. LePlante, John LePlante, Alex. Gordon, F. C. Dobbin, J. Wilson, M. Mowry, W. Butler, George Duncan.

West Ward. — Alex. Elliot, Peter Campbell, R. Neill, W. H. Denham, Robt. Hicks, A. H. Stratton, Dr Morrison, D. O'Connell, G. W. Hatton, A. McFarlane, Jos. J. Duffis, James Brown, James Edgar, H. Denne.

Centre Ward—R. G. Kingan, H. Rush, Henry Phelan, F. D. Kerr, Rolly Denne, John Crane, Thos. Hooper, W. H. Bradburn, Jos. Metherall.

North Ward.—D. W. Dumble, Frank Dobbin, V. Eastwood, James Kendry, R. J. Hartley, W. H. Hill, W. J. Thompson, H. C. Stabler, G. W. Green, D. H. Kerneghan, Jas. G. Graham.

MUCH RECRUITING FOR UNITED STATES FORCES

Special to The Examiner.

CHICAGO, MARCH 23—Ten thousand large hand bills and numerous posters are being distributed throughout the city to-day with large "Men Wanted!" legends, inviting recruits for the United States infantry. This special activity is being taken on instructions from the Adjutant General, who telegraphed yesterday to enlist every man possible. Some Canadians, who hope to see active service in Mexico, enlisted this morning.

SCENES OF DISORDER IN PRIVATE BILLS COMMITTE

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, MARCH 23.—Scenes of disorder and great excitement marked the proceedings in the private bills committee of the Commons today in the right over Conmee's bills to amend the act respecting the Ontario and Minnesota Power Co. In the course of the sitting Mr. Conmee called E. W. Backus who promoted the company "a liar—a complete liar." He wouldn't withdraw this, but afterwards apologized to the committee. The controversy arose out of the old time dispute between the company and the town of Ft. Frances as to the provisions of electrical power for Canadian users. The preamble of the bill finally carried by 23 to 12 on a party vote.

BLOCK CONTEST

At the Brock Street Roller Rink To-morrow Night

The first extra attraction of the season at the Brock street Roller rink, which was successfully opened on Tuesday night, will be on Friday night when a grand block contest will be held, the winner of which will receive $5.00 as a prize. There is always great interest taken in the block contests and Mr. Pitcher expects tomorrow night's competiton to be one of the most successful ever held here. The floor is rapidly approaching perfection and some of last night's skaters were heard to remark that it is better now than ever before.

A NEW BRANCH

Messrs. Yeates Bros. Will Open a Business in Collingwood

The enterprise of Messrs. Yeates Bros., the owners of the cigar store, shooting gallery, pool room and shoe shine parlours on George street, is illustrated by the fact that they have arranged to open a branch of their business in Collingwood, Ont. Mr. Louis Yeates, who has been in Collingwood for the past few days, arranging for their location there, returned last night. He was successful in securing a commodious and centrally situated building, and the branch will be opened the first of next month. Mr. George Yeates going up to take charge of the new business.

"The Woman In The Case"

Cammorist Suspect Denies All Charges Against Her

Examiner Special:

TERRO, ITALY, MARCH 23.—Maria Standard, the woman in the Cammora case, and the most picturesque figure in it, was a witness in the case this morning. She is a beautiful creature and is said to have been the close friend of the lowest criminals, as well as the high officials. At her house, says the prosecution, most of the murders and robberies of the clan were planned, and there they washed their hands after their butcheries and secured protection. She emphatically denied all the charges and said the evidence against her was manufactured.

MANY POLICE COURT SENTENCES

Have done much to make "30-days" familiar, but the term really owes its notoriety, and certainly its popularity to the Moon College, 282-286 Yonge street, Toronto. Their bonafide offer of Return Fare Paid and absolutely free tuition, if unable to verify every claim and qualify As. first-class, strictly high-grade stenographers within 30 days, by their wonderful 30-day Syl-la-bic Method, has, indeed, made the term "30-days" famous.

THURSDAY, MARCH 23, 1911

NO PANIC HERE.

Mackenzie & Mann yesterday awarded contracts for the construction and grading of 900 miles of new Canadian Northern Railway in the Canadian West. The amount of money involved is 8 million dollars. This does not look much as if the greatest individual railway builders in the world had any fear that reciprocity will divert trade north and south, and destroy railway traffic east and west. Hon. Clifford Sifton, big as he is as an authority, may declare, for personal, or political, or other purposes, that Canadian railways will be ruined by reciprocity. He shows his faith by his words. Mackenzie and Mann, on the contrary, show their faith by their works—by spending their good, hard money. Wind is hardly as substantial a foundation of honest opinion as spending money.

METHODICAL GUELPH.

Guelph City Council seems to do things systematically. At the last meeting of the City Council the standing committees presented their reports, detailing the amounts to be expended in the several departments. The report of the Board of Works contained details of the distribution of an estimated expenditure of $12,480. The names of sixty-one streets are given and opposite them is set the amount to be expended on each. And then come stated sums for specific services like street cleaning, shovelling snow, and street drains, for which $1,000 is appropriated. It would seem from this that Guelph undertakes her street work on some system, thinks over the subject and provides for an expenditure of a fixed amount for each street and service. They seem to know what they are going to do, how they are going to do it, and to settle beforehand what expenditure is to be made upon each street and street service.

MIXED AGAIN.

Some partizan-mad persons are strongly declaring that reciprocity means annexation, and that that is the expectation and deliberate aim of the United States, and they also pretend to rejoice over the fact that the United States Congress is hostile to reciprocity and will not ratify the agreement. All of which is nonsense. If the United States is anxious for annexation, and reciprocity is a step to it, they would be howling for the ratification of the agreement. If the free admission of Canadian farm products into the United States from Canada would of a certainty, as the fog-horn patriots assert, lead to annexation, the thing can be assured without Canada moving a hand. If Uncle Sam is as saxons to "gobble up" Canada as a few mischief-mongers in Canada say he is, all he needs to do is to give free entry to the products of Canadian farms, and the thing is done. Those who talk such rank nonsense as we hear talked in the intrests of opposition to reciprocity, should reflect that there is a limit to the gullibility of the people, who are not such fools as some others take them to be.

"PLAY FAIR."

The opponents of reciprocity seem willing to go to any length to bolster up their bogey, "annexation." The Mail and Empire yesterday heads an article, "Fielding's bias for Annexation." At the Montreal meeting of the special interests, as against the public nterests, Senator Casgrain laid a terrible indictment against Hon. Mr. Fielding. It appears that about twenty-five years ago, in connection with the discussion of provincial subsidies, Mr. Fielding insisted on resetving to Nova Scotia, the right, if, what it considered justice, was not done, to retire from Confederation. Was that annexation? It is well known that the Maritime pprovinces were at first hostile to conferation; and if Sir John Macdonald and the other fathers of confederation, had submitted the question of confederation—asked a "mandate"—these provinces would have voted against it. Newfoundland steadily refuses to become a member of the confederation; and Newfoundland is not by any means, in afvour of annexation. Parliament and public men acted on their responsibility, brought the Maritime provinces into confederation and did better for these provinces than they would have done for themwhich goes out of its way and basely and falsely accuses a great Canadian statesman, think it should recall, the traitorous sentiment it expressed a few years ago—when it said in answer to the argument that "protection" would imperil British Connection — "so much the worse for British connection?" Did that place the Mail in the rank of those who desired annexation? "Play fair" is the manly way. No good cause is advanced by withholding the bonnie principle of British fair play.

SNOW PLOWING?

Yesterday a post-card correspondent called attention to the neglect by residents of Water street to clear the walks of slush and snow, and asked if there is not some by-law to compel citizens to keep their sidewalks passable? There is a by-law governing the clearing of walks in the business section, in the fire limits, but not where most needed,—on the streets leading from all parts of the town to the business section—and that by-law is not enforced. This complaint calls attention to the unsatisfactory manner in which the clearing of our walks in winter is dealt with. The snow-plough, or, rather, snow drag, is a failure so far as effective work is concerned. The drivers of the snow ploughs seem to have no idea or interest in doing the work properly. They allow the plough to wobble and take its own course. On some walks—those outside the tree line, especially, the plough is allowed to zig-zag, so that in many places only two or three feet of the walk is cleared. This leaves a dangerous slope outward that is a peril to pedestrians, and on some streets, there are only two or three feet of sloping surface to walk upon. In addition to this there is the damage done to fences alongside pavements. The driver of the plough seems to let his horse take its own crooked way, and when the animal is not drawing the plough almost clear of the pavement on the outside, he goes so close to the fence that the end of the whiffletree scarifies and tears palings off the fence. There are fences in some parts of the city where the owner will not only have to pay his share of the cost of snow plowing, but have to put the lacerated fence in decent condition. The carlessness of the snow plowers, not only results in work that leaves the streets in a worse condition than they would be without his attention, but actually does damage to the propertt of citizens.

Whether this can be remedied or not is for the street authorities to say; but it cannot be denied that our present system of clearing our walks of snow is very unsatisfactory, if not, practically useless, it is extremely successful as a failure. Why not adopt, or at least make a test, of the system used in towns like Port Hope and Cobourg, where the citizens are required to keep their walks clean, each in front of his own premises. If this is not done the Corporation does the work and charges the cost against the property. Besides, where persons could not, or do not wish, to clear their own walks, they will give employment to many that are idle, and, perhaps, owing to unemployment, are a charge upon the city charity account. Many men could take contracts with several citizens to keep walks clear of snow, as they take contracts to care for lawns. There are thousands of citizens who would prefer to clean their own walks and save that much taxation, and others who have to, or wish to, pay, might not pay more than their share of taxes. If they do have to pay a trifle more they would have the satisfaction of getting value for their money in the shape of clean walks, whereas, under the present mode, the money paid the contractors, is largely wasted, if ineffective and useless work and damage to property are considered.

NOT A SIGN OF COURAGE.

One of the many objections urged by political, or personal, or corporation interests against the reciprocity agreement is that Parliament has had no mandate—no specific order from the people, and, consequently, no authority to deal with the subject. This country is governed constitutionally, and there is no authority in the British or Canadian constitution to refer every little matter to a vote of the people. The people elect representatives, supposed to be specially qualified, to do the business of the country, in like manner as a citizen employs a lawyer to look after business which he has not the special, the legal, knowledge to do himself. The Opposition in Parliament are seeking to evade responsibility on the question of reciprocity by referring to the people a matter whose dealing with by them might "put them in a box," as a lawyer who comes to a knotty point in a case, would say to his client: "Here, you must decide this yourself; I do not like to take the responsibility." Sir John Macdonald was a constitutional statesman and had strong views on the responsibility of Parliament. Hon. A. G. MacKay, speaking in the Legislature on the point of Parliament having no "mandate" from the people, pertinently pointed out that the great Act of Confederation, a revolutionary measure in respect of our status, was brought about without a mandate from the people. Speaking on this point forty years ago, Sir John Macdonald said:

"A new parliament can do nothing more than we can do. If we represent the people of Canada, then in the words of the Constitutional Act, "we are here to pass laws for the best welfare and good government of the country." But, if we do not represent the people of Canada, if we declare so by passing this resolution, then what great criminals have we been in the past. If we do not represent them, if we have no right to represent them, then we have no power to pass one single bill and declare it to be law even though it be a bill to establish a sawmill. If we do not represent the people of Canada we have no right to be here. But if we do represent them, we have a right to go to the foot of the throne and declare that we believe it to be for the best welfare and good government of the people of Canada to form these provinces into one Empire.

Sir John Macdonald was the greatest leader the Conservative party ever had, or, according to prospects, ever will have. He was a staunch Briton —"a British subject I was born, a British subject I will die." He believed in the good British constitutional principle, the responsibility of Parliament. His followers, in these degenerate days, do small honour to his memory in flying in the face of his contentions. But the Conservative Opposition in Parliament are ready to do almost anything to avoid a vote on the reciprocity agreement. They know that in voting against it they would be antagonising the growing mass of public sentiment, and they feel that in voting for it they would be antagonizing the special interests that are hostile to the general interests. The cries, "no mandate," "consult the people," "etc.," are certainly no sign of courage.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The President of the Oliver Chilled Steel Plow Company, now erecting a two-million-dollar plant in Hamilton, declares that the work will go on, notwithstanding the reciprocity agreement. Cold, almost frigid, disregard for political exigencies, this, remarks the Ottawa Citizen (Conservative).

Sir James Whitney is quite willing to make a trial trip of the Act to tax bar receipts, but he doesn't want to give the farmers a chance to try reciprocity.

CANADA'S DESTINY.

Dr. Grenfell, the well known Labrador missionary, also well known in Peterborough, sends the following letter to the British Weekly of the 9th inst., which shows the high estimate in which he hold Canada's destiny and his commendation of the reciprocity agreement:

To the Editor of the British Weekly

Sir,—The only puzzle to men who know Canada is, that the lack of appreciation of the great future before her should have existed so long. In the face of man's clearly demonstrated capacity to adapt animals and plants to almost any environment, there can surely be no longer any doubt of the future before her vast mileage.

Her proposed reciprocity with the United States means nothing to me, but the most natural proceeding, and exactly what any man would commend. To construe it into an unfriendly act to Great Britain seems to me suicidal, seeing we can't prevent it, and a display of selfishness as if we thought she exists entirely for our behalf.

The intense recognition of their own nationalism is one of the first things that strikes an Englishman in Canada. It alone without the sincerest protestations of love for the Mother Country, which one hears everywhere from the Atlantic to the Pacific, leaves no anxiety in a man's mind, who knows Canada. It behooves us to look closer at what are the real and indissoluble bonds—national or international. For stronger than those of colour, race and even family, to those who have faith in man's highest of all destinies, are the bonds of the same ideals, and the same faith and hope.

In my many journeys through Canada and the United States I find a freedom from conventionality, an absence of social and religious distinctions, a determination to grade men's greatness by their fidelity to God and utility to their fellow man, which speak to me of a coming destiny which is worth striving for. For myself, I believe not only will Canada be an economic power in the world of unparalleled importance, but that she will be doubly great for knowing how to use it.

If ever separation comes it will be no fault of anada's, but only through the limitaiton, the inadaptability, and the selfishness of our own vision.

WILFRED T. GRENFELL.

.BONAR LAW'S ADMISSION.

(Winnipeg Free Press.)

Mr. Bonar Law is to re-enter the British House of Commons, a safe seat, Bootle, in Lancashire, having been placed at his disposal. The cable reports him as saying, in a speech to the electors of the constituency on Friday, that one of the strongest reasons against the reciprocity arrangements is "that it must inevitably raise the price of food there." Why should it increase the price of food in England? Obviously by increasing the price of wheat. How can this happen if, as we have been assured times without number, the price of wheat can not appreciate in Western Canada, by reason of the opening of the United States markets, since the price is fixed in the Liverpool market—that is, by the demand of the British consumers? If they have the power to fix the price why should they punish themselves by putting the price up a notch?

Mr. Law, it is to be borne in mind, is the chief tariff authority in the Unionist party. When he says, as he does in effect, that reciprocity will raise the price of Canadian grain and thus increase the price of food in England, he admits that under the existing conditions of trade the Canadian wheatgrower is getting less for his wheat than it is actually worth in the world's market. He thereby confirms an opinion which has sometimes been expressed in Western Canada that our wheat has never got the pfice its milling value called for, since being limited to a single market we had to take what was offered for it.

The farmers of Western Canada have never made an response to the proposal of the Tariff Reformers to give them a preference on their products. They want no artificial enhancement of value of their wheat at the cost of Britain's poor. They have no objection, however, to getting the actual value of their wheat as determined by competition in all the markets open to them; and Mr. Law's complaint that reciprocity will increase wheat prices will not strike them as a particularly strong argument, from their point of view, again tthe agreement.

ELLIOT'S

"The Strange Case Of Eleanor Cuyler"

By KINGSLAND CROSBY

"Yes, that is the way I understood her; my dear fellow, don't place any importance on such a phenomenon. Mrs. Hazard is a woman past middle age, with no special duties in life to divert her mind, and of course she's been worrying over this case until her nerves are strung to a high tension."

"But she had the same dream for three nights," Winthrop insisted, "identical in all details—of seeing Eleanor at the open port of a steamship or steam yacht, crying to her for help as the big vessel rushed away over the water."

"I know, I know," Barrett responded impatiently, "but you must trust my judgment, old man. You remember of course that I studied medicine at Harvard and practised for a few years, and then went abroad for further study. . . . .Nothing but inheriting that beastly estate has prevented me from having a professional career worth while, either," he added a little aggressively, for somehow he always seemed to resent the fact that through no exertion of his own he was a man of large wealth.

"Simply refuse to consider Mrs. Hazard's dream whatever," he repeated emphatically. "We sympathise with her to the uttermost, but we must resolutely refuse to allow a woman's jangling nerves and breaking heart to influence our judgment for one moment, or to affect our plans. We must keep cool, Sheldon, and clear-headed, and keen-eyed; or we will never trace Miss Cuyler."

"I suppose you're right," the painter responded, "but just the same all of us have heard of such dreams that really came true; at least that led to something worth while."

"My boy, we'll deal with actualities first! When every possible, actual condition has been examined, then perhaps we can consider the questionable stuff dreams are made of. Not before."

An hour or so afterward they met Hambidge at the studio, and, after reciting experiences of the day, and agreeing upon plans for the following morning, Barrett related the story of Mrs. Hazard's recurring dream.

"Sheldon seems to be taking it rather seriously," he concluded, "and I want you to tell him that my view of the matter is the same, sensible one."

Personally, I shouldn't place much faith in visions of any kind," the lawyer remarked. "How did Mrs. Hazard say she recognized her niece?"

"She didn't 'recognize' her," Barrett answered somewhat savagely "She dreamed that she recognized her, which is a very different thing, as a lawyer should know who is accustomed to exact details."

Hambidge smiled quietly, and, lighting a cigar, leaned back comfortably on the broad couch.

"Anyhow, no matter which way you put it," he remarked indulgently, "what did Mrs. Hazard think she saw?"

"She saw Eleanor's face at the port-hole!" Winthrop exclaimed. "She knew her instantly, and noticed the locket at her throat sparkling in the sunlight'"

"The locket at Miss Cuyler's throat" said Hambidge with sudden access of interest. "Tell me," he added, "what that locket is like?"

"Yes," urged Barrett, "what are its details, Sheldon? We can't make them out in your portrait, because they are half-hidden by that fluffy thing at her throat."

"Oh,, it's only a curious gold ornament, not a locket at all, as we understand the word. It is a tahli such as a young Hindu gives the girl he is engaged to—a token of betrothal, of affection, covered over with strange words and figures on one side, and on the other Mrs. Hazard had her initials engraved and Eleanor's — 'From M. W. H. to E. C.' That's all . . . What's the matter, Billy—dropped your cigar?"

"Yes," said Hambidge, stooping, and picking it up from the rug where it had fallen. "By the way," he added, puffing more rapidly than was his habit, "when I get this lighted again, I'll tell you that story of my experience with a locket which Tom wouldn't let me tell a day or two . . . . . There, now it's smoking all right again. . . . . Well, as I was about to say—when you telegraphed me to come on here, Winthrop, I was out at Chautauqua where I'd been lecturing. The message was sent late Saturday night, if you remember? And it was delivered before daylight Sunday morning."

Winthrop nodded.

"I got dressed at once, tossed some clothes into a suit-case, and hustled to the railway station. Ordinarily I would come back by way of Buffalo. But I found that by going in the other direction to Corry, I could catch an express on the Pennsylvania road running from Erie to Philadelphia, and there make quick connection for New York."

"How long is your story, William?" Barrett inquired with a grin. "It's nearly seven now, and I'm hungry as a bear."

"Don't mind him!" the painter exclaimed. "Go on, Hambidge; we'll stay until midnight to hear the denouement."

"I rather think you will," the lawyer responded, with a queer little smile. "You've got to anyhow. . . . Well, when I reached Corry, not long after sunrise, I had to wait a while for the express to come along, and after a cup of coffee at the only restaurant open, I tramped up and down the long wooden platform, breathing in the summer air, and counting the cracks in the boards. I had walked over that platform half a dozen times. I suppose, when my eye caught a shining little object down in a crack, the upper rim of which happened to be touched by the sun just at that moment I thought it was nothing but a bit of bright tin or the head of a brass tack, but for some reason I stooped down and pried at it with my knife until I got it out."

"What was it?" Winthrop asked with more than his usual politeness.

"It was a round object, a disc of gold," Hambidge replied quietly. "I brushed off the dirt, and found it highly polished—it had evidently been worn around somebody's throat, for a bit of very delicate chain was still attached to it. One side of the disc," he continued, "was covered with beautiful Oriental tracery. The other bore the initials you have just mentioned, Sheldon."

Barrett sprang to his feet and faced the lawyer.

"Is this a fairy story you're telling?" he demanded, trembling with excitement. "Have you made all this up to get even with me, or is it true!"

"It's true!" exclaimed the lawyer. "Every word of it—gospel truth—exactly as I have told it!"

"Where's the locket now?" Winthrop asked in bewilderment.

"Yes; what did you do with it?" Barrett roared.

"Gave it to the station agent at Corry to keep until the owner called for it," Hambidge replied, speaking rapidly. "Hurry, boys,—we can jump the seven-thirty train for Buffalo and be in Corry by noon, to-morrow! That's where she was taken from here!"

A minute later three men dashed from the studio building and started on a run for Fifty-ninth street, there to catch a crosstown car—the quickest route to the Grand Central Station.

The night express for Buffalo was moving when they leaped aboard it.

They were too much aroused over the sudden change in the situation to eat a comfortable meal in the dining-car, although they made an effort to [illegible] and soon they gathered [illegible] in a smoking compartment, where, with a railway map spread out on his knees, Hambidge explained as well as he could the several roads running through Corry, north and south, east and west.

"The priest and the doctor may have taken her to Erie," he said, "and there caught a Lake Shore train for some Western point; or they might have turned eastward on the B. N. Y. & P., towards Buffalo, or they could have taken the same road southwestward toward Pittsburg."

"Or they might have boarded a train on the Erie road and started for almost anywhere," Barrett rejoined, looking closely at the map. "The main thing, however, is that Miss Cuyler dropped the locket on the station platform at Corry, which means that sometime in the last nine days she was there!"

"Not necessarily," Hambidge remarked doubtfully. "The men might have separated before reaching Corry. It it is really a case of abduction, one of the two could easily have stolen the locket. . . . As a matter of caution," he concluded, "I shouldn't place too much importance on the fact that I found the locket at Corry. For all we know Miss Cuyler may still be in New York City somewhere."

"Did you ask the station agent at Corry anything about the matter when you handed him the tahli?" Winthrop inquired.

"No. He started to say something to me as I gave it to him, but just then the train for Philadelphia came along, and I had to run for it."

"Well," said Barrett, "we've got a starting point at last, anyhow, and all we can do is to wait until we get hold of that station agent."

"I will send Mr. Cuyler a telegram from Poughkeepsie," Winthrop decided.

The train they were in roared and swayed along in the darkness hour after hour while the three men sat there, smoking and thinking, until long after midnight; when they sought their berths.

XIV.

They had an hour or more to wait in Buffalo, next morning, before taking a train for Corry, on the old B. N. Y. & P. railroad, since then absorbed and modernised by one of the great national transportation systems. At Barrett's suggestion they drove to the nearest good hotel, stopping en route only long enough to purchase fresh linen, underwear, brushes and small handbags.

While Hambidge was engaging rooms and baths, and Winthrop was ordering breakfast to be served in 30 minutes, Barrett stepped into a sporting goods store near by and purchased three .44-calibre revolvers, with heavy stocks, and long, murderous-looking barrels; together with belts, holsters, and ammunition.

"It's just as well to be prepared for contingencies," he said later as he handed one to each of his friends, "especially as we're getting closer to the trail, and probably have a couple of desperadoes to deal with. These guns are heavy, and large—but they'll carry on an air-line and bore clean through an ordinary man. So be careful."

Refreshed by a cool shower, a change of clothing, and an excellent breakfast, the trio drove rapidly to the station and stepped aboard a train which, hour after hour, tugged and jolted from Buffalo in a southwesterly direction. As every dozen miles was covered their impatience increased, but, cautioned by Hambidge not to show anxiety or excitement, they leisurely left the train when it arrived at Corry, three hours or so later, and followed him to the office of the ticket agent.

"Good morning," said the lawyer, stepping up to the window.

"How d'you do," the agent responded.

"You may remember me, perhaps? Last Sunday I found a gold locket out on the platform, early in the morning, and brought it to you."

"Oh, yes, I remember now."

"Ever hear anything of the owner? Did she come back to claim the locket?"

"Not a word," said the agent, "and it's a funny thing, too! I was going to tell you about it at the time, only you had to run for your own train."

"I'm not in such a hurry to-day. What was it, anyhow"

"Let's see—you found that locket early on Sunday morning, didn't you?" the railroad man began meditatively, leaning his arms on the little shelf at the ticket window, and settling himself for a leisurely recital. "Well, it was three or four days ahead of that—maybe Tuesday or Wednesday, about the middle of July, the sixteenth or seventeenth, I disremember which, that——"

SHEEP'S LAMENT.

(Tune—The Lass o' Gowrie)

Two shepherds went from North to South,
They left their house with a close mouth,
To give their sheep an awful douse,
Away down in Washington.
The sheep were counted every one,
They number seven million,
Or, had they been a billion,
All were doused in Washington.

The shepherds came back from the South,
To tell their tale by word of mouth,
To all the people in the House,
All were doused in Washington.
Amongst the seven million sheep,
Some worthy rams began to bleat,
They bolted with an awful leap,
All were doused in Washington.

Toronto Globe is raging mad,
It says the rams have acted bad,
But most of Canada are sad,
All were doused in Washington.
And now the shepherds have their way,
In the big House at Ottawa,
Some day the lambs will have their say,
All were doused in Washington.

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Peoria, Ill.—"I wish to let every one know what Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies have done for me. For two years I suffered. The doctors said I had tumors, and the only remedy was the surgeon's knife. My mother bought me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am a healthy woman. For months I suffered from inflammation, and your Sanative Wash relieved me. Your Liver Pills have no equal as a cathartic. Any one wishing proof of what your medicines have done for me can get it from any druggist or by writing to me. You can use my testimonial in any way you wish, and I will be glad to answer letters."—Mrs. CHRISTINA REED, 105 Mound St., Peoria, Ill.

Another Operation Avoided.

New Orleans, La.—"For years I suffered from severe female troubles. Finally I was confined to my bed and the doctor said an operation was necessary. I gave Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial first, and was saved from an operation."—Mrs. LILY PEYROUX, 1711 Kerlerec St., New Orleans, La.

The great volume of unsolicited testimony constantly pouring in proves conclusively that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a remarkable remedy for those distressing feminine ills from which so many women suffer.

The Quickest, Simplest Cough Cure

This recipe makes 16 ounces of cough syrup—enough to last a family a long time. You couldn't buy as much or as good cough syrup for $2.50.

Simple as it is, it gives almost instant relief and usually stops the most obstinate cough in 24 hours. This is partly due to the fact that it is slightly laxative, stimulates the appetite and has an excellent tonic effect. It is pleasant to take—children like it. An excellent remedy, too, for whooping cough, sore lungs, asthma, throat troubles, etc.

Mix 2 cups of granulated sugar with with one cup of warm water and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents' worth) in a 16 oz. bottle and add the Sugar Syrup. It keeps perfectly. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

Pine is one of the oldest and best known remedial agents for the throat membranes. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guiacol and all the other natural healing elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

The prompt results from this recipe have endeared it to thousands of housewives in the United States and Canada, which explains why the plan has been imitated often, but never successfully.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

The Stomach Needs Help

The Liver, Kidneys and Bowels Must Be Kept Active to Ensure Health

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

Not one person in a hundred can get along at this time of year, without using something to enliven the action of the liver, kidneys and bowels.

Too much eating of heavy artificial foods, too little outdoor exercise, this is the explanation.

The liver and kidneys are overworked in their efforts to remove the poisonous waste matter from the system. They fail and become torpid and clogged. The bowels become constipated and stomach derangements follow.

There is one medicine which will overcome this condition more certainly and more quickly than any other, and this is Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

This medicine gets the bowels in action at once and by awakening the liver and kidneys ensures the thorough cleansing of the filtering and excretory systems.

With the poisonous obstructions removed, the digestive system resumes its healthful condition, appetite improves, pains and aches disappear as well as irritability and depression.

You cannot imagine a more satisfactory treatment for biliousness, constipation, backache and kidney disease than Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

A Few Forceful Facts about the King Edward Vacuum Cleaner

Things you OUGHT to know

The Vacuum Cleaner is indispensable to the modern household. It saves labour and money—it is insurance against the spread of disease-producing germs, and impurities.

There is no other thorough and efficient method of cleaning the house. Sweeping and dusting remove SURFACE dirt. The Vacuum Cleaner goes below the surface and removes ALL dust and impurities.

NO CLEANER, HOWEVER COSTLY OR COMPLICATED, DOES BETTER WORK THAN THE KING EDWARD VACUUM CLEANER.

It is light and easy to handle, weighing only about ten pounds. A child can operate it without difficulty.

It draws the dust from rugs, carpets and hangings, with the least possible friction, actually increasing their period of usefulness by keeping them fresh, and clean from all impurities. An extra nozzle is supplied for cleaning furniture and fine articles.

It is simplicity itself in the matter of construction—does not get out of order or become clogged with dirt.

It does away with all danger to the lungs, occasioned by sweeping—and lightens the labour of house cleaning 75%.

THE MODERATE PRICE $19.50 of the King Edward Vacuum Cleaner places this wonderful labour-saving health-insuring device within the reach of every modern household.

HOME DEMONSTRATIONS given upon request, with no obligation to purchase, this store being now the exclusive agency in Peterborough for the King Edward Cleaner.

RICHARD HALL & SON

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

It is founded on an accurate count made at the doors of five large New York playhouses for one week.

The proportion of women at the nightly — mind you, not the matinee, but the evening performances of these plays—was from sixty to eighty-nine per cent.

That means that we, the women of America, are the backbone of the dramatic audiences, and that consequently plays are written and staged with an eye to suiting us.

Just as much as if we went to the manager and said: "This is the kind of play we like and this is the kind we won't tolerate."

It is a big responsibility, isn't it?

Such a big one and so widely diffused, unfortunately, that it is difficult for women as individuals to realize just how they can put their shoulders to it.

At an afternoon tea the other day I heard a certain play being discussed.

It is the kind of play at which the American woman most emphatically ought to turn her thumbs down.

And yet the two women who had been to the play praised the acting in such glowing terms that half a dozen other women avowed their intention of attending.

"Of course it's not a play for children, my dear," said one of the women who had seen it, "but you are old enough and know enough of the world not to mind that sort of thing, and the acting is really splendid."

I don't absolutely know the outcome, but doubtless the ladies went and their dollars swelled the mighty voice of the box office that told the manager that this was the kind of play American women liked.

And doubtless, now he is looking about for other plays of that type, and if he puts his star on in one next year it will be at the request of the American women.

The manager of one of the biggest vaudeville circuits in this country has barred from his stages all mother-in-law jokes "because women don't like that sort of thing."

You see, every woman that withheld her laughter helped banish that joke.

If they would, they might do the same for all the infinitely more objectionable jokes founded on drunkenness that are tolerated everywhere on our stage. And in my mind they could scarcely do a greater thing for their sons.

By making the jokes on the stage which make light of drunkenness and immorality fall flat by failing to laugh at them.

By never attending intentionally immoral plays and musical comedies whose sole charm is their indecency of dress and allusion, no matter how good the staging or how excellent the acting.

By not advertising these plays by talking about them (even against them).

By giving hearty support and applause to wholesome plays and clean vaudeville—

These are some of the ways in which you, an individual woman, can rightly play your part as censor of the American stage.

NEW AMUSEMENT COMPANY FORMED IN PETERBOROUGH

Will Present High-class Vaudeville in a Tent Capable of Accommodating One Thousand People---Were Given a License for the Season by Council at Last Night's Meeting.

Peterborough is to have a new form of entertainment during the coming summer.

Last year at the special meeting of the council the Peterborough Amusement Company applied for a license stating through Mr. Burnham who represented them, that they intended to put up a big tent capable of providing for 1,000 people and will give a vaudeville performance during the summer months. It was intended, they stated, to sign a contract with one of the American circuits and it was necessary to do this before April 1. Their representative stated that for moving picture entertainments, would be the same as that given at Shea's theatre in Toronto. They asked the council to grant them a license and fix the necessary fee.

The city clerk pointed out that the license for a theatre was $50 per year, where vaudeville was given, and $40 for movin gpicture entertainments. There was nothing in the by-law to cover the request of the Company.

Ald. Morgan thought that $50 for the season was reasonable enough.

Ald. Anderson thought the Council should consider the whole question of license fees for places of entertainment before taking any action. He himself was of the opinion that the present fees were away below what they should be. In Port Hope the fee for moving picture shows was $00 per year. He thought the by-law should be amended to increase the fee and that the license fee for the new amusement company be based on the charges made on the other places of amusement. He moved, seconded by Ald. Buller that the matter be referred to the Finance committee.

Mr. Burnham pointed out that it was necessary that the contract with the circuit should be signed before April 1, so that speedy action was needed.

Ald. Morgan moved, seconded by Ald. Graham that the license be granted at $50 per year provided that if there be any changes made in the fees generally for amusement places, the fee for the Amusement Company be raised accordingly.

The representative of the Amusement Company stated that the company would be willing to pay $75 for the season of six months.

Ald. Metheral moved, seconded by Ald. Kernaghan, that the license be granted for $75 from May 1st to November 1st. This motion was carried, the two previous resolutions being withdrawn in its favour.

The Company is to give only a vaudeville performance with no moving pictures..

THE CITY'S AGREEMENT WITH THE NEW COMPANY

For the benefit of the ratepayers the following brief resume of the agreement between the city and the Independent Tire Company to be submitted for the approval of the people next month is given:

The company agrees to purchase suitable site in the City of Peterborough on or before July 1st, 1911, and to erect a three-storey building, 200 by 50 feet ,and to have it equipped with $75,000 worth of machinery, free of all encumbrances and sufficient to give employment to 100 operators on or before July 1, 1912.

The City is to advance to the Company, when a site is purchased and a building erected one-half of the cost of the site and building, up to $20,000, and within thirty days after the building is equipped with $75,000 worth of machinery, and 40 hands are employed, to make a second loan of $10,000 sixty days after if the company has 90 men at work.

The city also agrees to exempt the building, machinery and land of the company for ten years from all taxes, except school and local improvement charges.

The company agrees to give the city a mortgage on their factory, machinery and land and to pay back the loan at the rate of $2,000 per year with interest at 4 1-2 per cent., commencing on December 31 1912.

The company is to have sold paid up stock of $150,000 by the time the building is finished and the machinery installed.

TO GIVE A RECEPTION TO THE SHEFFIELD CHOIR

At last night's meeting of the City Council Mr. Walter Stocker, who is bringing the Sheffield Choir to Peterborough for the second time, waited upon the Council to ask that the City should do something towards giving a reception of the visitors from overseas. He suggested that the market in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute might be secured, and the Mayor and others present an address of welcome on behalf of the city. Mr. Stocker pointed out that other cities were preparing to welcome the choir and he thought that Peterborough should do something. He explained that the two hundred and forty members were the guests of Dr. Harris on the trip and were receiving absolutely no salary remuneration.

The matter was referred to the Reception Committee with power to act.

PLEADED GUILTY TO THEFT OF GOLD WATCH

In the police court this morning Harry Bennett was charged with the theft of a watch from Mrs. Reid, who keeps a boarding house on Hunter street. The accused pleaded guilty and elected to be tried by His Worship. A week's remand was asked for and granted.

John James appeared to answer to a charge of keeping a couple of dogs that were a menace to the safety of pedestrians passing along Kirk street. Mr. Pretty was the first witness called. He stated that while passing along Kirk street yesterday morning he was attacked by the two dogs in question. He was compelled to retire three times towards Rubidge street until finally the dogs were called into a house. On investigation witness ascertained that the house was occupied by the defendant.

Detective Newhall then went into the witness box and stated that he had been attacked by the dogs in question last week, and had also seen them tackle four people in one day last spring, while he was engaged in sanitary work in the vicinity of the defendant's house.

John James, the defendant, was next called on to give evidence. John dwelt at some length on the merits of the dogs, one of which was produced in court. He said he had never known them to take a piece out of anybody's leg. If they did he was willing to pay a doctor for putting it in again. He had recollections of the dog attacking a Chineman some time ago, but had looked on the matter as an insignificant one.

His Worship ordered the dog (the one produced in court) to be shot. The animal was forthwith transferred to a cell below to await execution.

ALL YOUR STOMACH TROUBLES VANISH

No Indigestion, Gas, Heartburn or Dyspepsia Five Minutes Later

Every year regularly more than a million stomach sufferers in the United States, England and Canada take Pape's Diapepsin, and realize not only immediate, but lasting relief.

This harmless preparation will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, gassy or out-of-order stomach five minutes afterwards.

If your meals don't fit comfortably or what you eat lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion.

Get from your Pharmacist a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a dose just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fulness or heavy feeling in the stomach. Nausea, Debilitating Headaches, Dizziness or Intestinal griping. This will go, and, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odours.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is waiting for you at any drug store.

These large 50-cent cases contain more than sufficient to thoroughly cure almost any case of Dyspepsia, Indigestion or any other stomach disorder.

CRESSMAN'S TOGGERY SHOP

MOTHER THRASHES HER 22 YEAR OLD SON

The Kingston Standard says: A serio-comedy was enacted at the Grand Trunk Station recently, in which a mother publicly chastised her son, a young man of about 22 years of age.

The son and a cousin had been boarding with the irate parent all winter without paying any board. They had decided to leave for Peterborough, without the knowledge of the landlady, and in order to pack up their belongings had sent her to a party. She returned however, before train time and seeing the young men's room in disorder, suspected what was up and hurried to the railway station. Here she found her son and generously trounced him. His companion seeing something coming his way skipped out and started to "longboot it" down the tracks. He was captured by P. C's Filson and McCarey and brought back to the station.

The mother then explained the situation to the police and between them the young men scraped up $20 which was a small portion of their board bill. They were then allowed to depart.

ANOTHER ISSUE OF BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY BONDS

The announcement is made that the Royal Securities Limited, of Montreal, and Messrs. Lee, Higginson, and Company, of Boston, have purchased $1,250,000 5 per cent. bonds of the Bell Telephone Company of Canada. Like past issues of this company they are due in 1925, and are secured by the assets of the company, which, according to the last annual report, were something over $17,000,000. Such an issue is always looked upon by the banks and insurance companies as about as nearly gilt-edged as a bond can well be, and are quickly taken up. Since 1904 the Bell Telephone has just about doubled the number of its subscribers, there being now something over 133,000 of them, and has nearly dobbled the number of miles of wire. Besides this, the company has arrangements for exchange of business with about 370 independent companies, serving over 28,000 subscribers. The gross revenue for 1910 was $5,510,685, with a net revenue of $1,547,125 will be used for the growth and extension of the company's business generally, so that large developments may be looked for.

THE LOCAL CURLING SEASON WILL END TO-NIGHT

Those who desire to take one final whirl at curling this season should attend the proceedings at Charlotte St. rink to-night. Good ice has developed during the last couple of days and there will be curling this afternoon and evening.

In the evening a grand supper will be provided, after which the presentation of the curling prizes will take place. There will be speeches from some of the leading curlers and a good time is anticipated.

Roller Hockey League Is To Be Formed Here

A Roller Hockey League is the latest development in sporting circles according to the enthusiasts who are promoting it. It is proposed to have the different teams which played in the Mercantile League during the past winter represented in a Roller League and it is understood that most of the clubs have already declared their intention of jointing. There will be a meeting of representatives of the clubs interested at the Brock street Roller Rink on Monday night next at 8 o clock for the purpose of organizing the new league.

For the benefit of the uninitiated it might be explained that roller hockey is played exactly the same as the ice article except that a ball is used instead of a puck as the latter cannot be manipulated on the floor as it can on ice.

"The Shadow Of The Cross" Is A Mysterious Picture

Henri Ault's famous mysterious painting, known as "The Shadow of the Cross, will be on exhibition at the Y. M. C. A. for a week, commencing to-day and the picture is well worth seeing. The clergy and newspaper men of the city were given an opportunity to-day to view the marvellous painting and were wonderfully impressed with its mysterious features. Viewed in the daylight the picture is a large and beautiful painting of The Christ, a splendid work of art, but possessing no feature of unusual interest. It is when the picture is seen in the dark the figure of The Christ, standing out in a back ground of clear light, while behind the figure an outline of a cross appears that cannot be seen in the picture when viewed in the light. For thirteen years the painting has been exhibited in many parts of the world and still remains a mystery. Scientists are baffled to discover the source of the mysterious light or to explain the cross which appears when the picture is displayed in the dark. Analysis of the paints used show no trace of radium, pho-phurus, foxfire or other light giving chemicals, and scientific men have been unable to come to any conclusion that will explain the glowing light that comes from the picture and which is strong enough to enable people to distinguish objects in the room. The wonderful picture is well worth a visit and Peterborough people should not fail to take advantage of its presence at the Y.M.C.A. It will be on view every day for a week from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.

POST CARD COLUMN

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—In a morning paper published in this city, appears a report to the effect that an Englishman had been arrested for the theft of a gold watch and $5.00. Will you kindly allow me to correct this in the interests of justice. The person arrested was an American and not as stated, an Englishman. I should also like to say that in my experience I have generally found Englishmen to be very honest, and straightforward in their dealings. I am sir,

Yours respectfully,
(MRS.) ALEX. REID.
Temperance Hotel, 201 Hunter St.

Editor Examiner

At the meeting of the Council last night, the question of the license fee now being paid by the moving picture and vaudeville shows in Peterborough was discussed, and it was a surprise to many to find how small the amount was. When compared with the license in other places $40 or $50 seems ridiculous. Brantford, for instance, collects a $300 license fee from such show houses, and the writer thinks that amount is little enough for the privilege in Peterborough.

Yours,
CITIZEN.

This Was No Joke

The other day over in the town of G—, Ontario, Mrs. R. came into Mr. B's store and asked for a couple of packages of Dye. He was selling the Old Style Dyes that require a Separate Dye for Wool and Cotton, and asked her if she knew what KIND of cloth her goods were made of. Mrs. R. said she wasn't sure, so he advised her to go home and make the following test:

"First to take a small piece of the goods and ravel out the threads each way of the Cloth, then put a match to them. Cotton would be apt to burn freely with little odour. Wool might merely singe and would be apt to give out a disagreeable odour, something like burning hair. Silk would burn less freely than Cotton and smell like burning Wool. Now, if it did not smell very much, she was to use a Dye for Cotton, if it did she was to use a Wool Dye, but she was to look out to see that it did not smell too much or too litle.

Now, unfortunately, Mrs. R. had a cold in her head at the time, and couldn't smell ANYTHING, so she naturally thought that the goods were Cotton, and used the Cotton Dye. It turned out that her goods were really all Wool, and naturally her Dyeing was a failure. Since then B. has put in an assortment of the Guaranteed ONE DYE for ALL KINDS of Cloth, which does away with all chance of using the WRONG Dye for the Goods one has to colour.

Mrs. R. is naturally much relieved as well as B's other Lady Customers.

DELIGHTFUL TALK

Mr Dobbin's delightful talk on the "Art of Furniture Making" was given yesterday afternoon to a small, but most appreciative audience. In an easy, conversational manner, Mr. Dobbin conveyed a great deal of interesting detail concerning the treatment of various woods, both in past and present times, and dwelt upon the impress of national characteristics and conditions upon the furniture of different periods.

The speaker's undoubted knowledge of his subject and his pleasing way of presenting it, made the afternoon a most interesting one, and those who faced the elements and came to the Armouries felt amply repaid.

The Women's Art Association are deeply indebted to Mr Dobbin for his interesting and entertaining address.

SHORT CIRCUIT

The entire rolling stock of the Peterborough Radial Railway was tied up this morning between the hours of 6 and 7 a.m. owing to a short circuit in the power line.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE LAKEFIELD BRANCH OF W. A.

LAKEFIELD, MARCH 22.—Mrs. P. Buptie has returned home after spending the past two months in Toronto, Guelph and Norwich.

Miss F. Deuch who has been visiting in the village for the past three weeks, returned last week to Fowler's Corners.

Miss R. Bate, of Spokane, Wash., is in the village, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. Bate.

Mr. A. S. Butchart, of Marmora, spent the week end at his home in the village.

Mr. A. Higgins left last week to spend a few months at Elbow, Sask.

Miss A. Atwood was in Peterborough the guest of Mr. and Mrs. G. Evans Atwood for a few days last week.

Mr. J. Kelly, of Peterborough, was in the village on Monday.

Mrs. S. Henderson, of Toronto, spent a few days last week visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. Sherin. Mr. and Mrs. Henderson and daughter leave for a three months' tour on the continent this month.

Mrs. G. B. Hilliard spent a few days last week in Peterborough, where she was the guest of her cousin, Mrs. Razen Ritchie.

Mr. Andrew Miller left on Wednesday last for Saskatoon, Sask., after spending the winter at his home in the village.

The annual meeting of the Lakefield branch of the Woman's Auxiliary was held at the rectory on Wednesday last, when the following officers were elected for the ensuing year.

President—Mrs. Traill.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mrs. F. J. Sawers.
2nd Vice Pres.—Miss F. Atwood.
Recording Sec.—Miss J. Strickland.
Corres.-Secretary—Mrs. W. M. Graham.
Treasurer—Mrs. Marling.
Leaflet Secretary—Miss F. Atwood.
Dorcas Committee—Mrs. Northcote, Mrs. Norish and Mrs. Edwards.

After the business of the meeting was transacted the country was addressed by the Rev. C. Brown, of Young's Point, who gave a short sketch of his life in the South Sea Islands, where he worked among the natives for three years or more. His description of the people, their customs and manner of living was intensely interesting and great regret was felt by his listeners when his address was finally brought to a close. This is Mr. Brown's first visit to this parish and we hope it may be succeeded by many others.

Mr. George Douglas, of Young's Point, passed through the village on his way to New York on Wednesday last.

Mr. Watts, of Peterborough was the guest of the Rev. F. J. Sawers on Monday.

Mr. C. Atwood left on Thursday last to visit Mr. and Mrs. G. Evans Atwood in Peterborough.

Mr. C. Leonard, of Peterborough, spent Sunday visiting Rev. A. W. Mackenzie at "The Grove."

The Rev. Canon Davidson, of St. John's church, Peterborough, will preach at St. John's Baptist church this Wednesday evening.

A delightful "tea" was given by Mrs. E. E. Carman last Friday afternoon at "The Homestead." Mrs. G. A. Langley and Miss J. Strickland presided at the tea and coffee table while the young ladies assisting in the tea room were Misses Dorothy Hilliard, Caroline Clement, and Ella Grahame.

Mr. Frank C. Dela Fosse was in the village on Thursday last. Mr Dela Fosse who has been spending the past three months visiting his parents in Peterborough, leaves this week for McLeod, Alta. to resume his work in the Northwest Mounted Police.

CRIME OF DESPERADO

Murders One Woodman and Wounds Two Others to Get Possession of Their Time Checks

POLICE WERE SLOW

Port Arthur, March 23.—To get possession of three woodmen's time checks, a man, whose name is not yet known to the authorities, held up a party of three woodsmen, all Finlanders, on their way out from the Pidgeon River Lumber Co.'s camp, near Silver Mountain, killing one of them and very seriously wounding the others, using a revolver as a weapon.

The men were on the road leading from the camp to a railroad, intending to take the train to Port Arthur, when they were met by a stranger, who offered to direct them to the railway by a short-cut. His offer was accepted, and at a convenient moment the stranger opened fire on the three, killing one and incapacitating the others. He took their time checks, which are of no value to him because he cannot cash them. The revolver was not his only weapon. The murderer also used a hunting knife freely.

One man has nine cuts about his body. Leaving his victims to their sufferings, the assailant made off. The two laid out, wounded and bleeding, beside the dead body of their companion all night and yesterday, managed to reach the railway and get the news sent to Silver Mountain, whence it was forwarded to Port Arthur. Provincial Constable Simons left for the scene yesterday afternoon, but will not in any case be able to get on the track of the fleeing murderer before this afternoon.

Farmers Want Help

Toronto, March 23.—The shortage of farm help for Ontario is greater this year than ever. A great number of farmers are coming into the city in search of recruits from among the new arrivals from the old country, but for one that has his quest gratified, there are dozens that will not obtain even one man. Many are under the impression that the majority of the new-comers arrive here with no set idea of how or where they are to obtain employment, while the truth is that nearly everyone who come knows exactly what he is going to do before he leaves the old country.

The wages being offered are not very high. An experienced man of ordinary physique will be offered from $12 to $15 per month and board, while one who can plow, milk, and in every other way fulfill the duties required of him can get from $25 to $35.

Ashamed of Themselves.

Montreal, March 23.—An official apology from the student body of McGill will probably be tendered to Hon. Mr. Sifton for the indignities to which he was subjected on Monday night by the rowdy element of the undergraduates. A memorial is being circulated in the university and largely signed.

Civil actions for damages amounting to $1,400, including the cost of the carriage that was burned, may also add to the discomfort of the students, and somebody will have to pay. About a dozen students will be made the defendants, it is stated.

Ex-Warden Dropped Dead.

Kingston, March 23.—Alexander Munro, aged 67, ex-warden of Frontenac, dropped dead at his home. For many years he was grocer and postmaster at Ardoch. His widow and a grown up family survive.

Has Suspect Fled.

Berlin, Ont., March 23.—A local paper prints a story to the effect that a man strongly suspected in the Lobinski murder case has escaped the country, and is now in the States, with his address unknown.

To Celebrate Coronation.

Ottawa, March 23.—A big celebration in honor of the coronation of King George V. of Great Britain, will be held by the Ottawa branches of the Sons of England and St. George's Societies.

Will Subscribe For His Defence.

Greenville, Ala., March 23.—A subscription has been started here to defray the court expense of Albert Ulrich, the New York man, charged with assaulting Booker T. Washington.

"SLEEPLESSNESS."

Thousands of people all over this land toss night after night on a sleepless pillow. The eyes do not close in the refreshing slumber that comes to those whose heart and nerves are right.

Some are troubled with weak and smothering spells; others palpitation of the heart; others have their nerves unhinged; but whatever the cause—it comes entirely from a derangement of either the heart or nerves, or both. Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills offer the blessing of sound, refreshing slumber. They do this by their invigorating effect on the heart and nerves and will tone up the whole system to perfect condition.

Mr. H. Jewel, Kerwick, Ont., writes: "I am glad to have the pleasure of telling you what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills did for me. I would have weak spells, seemed to lose my breath, and would have to get up in the night as I could not sleep. I tried many medicines but found nothing good until I used Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I took three boxes and it is three years ago since I did so, and I haven't been troubled since."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

SESSION FINISHED

Ontario Legislature Ends its Business for the Year—Bi-Lingualism Was Discussed Yesterday

RESOLUTION AMENDED

Toronto, March 23.—With "three cheers and a tiger" for the King, the Ontario Legislature closed its legislative session at seven o'clock last night. Sir James Whitney led the cheering. The afternoon was one of the most strenuous in the history of the Assembly. The formal prorogation will be held on Friday afternoon.

Bi-lingual schools were discussed for a brief but spirited few minutes, when G. H. Ferguson (Con., Grenville), introduced an amendment to his original notice of motion, "That in the opinion of this House no language other than the English language, should be used as a medium of instruction in the schools of the province."

The amendment read: "That the English language shall be the language of instruction and communication of the pupils of the public and separate schools, except where, in the opinion of the Department of Education it is found impracticable because the pupil does not understand English."

The question of bi-lingual schools, he said, was a subject that loomed large in the destiny of the country. It had had a wide discussion and much publicity, and as the House was familiar with it, he did not propose to go into it at length. The brevity of his original resolution was its only weakness. His sole object was to better the facilities for diffusing the English language throughout the country.

He wouldn't say that the abuses that were reported could be obliterated in one fell swoop, but they could be gradually got rid of without disadvantage to the country at large.

Premier Whitney pointed out to the House that the amendment was in the exact words of the statute law of the land, and, strange as it might seem to some people, there was no such real entity in the province as a bi-lingual school.

People outside the Legislature and reckless journalists were apt to confuse the question of the study of the French language with the legalization of the French language as a means of communication. They were as far apart as the north and south poles.

"The position of the Government is and will be," said the Premier, "to stand by that mandate. Whenever it is found impracticable to carry out the provisions of the first part, the latter part shall be applied. We take our stand upon it and are prepared to stand or fall by it.

"The chief inspector of the province has made a thorough and complete examination into the situation, and we can't say what we will do till we can learn from him what the situation is.

"If we find that any abuses have occurred, this Government will take steps to abolish them. In other words, the Government pledges itself to stand by the provisions of the statute."

The amended resolution carried unanimously.

Hon. Frank Cochrane moved the House into committee on the bill for the protection of public interests in the bed of navigable waters.

W. Proudfoot said the bill was revolutionary in asserting public ownership of the streams.

Hon. A. G. MacKay: "It was always understood the other way, that the water was considered the same as land."

Hon. J. J. Foy pointed out that the critics of the bill assumed that the general opinion in Canada had been that the possession of land gave proprietory rights to the centre of navigable waters. This was not the case. Where purchases had been made in such an assumption, the claims involved were protected by the bill. The bill was reported and given its third reading.

Given the Go-By.

Kingston, March 23.—Because of the delay of the city to carry out its promises regarding putting a large span on Cataraqui Bridge, the Ontario Exploration Syndicate has decided to ship iron ore from its mines at Wilbur to Collins Bay, seven miles from here. Kingston thus loses the shipping plant of the Exploration Syndicate.

Youth Struck by Train.

Brockville, March 23.—Albert Fraser, aged six years, attempted to cross the G.T.R. tracks in front of a light engine at Perth street, when he was struck and hurled several feet. His left leg and several ribs are fractured, and he sustained severe cuts and bruises about the head and body. The doctors have little hope of his recovery.

Lightning Struck Oceanic.

New York, March 23.—The big White Star liner Oceanic arrived yesterday with her foremost splintered at the top, and the fore-truck carried away. Last Tuesday, during a heavy hail squall, the Oceanic was struck by lightning.

GOOD THING FOR INDIANS

Ottawa, March 23.—Most of yesterday's session was spent in a discussion of the sale of St. Peter's reserve in Manitoba. George H. Bradbury (Selkirk) introduced the question and moved for a royal commission. His motion was lost on division.

Mr. Bradbury said the St. Peter's Indians had been the first to safeguard the interests of the white settlers. They were loyal to the crown during the Red River rebellion, at Fish Creek, and had piloted boats up the Nile to rescue Gen. Gordon. He described the transaction as "reeking with dishonesty," and made a plea for British justice. He argue it was not a question of politics, as the Indians had no votes.

Mr. Bradbury declared that bribery had been resorted to by the superintendent of Indian Affairs, Frank Pedley, to secure the surrender of the reserve. Only 205 of the band were present at the meeting, and after two day's active canvass, the Government managed to squeeze out nine of a majority, less than 38 per cent. of the band, who were never qualified to vote. He considered it was not a legal surrender.

Mr. Bradbury drew a vivid picture of the loyalty of this band of Indians to the British people. Yet in return for their services to the Empire, they had been thrown to the wolves by this Government. He described it as one of the most rascally transactions perpetrated by the Indian Department. The Minister was afraid to let daylight in on it.

Hon. Frank Oliver, in replying to Mr. Bradbury's charges, said that it was absurd to say that the Indians had been robbed. For a reserve of 48,000 acres they had been paid the market value at the time of the sale, and had been given another reserve containing 74,000 acres in a situation much more suitable to their requirements, both from a material and moral point of view. The Indians had agreed to the sale of the lands under specified conditions, and these conditions had been fulfilled to the letter. Before the meeting about which Mr. Bradbury had said so much, the matter of the sale of the reserve had been canvassed for weeks.

He denied that there had been any attempt made to bribe the Indians. There was no reason for an enquiry, because all the facts in connection with the sale of the reserve had been laid before the House. The Department had nothing to conceal and nothing to apologise for, and he felt entitled to ask the House to refuse to assent to the request of the member for Selkirk, on the merits of the transaction.

Mr. Oliver said that it was a good thing for the Indians that they had been removed. Contact with civilization and the white man had not been a good thing for them, and they were not as good men as they were forty years ago. They would have an opportunity of doing better in their new surroundings.

T. W. Crothers (West Elgin) supplement his vigorous arraignment of a year ago by another attack upon the Government. He charged the administration with playing upon the instability, simplicity and improvidence of the Indian, and said that Frank Pedley, superintendent of Indian affairs, had virtually gone to the St. Peter's band showing them the $5,000 in cash, adding the words, "If you will agree to the surrender of the reserve, I will distribute this money among you." "That," said Mr. Crothers, "was in substance and in fact a bribe to those Indians."

Hon. George E. Foster said he was surprised that the Government had no disposition to reply to the charge that the surrender had not been legally executed. He declared that the officials of the Department had displayed either utter callousness to the rights of the Indians, or that there had been open-eyed knowledge that the Indian was being disposed for the benefit of the speculator.

C. J. Doherty (St. Anne's, Montreal) declared that he would have remained silent were it not that the sublime indifference of the Minister of the Interior, as whether the sale had been illegal, had impelled him to enter into the discussion. The Minister had not asked the Department of Justice for a legal opinion on the question, and, said Mr. Doherty, it was not an exaggeration to say that Mr. Oliver had shown contempt for the rights of those Indians.

Dr. Molloy (Provencher), who closed the debate with a brief speech, quoted the price of lands in the vicinity of the Indian reserve to prove that the Indians had received full value for their property.

In reply to a question by Capt. Tom Wallace (Centre York) the House of Commons was informed yesterday that the expenditure on the Newmarket Canal for the past fiscal year had been $135,892.81, making a total expenditure to date of $450,832.76. The Government expects that the canal will be completed in 1913, and the entire cost will be in the neighborhood of $1,100,000.

6 YEAR OLD GIRL
Cured of Kidney Trouble

Mrs. Alex. Moore, of James street, Oxford, N.S., says. "Booth's Kidney Pills cured our little daughter, Christian, age six years, of many symptoms of kidney weakness. She complained of a sore back, the kidney secretions were frequent and uncontrollable, especially at night. Her stomach was weak and her appetite poor. This caused her to have frequent headaches, and the least exertion would tire her. We had tried many remedies, but she did not improve. Finally we learned of Booth's Kidney Pills and procured a box. In a short time she was well and does not now complain about her back, the kidney secretions have become normal, and she plays around the house with no apparent fatigue. We always recommend Booth's Kidney Pills."

Booth's Kidney Pills carry a guarantee that if you derive no benefit your money will be refunded. Booth's Kidney Pills are a specific for all diseases of the kidneys and bladder. Sold by all druggists, 50c. a box, or postpaid from the B. T. Booth Co., Ltd., Fort Erie, Ont. Sold and guaranteed by Wm. Madill.

500 Pounds of Powder Exploded.

Port Clinton, Ohio, March 23.—Four persons were hurt when 500 pounds of powder exploded at the plant of the American Gypsum Co., four miles east of here early yesterday.

A spark from a pipe or cigarette caused the explosion, which was felt for miles around.

Forty-Five Killed In Drunken Riot.

Washington, D.C., March 23.—Forty-five persons in all were killed in a riotous conflict between divisions of the Honduran army at Comayaguela, Honduras, on Sunday. The sale of liquor, the cause of the trouble, has been prohibited.

N. Y. Smuggler Sentenced.

New York, March 23.—Alexander Hollander, sole member of the firm of Alex. Hollander & Co., customs brokers, pleaded guilty in the U. S. Circuit Court yesterday afternoon to a charge of forgery in connection with customs frauds aggregating $500,000. He was arrested in Naples last July and after a long fight was brought back to this city in December.

The first specific charge against him was based on a customs entry of an automobile for Henry Clews, the banker. Hollander, as customs broker, entered the machine at the customs at a valuation of $850, but charged Mr. Clews duty on $1,850. An examination showed that Hollander had been doing business in the same way for years among his clients being J. P. Morgan, Andrew Carnegie, and other millionaires, for whom he acted as agent in the importation of various objects of art. Hollander was a member of exclusive clubs, and lived among the wealthy. He is a good musician, a connoisseur in art, and was a patron of the art clubs.

THE FEET IN PRISON

Tightly imprisoned in the modern shoe the feet perspire and the skin is chafed and irritated until it is in anything but a healthy condition. Corns and bunions are formed and walking becomes torture. Possibly you never thought of Dr. Chase's Ointment in this connection but it brings wonderful relief and comfort almost instantly. Its soothing, healing effects are magical.

TO REFUSE TERMS.

Roblin Will Not Accept Sir Wilfrid's Offer.

Winnipeg, March 23.—The Manitoba Government will refuse the offer of Sir Wilfrid Laurier for a settlement of the boundary question and will insist upon equality with other provinces of the Confederation. The Government's stand was set forth in a resolution, notice of which was given by the Premier yesterday afternoon and which will be moved to-day, when a big debate, practically the winding up of the session, is expected. The resolution sets forth that Manitoba is willing to consider each claim of all public lands, minerals, etc., such as Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Quebec and Ontario have, or financial and other considerations of a character similar to those given or to be given to Saskatchewan and Alberta.

The resolution is prefaced by a preamble which points out that at the time of the passage of the British North America Act, it was clearly the spirit and intention of the framers that all of the provinces should be dealt with on the basis of equality. It also observes that Manitoba has not since its confederation received fair treatment at the hands of the Federal authorities, and at the present time occupies a position of gross inequality with the provinces to the east and the new provinces to the west. It is also pointed out that for forty years Manitoba has been endeavoring to obtain relief, but without success.

Scheme of Moderate Reform.

London, March 23.—Lord Selborne made a notable speech in Glasgow Tuesday night on the reform of the House of Lords, in which he outlined the plans of the Unionist party for making the Upper Chamber a more effective assembly and one which will represent more adequately the feeling of the electorate.

He strongly advocated a scheme for moderate reform, coupled with a conference between the two Houses in the event of a disagreement and the referendum as a reserve for occasions.

Fatal Fight at Dance.

Sandgate, Vt., March 23.—A warrant was issued yesterday for the arrest of Fred. Dupluise, a French-Canadian lumberjack, who is charged with being responsible for the death of Cyrus Moffat, a Sandgate farmer, 60 years of age. Last Friday night a country kitchen dance developed into a riot, during which Moffat had his scull and jaw fractured. He died yesterday. Dupluise is 30 years of age.

Taft's Confidence In Booker T.

New York, March 23.—Dr. Booker T. Washington, the negro educator, whose assailant of last Sunday night, Albert Ulrich, is held for trial on an assault charge, was gratified yesterday to receive a letter from President Taft, in the President's own handwriting, expressing his sympathy for and confidence in Dr. Washington.

Death of Baptist Pastor.

Brockville, March 23.—The death occurred Tuesday at Frankville of Rev. Mr. Wingle, Baptist pastor at that place. Deceased was only 32 years of age, and came from Toronto.

Heavy Snowfall at Montreal.

Montreal, March 23.—Montreal has yesterday in the grip of one of the heaviest snow storms of the season. Fully seven inches of snow have fallen already.

Blackstock to Prosecute.

Woodstock, Ont., March 23.—George Tate Blackstock, K.C., will be crown prosecutor and Justice Britton will preside at the assizes opening here Monday. The graft charges against ex-county councillors will be dealt with.

THE TIRE THAT ALWAYS LEADS.

Dangerous Man Arrested.

New York, March 23.—An attempt on the life of Henry N. Corwith, president of the American Knitting Mills Co., was frustrated yesterday when Alfred Price, formerly in Corwith's employ, was arrested after flourishing a loaded revolver. He made rambling statements of a conspiracy to kill him. A long dagger was in one of his pockets.

Women Oppose Treating System.

Tacoma, Wash., March 23.—The women of Tacoma in their first test at the polls in the city's history, came out against the saloon element according to yesterday's return from the referendum election.

By a majority vote of 4,000 the women voted for the "anti-treating" ordinance.

Col. Stimson to Command.

Ottawa, March 23.—The committee of the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association to appoint the officers for the Bisley team of 1911 have made their selection. Lieut.-Col. Stimson of Toronto, formerly commanding the Royal Grenadiers, is to be commandant of the team. Major W. W Burland, second in command of the Victoria Rifles, Montreal, is to be adjutant. He is a company officer of known executive ability.

A Call From the East.

St. John, N.B., March 23.—An unanimous invitation has been extended to Rev. H. S. Mahood, B.A., of Paris, by the First Congregational Church of this city, to become its pastor.

"Consumption"

Three Doctors Attended Her. Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup Cured Her.

It has long been known that the balsamic odor of the newly cut pine tree heals and invigorates the lungs and consumptives improve and revive amid the perfume of the pines. Since but few can command the luxury of a visit to the pineries, it will be good news to many to know that the essential healing principle of the pine has been separated, and refined, and combined with other absorbent, expectorant and soothing medicines of recognised worth in the manufacture of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.

Mrs. Charles McDermott, Bathurst, N.B., writes: "I thought I would write and let you know the benefit I have received through the use of your Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Three years ago I had Consumption and had three doctors attending me, and they were very much alarmed about my condition. I was so weak and miserable I could not do my housework. While looking through your B.B.B. almanac I saw that Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup was good for weak lungs so I got a bottle and after taking ten bottles I was completely cured. At that time I weighed 135 pounds and now weigh 172, a gain of 37 pounds in three years. I now keep it in the house all the time and would not be without it for anything as I owe my life to it."

Mrs. Thomas McMurray, who was recently moved from her home in Douro to St. Joseph's Hospital, suffering from heart failure, passed away this morning after a brief illness. Deceased was 67 years of age and was known and highly esteemed by a wide circle of friends with whom she came in contact. She leaves to mourn her loss besides a sorrowing husband, six sons. They are as follows: Fred, Joseph, of the North Shore, Garrett, Frank and Patrick at home, and Thomas of this city.

Funeral will take place on Saturday from the family residence at Douro, and proceed to St. Joseph's Church and thence to St. Joseph's cemetery for interment.

WEDDING BELLS

DOWNER—LITTLE.

A quiet, but pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. Wm. Little, Stewart street, yesterday afternoon, when his daughter, Mabel E. was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. George W. Downer of Frobisher, Sask., formerly of Peterborough. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Pogue.

Mr. and Mrs. Downer left amid showers of confetti on the 4.58 C P R train for their new home in Frobisher, Sask.

BEATEN BY BURGLARS

Special to The Examiner :

CHICAGO, MARCH 22.—Two burglars with an axe battered down three doors in the rear of a barber shop conducted by Maurice Carroll at 1143 West Madison street late Monday night in order to reach a 400 pound safe in the front of the shop.

They rolled the safe along the floor to the rear, where they loaded it on a stolen banana cart. They wheeled the safe for nearly three blocks to the rear gate of the residence of John Gessner, at 1114 Church place, where they were unloading their heavy burden when Gessner, returning home, surprised them.

"Say, old top," said one of the thieves, "we just pulled off a little deal. Come on and help us crack the safe and we will share up with you."

Gessner refused to permit the robbery and the burglars attacked him. His cries for help attracted the attention of Detectives Cullett and Mulvihill, of Desplaines street station, who were a few blocks away, and they came running to the scene, the burglars fleeing. The safe and Gessner, bleeding from many wounds, were loaded into the patrol wagon and taken to the station.

How to Tell if Your Hair is Diseased

Even if you have a luxuriant head of hair you may want to know whether it is in a healthy condition or not. 98 per cent. of the people need a hair tonic.

Pull a hair out of your head; if the bulb at the end of the root is white and shrunken, it proves that the hair is diseased, and requires prompt treatment if its loss would be avoided. If the bulb is pink and full, the hair is healthy.

We want every one whose hair requires treatment to try Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. We promise that it shall not cost anything if it does not give satisfactory results. It is designed to overcome dandruff, relieve scalp irritation, to stimulate the hair roots, tighten the hair already in the head, grow hair and cure baldness.

It is because of what Rexall "93" Hair Tonic has done and our sincere faith in its goodness that we want you to try it at our risk. Two sizes, 50c. and $1.00. Sold only at our store.—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury, corner George and Charlotte street.

STEAMER IS WRECKED AND THREE DROWNED

Special to The Examiner:

HALIFAX, N.S., MARCH 24.—Three men were drowned out of 125 passengers and a crew aboard the Reid, Newfoundland, steel steamer, Bruce, which struck a rock and was wrecked at Port Nova this morning, on her way to Louisburg. This is the second time the Bruce has been wrecked near the same place. The passengers, who were saved were landed in life boats at Nancy Cove.

Further information about the wreck of the Steamer Bruce indicates that the crew worked with traditional British heroism, rescuing their passengers in life boats. All the passengers—women first—were landed in safety in a fearful gale, and the cold and darkness of night. The four men lost were the crew of the last boat, which was swept away and overturned.

MANIACS' PLOT TO KILL GUARDS DISCOVERED

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, MARCH 24.—All the inmates of the Hospital of the Criminally Insane here are in chains this morning, as the result of a plot last night by ten dangerous maniacs to kill the night guards who were in charge of them. The plot had been brewing for a long time. Files and heavy iron bars were passed into the cells and the signal was about to be given when one of the conspirators took a fit and gave away the whole business.

TROOPS NEEDED AT TRIAL OF THE CAMORRA

Special to The Examiner:

VITERBO, ITALY, MARCH 24.—Troops were brought here from Rome to-day to guard the trial of the Camorists, so great and furious has the crowd become. Added interest was given to the trial to-day, by the fact that Gennara Abbatemaggeo, the alleged informer, was called to give evidence. All Italy hates the spy informer, and it was feared there would be public demonstration against him.

SUCCESSFUL SALE IS DRAWING TO A CLOSE

The mammoth sale of the enormous stock of H. LeBrun & Co., which has attained such great proportions while being conducted, is now nearing its close. To-morrow, Saturday, will be the last day of the sale, and finds the story practically cleared out of many lines, and the stock so reduced in all departments that an adjustment of the estate can now be made much more readily. Whatever disposition is made of the business it will now be possible to re-open with a practically new stock, a matter of congratulation all round. To make such an immense clearance in so short a time, the prices had to be particularly attractive, and the wonderful bargain giving has been the talk of the country.

A grand finish is expected for to-morrow, when price inducements will be made the feature.

Mr. Bell Urges The Completion Of Trent Canal Is Bound To Be Success

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Since there is so much said at this juncture about the deepening of the Welland, and the building of the Georgian Bay Ship Canal, I beg to say something in favour of the speedy completion of the Trent Waterway Canal. Barge navigation. If the above mentioned fifty million dollars deepening the Welland Canal which would be of more benefit to New York than to Montreal. On the Trent Valley waterway there is only twenty miles of actual canal on the whole route of two hundred miles of waterway, between Lake Huron and Lake Ontario. Would it be wise to deepen the Welland Canal on our boundary line before we complete the Trent Valley waterway. The circuitous route by the Welland Canal could not compare with the short route of the Trent Valley waterway. If the above mentioned fifty million dollars were spent on the Trent Valley waterway inland short route as a ship canal, it would secure for Montreal the key of the North West trade.

Even with barge navigation, the Trent Valley waterway is bound to be a great success.

Comparative Costs.—I may here with give comparative cost of freight by water and rail. It has been proved by actual test that a single tow boat can transport at one trip from Ohio to New Orleans 29,000 tons of coal loaded on barges. Estimating in this way, the boat and its tow, worked by a few men, carries as much freight to its destination as 3,000 cars and 100 locomotives manned by 600 men, could transport. No one can estimate the loss that Canada is suffering, and especially Montreal and Quebec, by the non-completion of the Trent Valley waterway.

Sincerely yours,
JOHN BELL.

HOUSE AND CONTENTS UTTERLY DESTROYED

CLYDESDALE, MARCH 24.—Mr. Stephen Scott was a heavy loser through a fire which utterly destroyed his house a few days ago. The cause of the blaze is unknown, but the fire had gained considerable headway before being discovered, and Mr. Scott lost some time in trying to extinguish the flames, without avail. He then devoted himself to the task of trying to save the contents and succeeded in getting out a separator and some other machinery.

But no charge will be laid, for the young man meant no harm. His father sent him $200, of which $40 was for tuition in a certain college, and the remainder for board and expenses for the necessary six or eight months. Before enrolling, however, the son looked around, and, hearing of another college, requiring but one-half the fees and one-fourth the time, he investigated carefully, and decided on the 30-day Style-in-bic System of Shorthand at the Moon College, 294-296 Yonge street, Toronto. He started his course on September 3rd, 1910, graduated after 28 days' study, and has already earned over four months' salary. The $167, along with his present earnings, are on deposit in one of the city banks, and the father, of course, is reconciled.

HELPS THE TALC INDUSTRY.

A despatch from Trenton states that men who are thoroughly conversant with the mining interests of Hastings county are of the opinion that the reciprocity treaty with the United States will be a good thing for the back portion of this county. It is a well-known fact that Hastings and Haliburton contain valuable mineral deposits that have never yet been fully developed. Take the talc industry, for example. It is claimed that this cannot be profitably developed to a large extent, unless free access is gained to the great markets south of us. Unground talc is now shipped to some extent to the United States, and some ground talc has been disposed of in European markets.

One manager of a North Hastings talc industry has stated that if the proposed tariff becomes law he will be able to employ twice the number of men he does now, and double his output. He believes that there are other large talc deposits in the county, and that free access to the United States markets would lead to their discovery and development. Other economic mineral which, under present conditions, it would not be profitable to mine would, under changed conditions, be advantageously shipped to the United States. Their mining would give employment to hundreds of men, and create a better home market for farm produce.

SLIGHTLY MISLEADING.

Hon. Clifford Sifton, for ability and eminence of service and standing is easily the foremost among the opponents of the reciprocity agreement. That many of his arguments are specious is to be expected; a weak cause renders the use of arguments of rather thin texture excusable if not justifiable. But distinctly misleading arguments that are not supported by facts or conditions are not quite worthy of a gentleman whose facile oratory and capacity for thinking on his feet, should make him independent of straining or warping facts, even by inadvertence, to sustain a contention.

Speaking in Montreal, Mr. Sifton, dealing with the desirability of conserving our raw material, for industrial conversion in this country, instances pulp wood, which, as he said, and, as every one knows, gains a tenfold economic value from manufacture at home; argued the importance of home manufacture, with which everybody will agree, and which the Canadian negotiators of the agreement fully appreciated. But no one can agree with his deduction. Mr. Sifton went on to say

"The great beneficiaries of the agreement will be the American Newspaper Association, the Chicago Beef Trust, the United States Steel Company, the Minneapolis Milling Trust and the Hill railway interests."

Now Mr. Sifton should know, and doubtless does know as does anybody who has read the agreement, now under consideration, that Canadian pulp wood interests are not in the slightest degree adversely affected, nor the interests of the American Newspaper Association promoted, by the agreement. Hon Mr. Fielding in presenting the agreement, on Jan 26th, made this clear. In this regard he said:

> Our American friends were anxious for some tariff change in relation to these articles. We ourselves were anxious for some tariff changes. As respects certain grades of pulp and paper, mechanically ground pulp, chemical pulp, common printing aper, known as newsprint, and the common pasteboard and the cheaper articles of paper other than newsprint, or common paper, up to a limited value of four cents per pound, we believed that we could compete with our American friends on these particular articles and that it was desirable we should have free trade in them. As to the paper of a more advanced quality, I doubt if we would be able to compete with them and we did not take that class of paper into our negotiations. But as respects pulp of its various kinds and common newsprint paper and common pasteboard and common paper of all kinds running to the value of four cents per pound, we would have been quite willing to have reciprocity in them. They said: We are quite willing to do that if you provide that the regulations which exist in some of your provinces with regard to the shipment of pulpwood shall be removed. Of course, there could be but one answer to that. We have nothing to do with the provincial regulations. These regulations have been made by the provicial governments in accordance with what they believed to be the best intrests of their respective provinces, and whether they are good or bad regulations was not for us to debate with our friends of the United States. And so we had to say to them: If you propose to put any such limitations upon the arrangement we cannot object to your doing for yourselves what you think best respecting the terms and conditions upon which you will admit our paper into your country; you have the right to impose these conditions, and if they do not suit Canada no harm is done; but we on our side will not agree to make paper and pulp and these articles free in Canada until you have made them free into your country from every province and part of the Dominion of Canada. So, the matter stands in this way, that they will put in their tariff, as set forth in their correspondence with us, an item that these various grades of pulp and paper shall be made free if there be no regulations, either in the form of an export duty or in the form of the provincial regulations interfering with the shipments of pulpwood. Whenever that condition arises they will make paper free. We said: "All right, but that is no good to us and we will not make your paper free in Canada until you remove the restriction."

Mr. Fielding was desirious of having pulp and the cheaper grades of paper in which we could compete successfully placed on the free list. It is obvious that there would be no advantage of keeping for Canada the great advantages of manufacturing pulp wood at home unless we had a ready and convenient market. He, therefore, met the request of the United States with an offer of reciprocal free pulp and paper, but the United States would not consent, unless Canada "would procure removal of the provincial embargo upon the export of pulp wood in the log"—our effective protection against indiscriminate slaughter of our pulpwood resources, and an assurance of home manufacture to the benefit of Canadian labour and capital. Mr. Fielding, representing Canada, had no desire or power to interfere with the action and policy of the provinces, which Quebec has confirmed and which Ontario will adhere to with equal tenacity.

It was not quite ingenuous for Mr. Sifton to create the impression by his speech that "American capital would descend" upon our pulp wood and slaughter it. He should have known and should have said, if he wished to discuss pulp wood at all, that Canada's attitude will attract American capital to operate in the manufacture of pulp and paper in Canada. A news paragraph in the Mail and Empire states that United States capitalists have arranged for the establishment in the Province of Quebec of paper mills of 400-ton capacity, requiring 40,000 horse power and involving a capital expenditure of 10 million dollars. If the hill won't come to Mahomet, Mahomet must go to the hill.

The Canadian commissioners, not only in the matter of pulp wood, but in other ways, have consulted Canadian interests. At the beginning of the negotiations Mr. Fielding made it plain that Canada would not for a moment entertain or discuss the United States suggestion of reciprocity in manufactured articles; and Sir Wilfrid declared, "We have not hurt the manufacturers and will not do so."

Mr. Sifton's misleading, if inadvertent, argument as regards pulp wood, is considered worthy of emphasis, for it is a sample in kind, of the maliciously misleading arguments and statements advanced by unscrupulous newspapers and politicians against an agreement, designed to benefit the great soil producing interests of the country, and through their increased prosperity, all classes of citizens.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

We are accustomed to speak with a shiver of the marrow-freezing cold of the Canadian west, but on March 22nd an Alberta farmer had finished seeding a sixty-acre field with spring wheat.

The Kingston parson who declared that he would shoot a woman who would wear a harem skirt was a little severe. He might reasonably exclaim, "shoot the skirt" but shooting the wearer would put him in Cain's class.

The McGill students have sent a note to Hon Mr. Sifton, stating that it was all due to mixing politics with reciprocity — there was nothing personal intended in their dumping him out of his carriage, as they did the other night in Montreal—

It's all very well to dissemble your love:
But why did you kick me down stairs?

The farmers of Canada are not afraid of competition with United States farmers as it would materialize by the adoption of the reciprocity agreement, but the manufacturers are afraid of a competition that only exists in their imagination and in the dim and doubtful future. The manufacturers have had — and still have—their innings for a generation, and now the farmers want theirs.

OBSTRUCTING LICENSE REDUCTION

It is much to be regretted, remarks the Globe, that while the Ontario Government has been giving to the cause of temperance with one hand during the closing session it has been taking away with the other. The adoption of the initiative and referendum with regard to license reduction is certainly a concession to the cause of temperance. On a petition of ten per cent. of the electors it is obligatory on a municipal Council to submit a license reduction by-law to popular vote. If it is carried the Council must put the by-law through, that the will of the people may be carried out by the established machinery. This certainly provides a new and effective scope for temperance work. In the eleventh-hour rush that characterizes the passing of important legislation there may be serious blunders. It may be possible to confuse the vote by a multiplicity of petitions. If the prohibition workers circulate a serious petition they may be intercepted by an obstructive petition from their opponents, asking for a reduction that would be of no material consequence; in fact, the Council may have a multitude of petitions, and a vote on a merely obstructive petition would tie up all such efforts for three years.

With a combination of haste and incompetence blundering is inevitable, and legislation need not be expected to carry out the purpose intended. But the deliberate taking away of the power of municipal Councils to assume the initiative, and make reductions without the burden of a popular campaign must be discussed from a different standpoint. The cutting off of forty licenses in Toronto and six in Hamilton (result from initiative by the municipal Councils and a popular vote, in Brantford the City Council, without a vote of the electors, reduced the number of tavern licenses from sixteen to nine, and the number of shop licenses from five to four. The power to effect such changes is now taken from the Councils. In Peterborough the Council cut off seven tavern licenses and one shop license, leaving thirteen taverns and three shops. In Woodstock, where there were seven taverns and two shops, there were two tavern licenses cut off by the Council. There have been eighteen licenses cut off by the Councils of these three cities, and the results have been so beneficial that it is hard to understand the Government's policy of depriving municipal Councils of power to continue the good work. The adoption of the initiative and referendum did not in any way necessitate the taking away of authority which the municipal Councils have wisely exercised and which has produced excellent results. The scope for activity which has been closed will seriously interfere with an important line of practical work in the cause of temperance.

SUFFERED THREE YEARS

Till Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Cured His Kidney Trouble

There are few diseases that cause more acute suffering than Kidney Trouble, and Mr. F. A. Thomas, of Sudbury, Ont., is one of those who know it. He writes:

"For over three years I suffered from kidney disease. First I thought I had sprained my back, for suddenly the pain would catch the small of my back and it would be impossible for me to straighten myself up for several minutes. A dull ache across the kidneys was always present, my urine was thick and cloudy, and passing it caused a burning, scalding pain. Tried medicines, but they failed. I was advised to try Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, as they had cured my wife years before. A few boxes affected a complete cure. I now enjoy the blessings of good health, which is due to this remedy."

Don't neglect kidney trouble—it's too dangerous as well as too painful. That old, reliable family remedy Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, has cured thousands and will cure you. It is equally effective in curing constipation and its attendant evils, biliousness, indigestion and sick headaches, and in purifying the blood. 25c. a box at your druggist's. 10

MILLERS WITH NEW $400,000 MILL ON THE BENEFITS OF RECIPROCITY

I firmly believe that the millers of Canada are changing their attitude toward reciprocity," was the significant statement made yesterday by Mr. Douglas Campbell of the Queen City Flour Mills, West Toronto.

Striking evidence of how the Campbell Milling Company, which owns and operates the Queen City Flour Mills, views the prospects for the milling industry under reciprocity is the announcement that it will build a 3,000-barrel flour mill at Midland this spring involving an expenditure of over $400,000. Contracts have not yet been let, but the plans of the company have been fully decided upon, and construction on the new plant will be commenced at an early date.

Speaking to The Globe yesterday Mr. Campbell said he believed Canadian millers had not taken a broad view of reciprocity in its effect upon their industry. In view of the session of Congress opening next week and the probable action of the Democratic party, many millers, he believes, are beginning to see that reciprocity will be a boon to their interests, and not a detriment, as at first surmised.

Objection of the Millers.

"The objection of the millers was," he said, "that reciprocity would let our Canadian wheat into the United States free, and American millers would mill that wheat and obtain a high price for the by-products. In this way they would lessen the cost of a barrel of flour. The price of by-products in Canada is now very low. If the American miller can obtain more for his by-products it would follow that he can make flour cheaper They contended that if our men Fielding and Patterson, had permitted bran and shorts, the by-products of a flour mill, to go into the United States free, we would have been in a position to compete with American millers for export business, as, of course the whole matter treats with the export trade.

"Bran and shorts are now bringing a high price in the States, but previous to last year there were times when the United States sent by-products to Canada and paid the duty on them. I think that in 1905 and 1906 we bought $800,000 worth of bran and shorts from American millers. One year Canadian mills may be unusually busy, and as a result have large quantities of bran and shorts to offer. The price received for them depends altogether upon supply and demand, and when the mills are busier they have more feed to offer. Consequently they force it on the market and take a lower price. Next year it may be that American millers are busy, and the markets flooded with by-products from their flour mills. The price would then be lower. It just so happens that this year Canadian millers have been unusually busy, our markets flooded with feeds, and prices forced down to below what Americans are obtaining for the same goods at home.

"It is not fair to say that the present existing conditions may be taken as a criterion, and in fact it is only reasonable to be so beneficial to American millers and have such a deleterious effect on the industry in Canada, the supply of feed stuff from American mills will be consequently very great and the mills at home not be manufacturing so much. It would follow that prices would rule higher here and lower in the United States.

Changing Their Views.

"I think as a matter of fact that the millers here are beginning to change their sentiments. The greatest feature of all is that the great lakes are going to be for all time the highway for the transportation of grain from the west to the eastern seaports, and mills situated on this highway, where natural advantages such as cheap power and labour, can be obtained, can and will compete with all other mills in the world's market. I don't see that American interests can ever hope to mill flour more cheaply for export trade that it can be milled in Ontario on the highway to the seaport.

"There have been no option markets in Canada for the purchasing of winter wheat supplies for future delivery. We can go to Winnipeg and buy wheat for May delivery in January, but this wheat is the hard spring variety, and is used for bread factories throughout the country. It is not the wheaat that is required to make flour for biscuit manufacturers. The flour required for this latter purpose is only ground in Ontario from fall or winter wheat. With reciprocity and the opening up of our sources of supply, it would be possible for the millers of winter wheat flour to buy their supplies in Chicago for delivery through future months. To anyone interested in the making of contracts that will run for six months ahead this is a very vital feature. As it is now, to make such a contract in good faith and to be absolutely protected, it is necessary for a miller to accumulate a supply of wheat sufficient to grind the flour he has sold at the time it is bought and then carry the wheat in store until the completion of the contract.

Further Reductions May Come.

"It is reasonable to suppose that the Democrats, who will have a majority in both the Congress and Senate at the next session, will feel disposed, being pledged to tariff reform, to make further reductions in the tariffs between Canada and the United States. As the high cost of living is the great question in the United States, what would be more natural than that they should reduce the duty on some of the staples?

"I believe that millers in Canada now are looking to free entry into the United States of our flour, and if this comes about, the impetus given to the industry in Canada will be tremendous. The Government having expressed themselves to the effect that no further reductions will be given by Canada on manufactured goods, it would follow that the great New England markets would be opened up to the Canadian millers while the American mills would still be prohibited from doing business in Canada by our present tariff."

ELLIOT'S

THE MESSAGE OF THE CHIMES

Hark to the bells!
From ivied tower on eastern hill they're pealing,
And sweet the thoughts that in our hearts arise—
As down the city streets we hear their music stealing—
Of concord blest, and truly Christian joys.

Dear chiming bells!
Preach charity, sum up the Master's teaching,
That Law is Love, and One is King o'er all,
That Hate's the coin of hell, and mindful of this preaching,
We'll brothers be who hear the Saviour's call.

Ring out sweet bells!
And may your notes drown aught of petty faction,
Your music heal the wounds of old discord,
And may your message be to all a call to action,
In harmony to battle for the Lord.

—REV. D. A. CASEY.

Campbellford, Ont.

HONOURED ON EVE OF REMOVAL TO PETERBOROUGH

Mr. and Mrs. D. G. Moloney, of Douro, Presented With Chairs and an Eulogistic Address as Mark of Esteem.

ARE HIGHLY POPULAR

Last Monday evening Mr. and Mrs. D. G. Moloney, of Douro, were made the recipients of a very handsome and serviceable present in the form of two Morris chairs and also a gold-headed cane to Mr. Moloney.

Mr. and Mrs. Moloney are moving to Peterborough and the presents were a token of the high esteem in which they are both held by their numerous friends. There were about fifty guests all of whom enjoyed themselves to the full extent. Games and music were participated in, after which refreshments were served.

The following address was read by Mr. M. D. Kennedy, while Mrs. McCue and Mr. P. Fitzpatrick made the presentation:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Moloney,—We, your friends and neighbours having learned of your departure from amongst us, feel that we cannot let you go, without some recognition and reference to your long abode and pleasant relations which always existed between us.

We also recognize that you did not live for yourself alone from the fact that you were always willing, both in private and public life to lend a helping hand to all those in need. During your long representation both in your local municipality as well as the county, we were always assured that we had a representative who looked after the interests of those whom he represented in a most efficient manner. We ask you to accept these gifts as a slight token of our deep regret and love for you, and while we deeply deplore you removal from among us, we all join in wishing you success, prosperity and long life in your new home.

Signed on behalf of the assembly,
JOHN DELANEY,
MICHAEL RENNEDY.

Mr. Maloney made a very suitably reply, expressing his sincere thanks for the very complimentary remarks contained in the address, and was pleased to see so many intimate friends who had been associates since early youth.

Although he regretted to sever his connections with them, yet it was a pleasure to know that his new home would not be far distant and hoped to meet them occasionally.

Having given up farming he would be classed as a retired or possibly a tired farmer, but in the beautiful gift presented, those tired feelings would soon be dispelled.

Referring to the topic of the day, Reciprocity, he considered the farmers had very bright prospects, and perhaps he had disposed of his farm just a little too soon. Again, in conclusion, on behalf of Mrs. Maloney, he said that words were inadequate to express their deep appreciation of those magnificent gifts.

By KINGSLAND CROSBY

He was interrupted by a passenger who pushed her way to the window, asking half a dozen questions about arrival and departure of trains.

Barrett swore under his breath. Winthrop glanced uneasily at a clock on the wall. Only Hambidge remained calm, undisturbed.

When the woman had gone away the agent began again.

"Well, it was about then I could get the exact date by looking up my records—that the P. & E. express from Philadelphia pulled in here an hour late, on account of a coal wreck. She's due at 2.25 in the afternoon, and the B. N. Y. & P. down the road leaves at 3.22, but was held here five minutes so P. & E. passengers could jump across the platform and make a close connection. It was mighty close, too, that day. There was a dozen or so of 'em changing cars, and I noticed a party of four particularly—two men and two women."

"Was one of the men a priest and another a doctor?" Barrett demanded, unable to hold in longer. "And was one of the women a tall young lady dressed in brown and white?"

"No, not at all; nothing of the kind. One of the men was smooth-shaven and had dark spectacles on, and the other was a stout old fellow with white hair and whiskers."

"Interesting very," Hambidge remarked imperturbably. "Your powers of description are admirable, Mr. Agent. And how about the two women?"

"Thank ye, sir. Well, as I was saying, one woman was shorter than common, and some hefty, with a veil. The other was taller and wore a Quaker bonnet, so I couldn't see her face at all. She was the sick one that the men had to help along. She looked weak and tottered-like when she walked."

Winthrop and Barrett exchanged quick glances of disappointment. They were on the wrong track after all!

Hambidge's hopes also sank to zero—but he did not give up. "Did they catch their train on the other road?" he asked, picking up his handbag, preparatory to moving away.

"Yes, but they didn't have time to come in and buy any tickets," the agent replied. "Don't go yet," he added, "the funny part of my story is pretty close now. . . . . Well, as I was saying, the B. N. Y. & P. had been held five minutes, and the conductor was hollerin' 'All aboard!' and most everybody was aboard, but these two women and two men. The men had three big leather satchels that looked heavy, and they were trying to hurry the sick lady in the big bonnet down the platform, when they dropped one of the satchels, and it bust wide open, scattering things right and left. There was a brown dress trimmed with white, and tan coloured low shoes, and white gloves, and a white parasol with the handle broke off so it fitted into the satchel, and brushes and ribbons, and knick-knacks of all kinds you can think of. I almost died laughing, for the B. N. Y. & P. engineer was clanging his bell, and the conductor was holding his watch in his hand, and hollering 'em to hurry—and then the satchel busted open, and he lost two minutes more while I helped pick up all those duds and jam 'em back into the satchel.

"But they got the sick lady on board, after a while, and the other woman, too, and all them big satchels and the B. N. Y. & P. pulled out nine minutes late, snorting down the road mad as a hungry bull pup!"

The agent threw back his head and laughed heartily at the scene he had called up. Winthrop and his friends joined the hilarious nurse with instant tact.

"Where was it they dropped the satchel?" Hambidge asked, when the laughter had subsided.

"They dropped it just about where you found the gold locket a few days after, out on the platform."

Barrett gently but firmly pushed the agent aside and took his place at the window. "Let's see the locket," he suggested.

The agent stepped across his office to a small safe and drew forth a sealed envelope which he opened.

"Here it is," he said, handing the golden disc to the New Englander.

"Yes, that's it," said Wintrop in low tones, leaning forward.

"Do you know them people?" the agent asked in surprise.

"We are friends of the sick lady," said Barrett, "and we want to take this locket to her."

"Dunno as I ought to let anybody but her have it," the agent began. "You see, I'm responsible to the company——"

"Perfectly right!" Barrett assented. "I don't question that in the slightest. So I am going to protect you by handing you this five-dollar bill. . . . There. Now, if you don't get the locket back you can be sure it is in the hands of the owner. And if the owner doesn't call for it in 30 days—the sick lady, I mean—you are to keep the money for your trouble, as a sort of reward."

He carefully placed the ornament in his wallet, whereupon Hambidge spoke: "Where does the train go to that they took?"

"Oh, she goes down the road through Titusville and Oil City to Pittsburg."

"What's the conductor's name on that train?"

"Bill Sperry—been running her ever since I can remember. He'll be along here now at 3.22 if he's on time."

"Thank you," said Barrett. "We are going down to join our friend, and give her back the locket. Meanwhile we can have some dinner."

Two hours and more must elapse before the train arrived which was to carry them along the banks of Oil Creek toward Pittsburg, and much of this was spent in discussing the possible developments ahead of them, and in laying plans.

"That gang might have taken Eleanor almost anywhere," said Winthrop, as they were returning to the station. "They could have left the train at any one of a score of towns down the road here—so what are we going to do?"

"Leave that to me," said Hambidge "I'll talk to Sperry, the conductor, and the chances all are that he would remember the group, especially because of the sick lady, and because of the additional delay to his train when that leather satchel flew open on the platform."

"That's so," Barrett agreed. "You go ahead, Bill, and Sheldon and I will act as silent supporters."

"Then, again," Hambidge went on, "the conductor would be sure to remember where they got off his train because they didn't have time to buy tickets of the agent, here, and paid cash fares, I presume."

These deductions proved to be true. When their train on the B. N. Y. & P. came along they got aboard, and Hambidge unhesitatingly sought the conductor.

"Last Sunday," he began, "I picked up, at the Corry station, a valuable gold ornament belonging to a sick lady, who had travelled down here with you a few days previous. She wore a Shaker bonnet, and was with another woman and two men. Do you remember the group?"

"Yes, sir," the conductor replied in emphatic tones. "That ornament must have rolled out of the big handbag when it fell open on the platform."

"Exactly," said Hambidge. "That's just the way it happened. And as I was coming down here to-day I thought I'd like to look them up and give it back to her. Did they go straight through to Pittsburg with you, or did they stop off somewhere along the road?"

"They got off at Titusville," the conductor replied.

"At Titusville?" Hambidge repeated, to make sure.

"That's it. . . . Are you getting off there?"

In Dread of Something

You Can Scarcely Tell What—It May Be Hysteria, Insanity, Nervous Collapse

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

When the nervous system breaks down you live in a constant dread of something terrible about to happen.

Physical suffering cannot be compared to the mental agonies of the nervous wreck who fears that his mind may give way or that his body may be paralyzed.

In this condition you must suffer alone for friends cannot understand or sympathize with you. They tell you to cheer up or that it is only imagination.

You can only throw off this depression when the nerve cells are restored to health by such treatment as Dr Chase's Nerve Food. Your digestive system has failed to supply proper nourishment to the nerves and you are compelled to seek aid from other sources.

It will take some patience and persistent treatment, but there is no way by which you can so certainly restore health and vigour as by the use of Dr Chase's Nerve Food.

The best time to restore the nervous system is long before such a critical condition is reached. Such symptoms as sleeplessness, headaches, nervous palpitation, muscular weakness, loss of energy, failure of memory and power of concentration, irritability and discouragement tell of a failure of the nervous system and warn you of the approach of serious trouble.

Dr Chase's Nerve Food 50 cents a box, 5 boxes for $2.50; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

REV. CANON DAVIDSON'S SERVICES APPRECIATED

The last number of St. Cyprian's Parochial Magazine, Toronto, in referring to the late Parochial Mission, says:

"The greatest appreciation of all is due, and is deeply felt, of Canon Davidson's labours amongst us in the recent Mission. Nothing could be plainer than the fact that just the right man was found, in him, for the work here. His intense earnestness and energy, which he so freely poured into the work, without regard to himself, combined with his keen perception of the needs of the case, made, under God, the Mission a real success amongst us. It has awakened a new interest in St. Cyprian's in the locality; it has brought home to us all old truth with new force; it has infused a warmth of feeling amongst us which was sorely needed; and it has given us a new vision of what the work of a Christian congregation should be.

For all this, and for the fact that Canon Davidson freely gave us ten days of precious time out of his own absorbing work in Peterborough, we express our most grateful appreciation."

In the same number it is announced that "the simple, attractive evangelistic services of the recent mission will be carried on every Wednesday evening throughout Lent" in an effort to deepen and extend the interest evidently aroused. The first of these was attended by a large congregation.

A WOMAN'S BACK.

Not One Woman In Twenty Has a Stong Back.

The kidneys are to blame nine times out of ten.

When the blood isn't properly filtered the poisons that ought to be carried off by the kidneys are sent back through the system, and it's hardly to be wondered that backaches and lame backs come to make life miserable.

Doan's Kidney Pills are a specific for all kidney troubles. They begin by expelling all the poisonous matter from the kidneys, and then heal the delicate membranes and make their action regular and natural.

Mrs. A. H. Hutton, Jr., Molkeary, Man., writes:—"Two years ago last spring I had a very severe pain in the small of my back. When I would rise it seemed as if my back would break. My kidneys were very badly out of order, and I would have to get up three or four times during the night. I took one box of Doan's Kidney Pills and they effected a cure."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box or 3 for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by the T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

If ordering direct specify "Doan's."

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

We regret to announce that a telegram was received this morning from Miss A. C. Macdonald, stating that owing to physical exhaustion she has been obliged to cancel all engagements. We trust that later we may be able to again announce Miss Macdonald's coming. In the meantime the Sunday afternoon meeting in St. Paul's church and the Tuesday afternoon drawing-room meetings are cancelled.

We would again announce that the books ordered during Miss Blodgett's visit have arrived.

Next Friday evening we are to enjoy a stereoptican lecture on Labrador. Dr. Marah has made many very fine slides from his own photos, and will give a vivid picture of life in Labrador.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

TOM MARKS' COMPANY.

Stock companies may come and stock companies may go, but Tom Marks and his popular company of stock players seem to go on for ever, and what is more gratifying, never for an instant does the popularity of the attraction seem to waver. Mr. Marks and his company are paying a visit to the Grand Opera House just now, and were given an enthusiastic welcome back to Peterborough by a very large audience. The opening vehicle "A Fool and His Money," a funny comedy drama, with plenty of opportunities for clever work on the part of the cast, served to show that the company is stronger than ever, and the offering won much favour. The specialties were up to the Marks standard and were thoroughly enjoyed, the singing of illustrated songs by Miss Arline Marks making a big hit. Mr. Marks himself is as funny as ever, and he is well supported by his company. There is a special bargain matinee to-morrow, when the prices will be twenty cents for adults and ten cents for children. Each child is expected to bring a potato and a prize of $1.00 will be given to the person bringing the largest. The potatoes will be given to some of the charitable institutions. Last year when a similar contest was held two barrels of potatoes were collected at the door, one being sent to the House of Providence and the other to the Protestant Home.

PETERBORO' HEALTH ASSOCIATION IS TO BE INCORPORATED

Officers Were Elected and Other Business Transacted Last Evening—Mr. W. H. Moore is the President.

SHOULD BE SUCCESS

At a meeting in the council chamber last night of those interested in the crusade against tuberculosis in Peterborough considerable progress was made in the movement and the Peterborough Health Association, as it was decided to call the society, starts under most encouraging auspices. The attendance last night on account of other meetings and events was not large, but those present were enthusiastic and there seems no reason to expect that the new organization will be anything but a success.

Mr. W. H. Moore was elected to the chair and the chief business taken up was a verbal report from Mr. J. W. Bennet from the committee appointed at a previous meeting to work out some of the details. Mr. Bennet stated that the committee had decided upon the Peterborough Health Association as a suitable name, and last night's meeting unanimously endorsed the recommendation.

The committee also considered that it would be advisable to apply for incorporation under the Ontario Companies Act and this clause of the report was also adopted without any opposition.

Thirdly the committee recommended the election of the following officers for the Association, this recommendation, like the others, being approved of by the meeting.

President—W. H. Moore, K.C.

Vice-Presidents — Rev. Father McColl, Dr. Boucher, T. F. Matthews.

Secretary—Dr. G. S. Cameron.

Treasurer—Mr. McLeod.

Executive Committee—The officers and the following: Dr. MacPherson, Medical Health Officer, Dr. McNulty, chairman of the Board of Health, Judge Huycke, Dr. Halliday, Dr. Neal, R. C. Braund, J. W. Bennet, E. A. Peck, Dr. M. A. Morrison, W. G. Morrow, and two representatives from the Ministerial Association, to be appointed by them.

An honourary president is to be elected.

Rev. Canon Davidson submited that the Association should not merely confine its attention to a fight against tuberculosis, but should in a general way keep its eye upon the question of health and co-operate with the Board of Health. He thought that the city had not perhaps been sufficiently cleanly in the past and the Association might be able to be of considerable importance in this connection.

Mr. Bennet pointed out that the agreement of the Association covered this point pretty thoroughly.

The agreement was read and adopted by the meeting.

A motion that the meeting should aprove of the newly appointed executive drafting the by-laws of the Association was carried.

The executive committee was given power to proceed with the incorporation of the Association and to prepare and adopt the necessary by-laws

$300 WORTH OF BOOKS ORDERED FOR THE LIBRARY

Library Board Has a Busy Session—Reports Received From Several of the Committees

MORE ASSISTANCE

A special meeting of the Public Library Board was held on Wednesday night, with the following in attendance: Messrs. E. H. D. Hall, chairman; Mayor Morrow, T. F. Matthews, D. Walker, J. Corkery, H. Ritchie, A. Mowat, H. R. H. Kenner, Dr. McNulty.

Among other business transacted, the chairman brought up the question of providing extra assistance to the Librarian, and it was moved by Mr. Morrow, seconded by Mr. Matthews that Miss Rose be engaged to assist in the Library for one month at $25.00.—Carried.

Mr. Walker, chairman of the Library Committee, reported verbally that books to the value of $97.60 had been received and placed on the shelves and that about $300 worth had been ordered.

The Property Committee presented the following report:

1. The application of the Janitor for an increase in salary was considered and we recommend that he be paid at the rate of $400 per year, beginning March 1st, 1911.

2. We recommend that the contract of removal of ashes be given to H. Edmondson, carter, at 40c per load, and that the Janitor keep an account of the loads and certify to the accounts.

3. We recommend that the Chairman of the Board be authorized to sign a contract with the Otonabee Power Company for lighting the Library for a term of five years at $132 per year, net, payable monthly for the basement and main floor, and the upper floor to be supplied by meter.

Finance Committee.

The Finance Committee recommended that the refund of $5.00 to F. Dolerski, being deposit paid by him as security for books loaned, be approved.

The payment of the following accounts was also recommended:

Times Printing Company, $7.08; Peterborough Examiner $41.70; Review Printing Co., $12.01; John Dougall & Sons, $1.00; Wm. Weatherstone, $14.70; W. H. Hamilton, $3.20; Higgins' Hardware Co., $3.75; A. A. Fowler, $1.60; Albert Birdnell $97.60; Davis Thompson Co., $6.90; Peterborough Typewriter Co., $2.30; F. C. Cubitt, 35c; Trebilcock Bros., $5.10; R. J. Soden, $4.45, $83.05, $12.10; Ontario Coal Co., $73.30.

3,500 TONS OF BLOOD

Scientists say that this amount of blood is purified by the liver and kidneys of a human being in a year. Is it any wonder they get tired and sluggish and require the assistance of Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills to arouse them to action and to restore their vigour.

"THE ROSARY"

Rowland and Clifford's new play "The Rosary," which has just closed three successful runs in New York, Boston and Chicago, comes to the Grand next Wednesday, March 29. The discriminating public will then be given an opportunity to see pictured before them a decided answer to the growing unrest and irreligion of our times. Not that "The Rosary" is a decision merely; it is more. It is a faithful picture of the misery and unhappiness that comes upon a man who lacks faith in the supreme good and its inevitable triumphs in our world.

A typical American family is taken as a fair example of every-day conditions that obtain throughout the United States. The husband, a man immersed in business, the exacting business of Wall Street and the Stock Exchange.

Little by little he has fallen away from faith of his fathers, that faith that brought our Republic into being. He has replaced it by an agnostic attitude all too prevalent in our day and time. The wife believes—her confidence in an all wise, all pervading good has not been shaken; and so when storm and stress comes, the man with no anchor is swept away by the storm of agony; the woman remains steadfast, moored by her faith to outride the tempest.

Through all the heartbreak and tears, through all the agony and anguish, clear and serene moves the wonderful figure of a modern Catholic priest, whose life has been dedicated to God and the service of his fellow men. It is his clear, spiritual vision that sees through the web that has been woven about the two people whom he loves and it is his faith and God-given power that sets them free.

It is a wonderful preachment of faith's mighty power, of the saving grace of the good that lies all about us.

The tremendous story, powerful in its simplicity, is interwoven with the higher threads of sane humour, of the sort that one loves to take away from the theatre and use over in idle moments

CHIMES FUND DONATIONS CONTINUE TO COME IN

Individual subscriptions continue to be received by the treasurer of the Chimes Fund and the public support has been so general that the closing of the subscription list has now come within measurable distance. It is practically certain that the total amount will be fully raised before the bells arrive. Marathon Lodge No. 39, Knights of Pythias, has sent in $7, which it is understood, was raised by the individual contributions of members. The letter accompanying the donation expressed the pleasure of the members of the lodge at being able to contribute to the Chimes Fund.

SPECIAL SERMONS TO CONTINUE ON SUNDAY

The subject next Sunday evening will be "Why Baptists do not believe in the Pope and Priesthood of the Roman Catholic church."

No offence is intended or will be given, only free scriptural reasons given, why Baptists cannot accept some of the teachings of the Roman Catholic church. These messages are given solely in the interest of "Religious Instruction," for all who care to come. You are welcome.

Owing to the unexpected coming of Professor Gilman of McMaster University, Toronto, in the interests of Christian education, to Park street Baptist church, the Rev. W. C. Riddiford was unable to deliver the fourth sermon in the series he has been giving on "Why Baptists do not believe in some of the doctrines of Rome."

Next Sunday evening Mr. Riddiford will preach the message he was compelled to postpone last Sunday and which was a disappointment to many.

ANNUAL MEETING

Of the Ontario Library Association to be Held in Toronto

The eleventh annual meeting of the Ontario Library Association will be held in Toronto on Easter Monday and Tuesday, April 17 and 18. Special attention will be paid to three features (a) The Work of the Librarian." (b) The Library and Technical Education. (c) Work With Children. The growing interest in public library work in Ontario has been largely fostered by the Association and a large attendance is expected at this annual meeting. Every Public Library Board is requested to send delegates. Particulars may be obtained on application to the secretary, Mr. E. A. Hardie, 81 Collier street, Toronto.

VERY POPULAR

Carroll Piano Club is Being Appreciated by the Public

The Carroll Piano Club offer has proved itself to be something the public appreciates and the proof lies in the fact that already 14 of the fifty pianos have been secured by members. The very easy terms and the many little extras that go to members, such as no interest, free insurance, free tuning, etc. are a big factor in the deal. Messrs. C. J. Carroll & Co. are kept busy at 371 Water street, showing the piano and explaining the conditions to prospective members.

POST CARD COLUMN

Editor Examiner:

Sir.—Dr. Torrey, addressing a meeting of ministerial brethren at Sydney regarding his position on the Higher Criticism said: "The three great leaders of the Higher Criticism were infidels, and I don't care to get my knowledge of theology from such a source. Brethren, in the first place there is nothing new in their alleged discoveries. In spite of all their talk about the 'new views' there is scarcely anything in their theories that is not contained in Tom Paine's "Age of Reason." Indeed, Professor Osgood, who is a Hebrew scholar, stood on the floor of the Baptist Congress at Detroit, Michigan to speak on Higher Criticism. Before discussing the question he said, I would like to read what I conceive to be the few positions that are taken up by the higher destructive critics. He went to work and read off these positions one after the other:

"Now, gentlemen," he said, to the supporters of the Higher Criticism, "is that a fair statement of the position." "Yes," they said. "Well, gentlemen," he replied, "I have been reading verbatim from Tom Paine's Age of Reason."

The undersigned believes the above to be a piece of good wholesome reading for your many readers and I would pass it on.

Yours,
JNO. CARLISLE.

P.S.—We are told that when Tom Paine was dying, his nurse had to fly the room, unable to bear the awful scene.—J. C.

OBITUARY

MRS. JAMES EDGCUMBE.

Death occurred this morning of Mrs James Edgcumbe, at the family residence, 687 Water street. Deceased was a daughter of the late David Lewis, and was born in Belfast, Ireland, 59 years ago. On the death of her father she emigrated to Canada with the rest of the family, and for a short time they resided in the Eastern Provinces. They then moved to Streetsville, where Ellen and another sister secured employment in a large woollen mills. She moved to Cobourg and finally to Peterborough.

In 1874 she was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to James Edgcumbe, by the Rev. Mr. Hooper, a minister of the old Bible Christian denomination on the site where Murray street Baptist church now stands. Shortly after this Mr. and Mrs. Edgcumbe moved to Cobourg where they resided for a period of 13 years, after which they moved to Peterborough and have resided here ever since. She was a member of George street Methodist church. She also took a deep interest in all Christian work. Deceased was of a very tender disposition, ready with benevolence and sympathy and was beloved and highly esteemed by all who knew her. She leaves to mourn her loss besides a sorrowing husband, two daughters and four sisters and three brothers. The daughters are Mrs. Jas. A. Dawson, of Nanton, Alberta, and Miss Ellen Ethel at home. The sisters are Mrs. H. Cole, Simcoe county, Mrs. Wm. Long, Peterborough, Mrs. Jane Gallon, Sedgewick, Alberta, and Mrs. Wm Elliott, of Barrie. The brothers are James of Barrie, John of Simcoe county, and Daniel, of this city.

The funeral will take place on Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock and proceed to Little Lake cemetery for interment. Service will be held at the house at 2.30 p.m. The Rev. I. Couch will officiate.

YESTERDAY IN THE HOUSE

Government Devotes Time to Voting Supplies and Reciprocity is Dropped for the Time Being

SHOE COMBINE CASE

Ottawa, March 24.—The Government evidently intends devoting some days to voting supply to the exclusion of the discussion on reciprocity.

Mr. F. D. Monk (Jacques Cartier) yesterday asked the question: "When will the House resume the reciprocity discussion; has it been shelved for good?" Sir Wilfrid replied: "My hon. friend knows that we are approaching the end of the fiscal year, and added, "the first duty of Parliament is to vote supply and then we will take up other matters."

Regarding the declaration of London, which makes wheat a contraband of war, Sir Wilfrid said: "The provisions of the declaration have been taken into consideration, but the Government has made no representations in reference to it to the Imperial Government. As the whole subject deals with questions of international law, the Government of Canada, not being a sovereign power, did not consider itself justified to make any official representations on such matters, but the question may be discussed informally with the Imperial Government at the next Imperial conference."

Oliver J. Wilcox (North Essex) said he had received a letter from one of his negro constituents, asking if it was true that discrimination was being used by the Immigration Department against intending immigrants on account of their color, and if it was true that a colored man who had passed his examination had been refused by the Marine Department, and transferred to the Department of Agriculture. He was also informed that a colored gentleman had been removed from the census branch on account of his color, and sent to the experimental farm.

Mr. Oliver said there was a strong sentiment in the country against the admission of negroes into Canada. Referring to the exclusion of some negroes in an immigration party, the Minister remarked that they had been treated exactly as other immigrants.

Mr. Fisher declared that there was no foundation for the story that a colored man had passed an examination for the census branch and had been refused. As regards the colored man who had been refused by the Marine Department, his information was that he was unsuitable, and had been sent to the experimental farm.

M. Y. McLean (S. Huron) drew the attention of the Minister of Labor to the fact that injunction proceedings had been taken in Montreal to prevent the board named under the Anti-Combines Act, to proceed with its enquiry into the operations of the United Shoe Machinery Co.

Hon. Mackenzie King said the chairman of the board had advised him of the injunction proceedings, and that counsel had been named to oppose the motion for a writ of injunction.

The Premier informed Mr. Sharpe that before commencing to pay bounties on iron and steel there was no valuation by the Government of the physical assets of the companies. Inspectors were employed to check the products on which bounties were paid. The attention of the Government had not been called to the alleged fact that these companies in receipt of bounties had at any time refused to sell their products to Canadian consumers.

In committee of supply a discussion occurred regarding the possibility of the quarantine relations governing the entry of live stock into Canada being affected by the terms of the reciprocity agreement. The debate was based on a vote of $59,000 required to cover the expenditure for the current fiscal year, under the head of health of animals.

When Mr. Blain introduced the question the Minister said that the quarantine regulations had nothing whatever to do with the trade arrangements. The quarantine regulations would remain in force, and the increased trade in cattle which might arise as a result of the agreement would make no difference.

The House spent the evening in consideration of the supplementary estimates. A number of items were passed, involving a large sum.

The balance will probably be passed Friday.

Quebec Railway Dividend.

Montreal, March 24.—The long-looked for dividend on Quebec Railway was declared yesterday. The dividend is 1 per cent., payable April 15 to shareholders of March 31. It is not quite clear as whether the stock is to go on a 2, 3 or 4 per cent. basis.

Hall for London Oddfellows.

London, March 24.—The Oddfellows of the east London district will erect a handsome new hall right beside the East London town hall, to cost $15,000.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

The Presbyterian Home Mission Board decided to expend $267,000 on the work this year.

R. W. Dillon, assistant secretary of the Public Works Department at Ottawa, and an old newspaperman, is dead.

The Intercolonial freight shed at Truro, N.S., was destroyed by fire with most of its contents. Loss $70,000.

The marriage of Eugene Hebert and Miss Clouard has been annulled by Justice Laurendeau at Montreal, because a Protestant minister tied the knot.

All present indications point to a late opening up of navigation to Montreal this season. The Government ice-breaking vessels are tied up at Three rivers, owing to the thickness of the ice.

Two German scientists, Drs. Leinbach and Loewy, have successfully applied wireless telegraphy for underground communication. The discovery is regarded as highly important in the case of mine disasters.

Talks of His Release.

Goderich, March 24.—George Vanstone, awaiting trial in the county jail here for the brutal murder of his six-year-old son, is at the same time planning a visit to the Northwest upon his expected release. He will come up at the spring assizes here, commencing April 11.

On a recent visit of Vanstone's wife to the jail, he advised her to save all the money possible, and they would go west immediately on his acquittal, of which he seems sure.

He has expressed the wish several times to leave the jail, saying he must go to work and support his family, and has raved violently on the refusal of his request.

Since Vanstone's incarceration last December, a son has been added to his family, and with it Mrs. Vanstone has paid numerous visits to the child's father in his cell. Nothing, however, can bring the man to a sense of the gravity of his position; he greets all visitors with a smiling face, and usually acts as if all memory of the night of Dec. 15 last, when he beat little Freddie to death, were blotted from his mind.

The jail officials feel certain that the prisoner is not responsible for his actions.

Joynson Hicks Elected.

London, March 24.—For the Brentford seat made vacant by the resignation of Lord Compton, Mr. Joynson Hicks (Unionist) was returned unopposed. Lord Compton in December had 9,199 votes, his Liberal opponent 6,124. Mr. Hicks has been out of the House of Commons since his defeat in Northwest Manchester in January, 1910.

A Clean Man

Outside cleanliness is less than half the battle. A man may scrub himself a dozen times a day, and still be unclean. Good health means cleanliness not only outside, but inside. It means a clean stomach, clean bowels, clean blood, a clean liver, and new, clean, healthy tissues. The man who is clean in this way will look it and act it. He will work with energy and think clean, clear, healthy thoughts.

He will never be troubled with liver, lung, stomach or blood disorders. Dyspepsia and indigestion originate in unclean stomachs. Blood diseases are found where there is unclean blood. Consumption and bronchitis mean unclean lungs.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

prevents these diseases. It makes a man's insides clean and healthy. It cleans the digestive organs, makes pure, clean blood, and clean, healthy flesh.

It restores tone to the nervous system, and cures nervous exhaustion and prostration. It contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs.

Constipation is the most unclean uncleanliness. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure it. They never gripe. Easy to take as candy.

WAR CLOUDS GROWING

United States Calls Out More Men to Patrol the Frontier—Is Uncle Sam Interfering?

REVOLUTIONIST'S OPINION

San Antonio, Texas, March 24.—With the new demand for six or seven thousand recruits, the issuance of an order by Gen. Carter, making provisions for a sudden move, should it be required, and a statement by Dr. C. F. Caricristi of the Mexican Revolutionary Junta, that "the U. S. will intervene in Mexico unless there is a definite show of tranquility by May 1," the recently diminished war cloud loomed larger to-day.

Dr. Caricristi felt sure enough of his facts to embody them in a report to Francisco I. Madero, the revolutionary leader, who at the last report was within 30 miles of the City of Chihuahua. Dr Caricristi urged the insurrecto chief to achieve a decisive victory at all costs before May 1, for he wrote, "President Taft will not wait longer than that for a quiet to be restored, business resumed and traffic over the railroads to be secure."

Most of Dr. Caricristi's investigating was done at Washington, although he visited El Paso and Laredo before coming to San Antonio. He said yesterday:

"Of course, a complete federal triumph in Chihuahua, the restoration of communications and other business likewise would avoid intervention. I know absolutely that President Taft is determined that order shall be restored, and quickly, by one side or the other in Mexico, with the alternative of intervention.

"In my report to Senor Madero, I pointed out the necessity of capturing and holding the State of Chihuahua. If this can be accomplished, I am convinced that the revolutionists will be recognized as belligerents by the U. S. and other Governments.

"Neither side wants intervention, and I believe firmly that federals and revolutionists would make common cause against an invader.

"It is a fact that 75 per cent. of the credit in Mexico is in the hands of the Americans and Europeans.

"Just how much influence has been exerted in Mexico by certain great interests, I can't say. I can swear that the revolution in Mexico started within its own borders, of its own force, for I helped to start it. But it gives food for thought to know that one interest which has millions invested, has always been on the friendliest terms with Diaz, and has received many concessions from him. Another interest with more money and an eye on a certain great natural resource of the country has been antagonized at court by the former. The interest of the latter in a change of administration seems obvious."

National Guard to the Front.

Washington, March 24.—Apportioned among the states and territories, according to their militia strength, 200 National Guard officers will be sent by the War Department to San Antonio, Texas, and 200 to San Diego, Cal., on April 5, for two weeks' instruction service with the mobilized regulars. The Department expects to send a total of 1,000 militia officers to the manoeuvres at federal expense.

Up-to-Date Parade.

Paris, March 24.—While an unusually brilliant mi-careme procession was traversing the street yesterday with the queens showering the onlookers with flowers, a monoplane, piloted by M. Vedrine, and the new dirigible Torres, built for the Spanish Government, executed evolutions above the boulevards.

The airmen in turn, pelted the queens with violets. All Paris participated in the spectacle, which was favored with a bright summer-like day. A bevy of girls from Prague was a new feature of the parade, the drags of which were particularly beautiful and picturesque.

Flew With Eleven Passengers.

Douai, France, March 24.—Aviator Louis Broguet made a record performance yesterday when he carried 11 passengers in his monoplane a distance of two miles.

The flight was made at a height varying from 50 to 75 feet. The total weight of the 12 persons was 1,315 pounds, and the combined weight of the machine and its occupants was 2,062 pounds.

The best previous performance of the kind was made by M. le Martin, who on Feb. 2, took up seven passengers on a five-minute trip.

New York State Bank Fails.

Oneonta, N.Y., March 24.—The First National Bank of this city closed its doors yesterday.

The bank has about $800,000 resources and the deposits are about $500,000, with an equal amount of loans and discounts.

Controlling interest in the bank changed about a year ago, and there has been a gradual withdrawal of deposits and an increase in loans and discounts.

A Narrow Escape.

Aylmer, March 24.—Will Orton, a young man employed by the Aylmer Pump & Scale Co., had a narrow escape from death or serious injury. While oiling a shaft his coat became caught, throwing him from his feet. The clothes were all stripped from his body, and he was badly bruised and cut, but no bones are broken.

A Royal Commission.

Winnipeg, March 24.—The Manitoba Government has appointed a royal commission, consisting of Justice Myers, Locke and Prudhomme, to investigate the charges made in connection with the St. Peter's reserve and its abandonment by the Indians."

Jail Breaker Arrested.

Montreal, March 24.—Mike O'Rourke, known by many aliases, who broke jail at Sherbrooke while awaiting trial in connection with Danville $15,000 bank robbery, was arrested here on Wednesday night.

THE OFFER REFUSED

Manitoba Government Not Content With Terms and Want Added Lands—Unanimous Vote of Legislature

NOT SATISFIED

Winnipeg, March 24.—By a unanimous vote yesterday afternoon the Legislature accepted the resolution introduced by Premier Roblin, which is in effect a refusal of the offer of the Dominion Government for a settlement of the Manitoba boundary question by an annual cash payment in lieu of the public domain of $200,000, rising to $300,000. The resolution sets forth that Manitoba will be satisfied with nothing less than equal treatment with the other provinces. Either the public domain, or financial considerations equal to those of Alberta and Saskatchewan. In the absence of Mr. Morris, leader of the Opposition, the resolution was accepted on his behalf by Mr. Winkler. The galleries were crowded to their utmost capacity by an eager throng, and Premier Roblin has seldom been heard to better advantage.

The Premier prefaced his speech by saying he believed he had the full sympathy of every member of that Legislature, as well as every good citizen of Manitoba.

After reviewing the united efforts to secure boundary extension on satisfactory terms, dwelling particularly on negotiations his Government had opened at the time the autonomy bills were under consideration, Premier Roblin pointed out that the cause of the province had always been presented from two standpoints—either the public domain or financial considerations equal to those of Alberta and Saskatchewan. The negotiations with Sir Wilfrid Laurier, each by Messrs. Rogers and Campbell and himself, had resulted in nothing to the point, until finally the Government made the offer now under consideration, namely, $200,000 as a minimum and $300,000 as a maximum basis on population, in lieu of the public domain of the territory to be added.

"Now," he continued, "I have only to make that statement in order to shock the public conscience of this province, if not the Dominion, to say that the Province of Manitoba, with all her energy and her enterprise in establishing the bona-fides of Western Canada, should thus be handicapped and crippled for all time to come, is, in my opinion, simply an outrage. I believe there is not a single individual citizen of Manitoba who does not agree with me that the offer is simply an insult, whether intended or not, to this province."

Mr. Roblin went on to compare the terms offered to Manitoba and those Saskatchewan enjoys, claiming that the latter has two dollars for every one of the former. "Who is there," he exclaimed, "among us that could be so base, so wanting in self-respect, so untrue to his adopted or native province, that would not resent the imputation that any one citizen of this province is not as good and worth as much to the Dominion as any citizen of Saskatchewan?"

Negro's Home Dynamited.

Curlers Wind Up The Season In A Very Enjoyable Manner

Banquet and Presentation of Prizes Took Place Last Night at the Rink Following a Scratch Match---Many Bright Speeches Were Made During the Evening.

A large number of the local curlers took part in the grand finale held last night in the Charlotte Street rink. Twelve rinks participated in as many well-contested games, after which an oyster supper was provided and was followed by the presentation of prizes, which had been won by the local club this winter. Mr. R. Waddell did the honours of the chair in good style.

The first prize to be presented was the Grand Challenge Cup, donated by the Club, and won by Skip Giroux and his worthy braves.

Mr. Giroux replied in a suitable manner, thanking the donator and the members of the Club for their kind recognition. He also presented the members of his rink with a group photograph.

The Sailor Boy Trophy, donated by Mr. Cameron, was the next prize to be presented. Skip Brightman and his rink were the winners. Skip Brightman, in replying, called attention to the insurmountable difficulties that had to be overcome, in order to win first place. It had taken a whole season to do it, whereas some of the other prize-winners had only one competition or bonspiel to contend for.

The schedule prize, which was donated by the Secretary of the Club, Mr. Ferguson, was won by Mr. H. Foote and his rink.

The local Bonspiel first prize, primary, was won by Mr. H. Taylor and his rink. The second prize of primary was presented by the Rev. Mr. Henderson to Skip Medd and his rink.

First prize, Consolation, was presented by Mr. Lang, and won by Skip Fitzgerald and his rink. Second prize, Consolation, went to Skip Stevenson and his rink.

Mr. Andrew Webb, in a short but eloquent address produced some interesting figures relative to the number of games he had played during the past winter, and the approximate amount of weight he had lifted during the course of handling the stones in the above games. He stated that he had played 120 games, was on the losing side 65 times, and on the winning side 64 times, and had handled about 63½ ton weight of stone.

His Worship Mayor Morrow then moved that a vote of thanks be tendered the President on behalf of the Club, which was carried unanimously.

A very enjoyable evening was then brought to a close by the singing of Auld Lang Syne.

The skips that participated in last night's games, and the resultant scores, are as follows:

ALL SAINTS' YOUNG MEN ORGANIZE SOCCER TEAM

On Wednesday, March 22, at a lively meeting of the young men of All Saints' church a football club was organized. It was decided to try and form a Church Football League, and a committee was appointed to see the different church football clubs. The following officers were elected:

Hon. President—Mr. Edgar.
Hon. Vice-Pres.—Mr. Howden.
President—Rev. H. R. Trumpour.
Vice-Pres.—S. B. Blayden.
Manager—Mr. W. Willis, 185 Bethune street.
Sec.-Treas.—Mr. T. B. Moffatt, 139 Rubidge street.

Committee—Messrs. Abbott, Greenwood and Downs.

The club decided that if a church league could not be formed that they would enter a team in the Midland League. Mr. Moffatt, the Secretary, will be pleased to hear from other church clubs in regard to forming the Church League. All those wishing to join the club can do so by sending their names to the manager or secretary. Entrance fee, $1.00.

Buffalo Boxers Went A Round Too Many

BUFFALO, MARCH 23.—Dummy Burns and Jack Alton slammed and banged through eleven rounds of rough milling before a well-filled club house at the Magnolia club last night and at the end close judges of boxing could not deny that Alton had a most perceptible shade. The crowd was with Burns almost to a man, but sympathy and noisy demonstration never won a decision. While Burns didn't beat Alton, he was far from a beaten man himself—in fact he was coming stronger and better at the close than when he started. The wise ones were saying before the battle that Alton would knock Burns out in a half dozen rounds, but the Dummy fooled them. When they finished he was better able to go further than was Alton and Burns' friends need not feel ashamed of his showing.

The bout was scheduled for ten rounds, but along about the third round Timekeeper John L. Sullivan slipped a cog and Referee Dick Nugent announced the fourth round twice. It was an unintentional mistake, and the crowd was wise, but the bout was so good that they wanted all they could get of it, and no one offered to correct the count.

It was just the kind of a bout the crowd wanted. Neither man was possessed of an over-abundance of science and they lammed away to their heart's content. Alton's greater experience counted heavily in his favour. He landed the cleaner blows and on the most vulnerable spots, but he found the Dummy as tough as iron. On the very first round he caught Burns with a sweeping left swing that landed flush on Burns' mouth and sat him down as solidly and neatly as ever a man was dropped. A perfect little circle of rosin on the rear of Burns' blue tights showed that he took the fall kerplunk. Many times after that Alton reached Burns with solid jabs and swings that came from a long way back and for a while had the Dummy's head bobbing as if it hung on hinges.

The Correct Style in Spring Overcoats

A VISIT to the Semi-ready tailor shops is most interesting at this season of the year, when all the new style creations are being shown in patterns and weaves which are the pride of the English woollen mills. Four of the prevailing models in spring top coats are shown in the accompanying sketch.

The Chesterfield and the Rigby top coat are in evidence, while the button-through chesterfield and the motoring coat show how closely the sartorial artists follow the needs of the modern day. These overcoats or top coats are shown in all the varying standard values of the Semi-ready shops, from $15 to $20 and $30. Since the Semi-ready company has started tailoring clothes to order in four days, when one does not find just what one wants in the stock, they are getting 50,000 new customers every year.

CHAMPION JACK JOHNSON HAS SOME SKULL

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., MARCH 23.—Champion Jack Johnson visited the German Hospital yesterday to see his younger brother, Charlie, who is being treated for threatened loss of sight. While experts were taking X-ray pictures of Charlie they suggested that the champion sit down, and have an X-ray made of his head to determine the thickness of his skull. Johnson accepted and the result showed that it required 5½ minutes for the rays to penetrate, thus proving that the champion has a skull ranging from one-half to three quarters of an inch thick, which is more massive than the skull of a Texas steer. The rays penetrated an ordinary human head in from five to fifteen seconds.

HELD REUNION

A reunion of Eko Camp was held last night in the old Peterborough Club Rooms. A very pleasant evening was spent, during which cards, billiards, and music formed the principal part of the programme, together with impromptu speeches, after which refreshments were served. Quite a large number of the old members were present.

HALDANE A VISCOUNT.

Great Britain's Minister of War Enters House of Lords.

London, March 24.—King George yesterday created War Secretary Haldane a viscount. The elevation of the Secretary to the peerage has been anticipated as a move intended to strengthen the Government in the House of Lords.

Viscount Haldane has had a brilliant scholastic and public career. He was born at Cloander, N.S., in 1856. He attended Edinburgh Academy and Edinburgh University, where he was graduated M.A. with first-class honors in philosophy. He was Gifford lecturer at St. Andrew's University 1902-04, and subsequently became rector of Edinburgh University.

Lord Haldane has had a distinguished career at the Bar. He became a barrister in 1879, and was appointed a queen's counsel in 1890.

Fame has also attended his literary works, which include a number of standard philosophical volumes.

Equally successful has been the new peer's experience in the sphere of politics. He has represented Haddingtonshire in Parliament in the Liberal interests from 1885, and has filled the office of Secretary of War since 1905.

J. B. D. Seeley, Parliamentary Secretary of the Colonial Office, has been appointed Under Secretary for War, and Lord Lucas, Parliamentary Secretary of the War Office, has been made Under Secretary of the Colonies. This exchange of offices is consequent on the elevation of Secretary Haldane, which would place both representatives of the War Office in the House of Lords, it being customary to have a representative of the chief Government Departments in each House.

The rumor that David Lloyd George would retire as Chancellor of the Exchequer [illegible] Haldane [illegible] merely intended to relieve Lord Morley of the heavy task of leadership in the House of Lords during the Earl of Crewe's absence.

Four Americans Executed.

San Antonio, Texas, March 24—John Hamilton Dignowitty and three other Americans have been shot to death, under orders of a Mexican court martial, for participation in the insurrection, according to a despatch received yesterday by members of the Dignowitty family.

"Ham" Dignowitty was thirty years of age and was engaged in the cattle and mining business in the State of Chihuahua.

"PIMPLES"

Broke Out All Over Her Face.

Pimples are caused, almost entirely, by bad blood, and there is only one way to get rid of them, and that is to get at the seat of the trouble by using a good reliable blood purifying medicine.

Burdock Blood Bitters has been on the market for 35 years, and is one of the very best blood medicines procurable. After using it you will find that the pimples have disappeared, and you will have a beautiful clear complexion.

Mrs. Robert McNab, Badjeros, Ont., writes:—"I am greatly pleased to report the benefit I have derived from the use of Burdock Blood Bitters. About a year ago I became so weak and run down I could scarcely walk, and pimples broke out all over my face. I tried one thing after another, but nothing seemed to do me any good. I was advised by a lady friend to try B.B.B., and before I had used one bottle I felt it was doing me good so I used three bottles, and am now well and strong, and the pimples have all disappeared."

The following from the report of the Mail and Empire of the Campanan Choral Union concert in Toronto on Thursda yevening, refers to a brother of Mr. Fred Skitch of this city: Two songs were contributed by Mr. Percy H. Skitch, a pupil of Mr. Fletcher's. He has a lyric baritone of real sweetness and good range, and his singing was marked by great taste. He gave "The Longshoreman," and then as an additional number sang "A Son of the Desert." The accompaniments were played by Mr. Richard Tattersall.

Restless Babies

In nine cases out of ten, skin irritation is the cause. An occasional anointing with Zam-Buk balm, and the use of Zam-Buk Soap (25c. per tablet), in the bath will end the trouble. Wherever there are eruptions, rashes, or chapped places apply Zam-Buk. This famous household balm is compounded from purely herbal essences, and is mild in its action. As scores of mothers daily testify, it is an ideal balm for the skin troubles of babies. Medical men and nurses concur. Zam-Buk is also so very useful in the family. Cures cuts, burns, skin troubles, eruptions, abscesses, ulcers, piles, eczema, and as a "first aid" preparation is without equal. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

About Our Local Mines

Mr. James Dickson, the well known Ontario Land Surveyor of Feneion Falls, was in Peterborough to-day and had with him a very fine specimen of graphite, which he brought from Wilberforce in the County of Haliburton. Mr. Dickson was engaged about two weeks ago in laying out a village site at Wilberforce for New York capitalists, who have secured control of the graphite mine at this point. The mine is located on Lot 23, Con. 16, Township of Monmouth. The New York capitalists who are developing the property are entering upon the work with great energy. They are now erecting a plant for the treatment of the ore, that will rest in the neighborhood of $100,000. The buildings are located not more than 1 chain from the T. B. and O. Railway. The plant will be in operation by May 1st, and fully 150 men will be employed by the company. One vein is right beside the new buildings that are being erected. A second shaft is being sunk at a point about 1 mile from the village. Fourteen men are at work at this shaft and it is now down 25 feet. The graphite appears to become richer the further down the shaft is sunk. About 200 tons of graphite is already mined awaiting to be treated when the plant is completed. This graphite is of the very finest quality, being of the foliage variety.

Great Chance For Peterboro'

Editor, Examiner.—A correspondent in last Saturday's Examiner, in a letter regarding the care of Central Park, pointed out how the energies of the Board of Trade and the Industrial Commissioner might be very properly directed towards establishing some system whereby the park could be beautified and kept in a more satisfactory condition throughout the summer months.

There is another matter of the utmost importance to the people of Peterboro which might very well engage the attention of our Board of Trade and Industrial Commissioner. I refer to the matter of the erection of an overhead bridge across the Otonabee River at Hunter Street. I venture to say that had the city of Peterboro, through the Board of Trade or otherwise, taken hold of majority of them are about completwould have been enjoying the advantages of an overhead bridge at this point to-day.

This is a question of vital importance to the city's best interest. I cannot understand why it is not taken up and carried to a successful issue in view of the many interests that are concerned and that would be benefited by reason thereof. It appears to me that it requires only some one organization, such as the Board of Trade, to take the initiative, in order to accomplish the building of a new Hunter Street bridge.

The Peterboro Radial Railway must certainly feel an interest in this matter. The C. P. R. must realize the importance of it, the same may be said of the Quaker Oats Company, as well as the great majority of the residents of the 5th Ward. With so many interests to be benefited by the construction of a new overhead bridge, it would apear to me that all that is required now is for some one body or individual to assume the leadership in the campaign. The fact of the matter is that at the present time each person interested appears to be waiting for the other person to get busy on the matter.

There is no need in here reviewing the benefits to be derived from the construction of a new high level Hunter Street bridge. They are quite apparent to anyone who has given the matter the slightest study. Not until a new overhead bridge is built at Hunter Street will the street car service be extended to the 5th Ward; not until then will the danger to the travelling public at the west end of the present bridge by reason of shunting engines be eliminated; not until then will there be navigation for obats up to the Quaker Oats plant; and not until then will 5th Ward residents be saved the unpleasant hill climbing journey that they have been obliged to submit to for so many years past.

By all means let the Board of Tarde get busy on this question. I quite agree with your correspondent of last week that it is such matters as these that should engage the attention of our Board of Trade to a greater extent than the questions of Imperial defence, reciprocity, and other subjects of a national nature that can be taken care of by the two great political parties and decided at the polls when the proper time comes.

CITIZEN.

The Severn River Section

The Examiner has received the following communication from a correspondent signing himself "Navigation":

I think that it is about time that some united effort was made to impress upon the Minister of Railways and Canals the importance of placing under contract the remaining unnavigable section of the Trent Canal from Lake Simcoe to Georgian Bay.

I do not desire to be classed as in ant way criticising the policy of the present Dominion Government, and particularly Hon. Mr. Graham, the present Minister of Railways and Canals in respect of the policy they have adopted in the construction of the Trent Canal thus far. They have done splendid work. They have spent more money, and opened out more miles of water communication on the Trent Canal, during the past 15 years, since they assumed office, than was accomplished by all preceding governments from Confederation until 1896. They have entered upon the work thus far with commendable enterprise, and incidentally by reason of the canal construction, have given to the people of this district electric power at as cheap rates as can be had anywhere in Ontario. The canal construction work between Hastings and Trenton is a heavy proposition, but the contracts have all been let; a majorit yof them are about completed, and it cannot be many years now until through navigation will be a reality between Orillia and Lake Ontario. One must admit that this seems almost a dream, especially to those of our older citizens who have for so many years advocated the Trent route and who labored year after year in impressing upon successive governments the advisability of its construction.

The heaviest contract on the lower division is at Campbellford, and it will, of course, be a few years yet before this is completed. In the meantime, however, the remaining six contracts will have been completed.

The point I desire to impress upon the people of this district—in fact, upon the people of every municipality from Georgian Bay to Trenton, along the route of the Canal—is that every effort should be put forth to impress upon the Government the importance of placing the Severn River section under contract immediately, so that by the time the contract at Campbellford is finished there will not only be through navigation from Trenton to Orillia, but from Trenton to Georgian Bay. I have been told that the distance from Lake Simcoe to Georgian Bay is a matter of only 13 miles and that the work on that division would not be any greater than the one single contract at Campbellford. It is important, therefore, that there should be no delay in having the work on this Severn River section commenced at once. While recognizing and appreciating to the fullest possible extent the splendid work that has already been done by the present Government on the Ontario-Rice Lake Division, at the same time there should be urged upon the Government the necessity of having the upper outlet completed. If it is taken hold of and placed under contract this fall the Severn River portion of the Canal will be finished concurrently with the Campbellford section, the work of which is being energetically pushed forward by the contractors, Messrs. Haney, Quinlan & Robertson.

Few people realize how soon it will be until barges will be passing down the Trent Canal from Georgian Bay to Trenton. They would, perhaps, realize it more readily if the upper section, from Lake Simcoe to Georgian Bay, were placed under contract.

A BOOK FOR MOTHERS

Every mother is naturally anxious for information that will enable her to keep the little ones in good health. The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., have issued a little book which contains a great deal of information on the care of babies and young children that every mother ought to know. The book will be sent free to any mother who will send her name and address, with the name of this newspaper, to The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THINGS IN GENERAL

Lindsay curlers attend divine services in a body once a year. Peterborough curlers do not take this course. Instead of bringing the curlers to the church, they bring the church to the rink. Four of the local preachers of the Gospel are enthusiastic members of the local curling club, and play the game for all that it is worth.

The Havelock Standard is informed on good authority that the C.P.R. Company intends making Havelock one of the best equipped divisional points on their system. According to our informant, says the Standard, the round house capacity is to be doubled, new power coal shutes erected, five long sidings constructed, some of them south of Plateau Creek, a handsome new station erected despite the recent improvements on the old building, the platform to be extended about 100 feet both east and west, and the shop equipment greatly augmented.

The civic light, heat and power committee of Kingston has received more favorable terms from the Seymour Electric and Power Co., of Campbellford, for water power than at first offered, and has decided that the proposition is now far enough advanced to call in an expert to advise the city whether to accept the offer or not. The Seymour Co's offer is on the basis of $25 a horsepower, with provision for selling of whatever the city wants over a certain amount at one and one half cents a kilowat hour.

Optical Institute Creed

We believe in the glasses we are supplying that in quality, style and accuracy, they are unsurpassed. We believe that honest glasses can be supplied to honest people by honest methods. We believe in working not writing, laughing not weeping, in boosting not knocking, in, and, the pleasure of the practice of Optometry. We believe we are getting the Optical Practice that we are after and that there is plenty to get for men who are ready. We believe in to-day, & the work we are doing, in to-morrow and the work we hope to do, and in the rewards of both.

We believe in courtesy, in kindness, in generosity, in good cheer, and in honest competition. We believe this in an order for a pair of glasses ready for every man who is ready to take it. We believe we are ready, right now, & we are taking it and after April 1st will have full charge under the old contract which they assume. Mr. Harrington will still be in charge. We have now a prospect of having a twenty-four hour service at a much reduced rate, says the Millbrook Reporter. The new lines will not be ready before the New Year, perhaps, but even then the outlook is good. The Council will submit a by-law for a thirty years' franchise very soon when all details will be forthcoming.

On Monday morning, as he was alone in his room engaged in dressing himself, Mr. Wm. Viner, of Tweed, who had bivouacked upon many a battlefield, heard the last reveille, and quickly throwing aside the blankets of earth, he donned the regimentals of the skies.

According to the Tweed News, deceased was born in London, England, in the year 1830. At the age of seventeen he enlisted in Her late Majesty's 36th Regiment. He fought in the Crimean War. Afterwards he was sent withhis regiment into India, and was wounded at the memorable siege of Lucknow. For the services rendered his country in the British Army, he possessed five medals, namely, one for good conduct and long service, two for the Crimean War one for the Fenian raid of 1866, and one for the Indian Mutiny. In all he spent forty two years in the Army, for which he was drawing a pension. Mr. Viner was a man of very quiet disposition, and of steady character. He was a loyal member of the Anglican Church.

An apple with a garter snake embedded in it is a curiosity reported from Colborne, where it was found in a barrel of Ben Davis, which was being repacked at a Colborne fruit house. The snake was over half an inch in diameter and about eighteen inches long. The supposition is that it made its way into the barrel while it was in the orchard, and not finding a way to egress decided to seek winter quarters by embedding itself in the finest specimen of Ben Davis it could select. It is stated that the apple, which was a big one, was perfectly sound around the opening in which the serpent was embedded. It is one of the most novel occurrences that apple men have yet met with.

PITY THE BABIES

All babies whose mothers do not know about Dr. Chase's Ointment are truly to be pitied. They are sure to have skin troubles of one kind or another such as chafing, skin irritation, scald head, milk rash or baby eczema and nothing can bring them comfort so quickly as Dr. Chase's Ointment. It stops itching promptly and heals the skin beautifully.

WOMAN ESCAPES OPERATION

Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Elwood, Ind.—"Your remedies have cured me and I have only taken six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was sick three months and could not walk. I suffered all the time. The doctors said I could not get well without an operation, for I could hardly stand the pains in my sides, especially my right one, and down my right leg. I began to feel better when I had taken only one bottle of Compound, but kept on as I was afraid to stop too soon."—Mrs. SADIE MUELLER, 2728 N. B. St., Elwood, Ind.

Why will women take chances with an operation or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion, and nervous prostration.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be absolutely confidential, and the advice free.

"The Strange Case Of Eleanor Cuyler"

By KINGSLAND CROSBY

"Yes, take three fares out of this, please," the lawyer added, tendering a bank-note.

The conductor handed back the change, and started down the car, but after a few steps returned again.

"There was another party asking me about that same sick lady only yesterday," he remarked. "This party come the same way they did, on the P. & E. from Philadelphia. He wanted to know where they had left my train, too, same as you do."

"Must have been Mr. Dorkington," Hambidge rejoined without an instant's hesitation, turning to his companions.

"That's so—" Winthrop exclaimed.

"I'll bet it wasn't!" Barrett contradicted. "I'll bet it was her Uncle Abner. . . . What did the party you speak of look like?"

"Oh, he looked just like a book agent," the conductor responded; one of them kind that sells lives of early Christian Martyrs at the front door, and How-to-be-Beautiful books to the hired girl at the back door. Had long, yellowish hair, sort of floating down over his eyes, he did, and a yellowish beard."

"Pink cheeks?" Barrett demanded. The conductor nodded.

"There!" the New Englander exclaimed triumphantly. "I knew it was her Uncle Abner!"

The conductor passed on, and Winthrop shrugged his shoulders.

"Wotsirb's got ahead of us again," he remarked.

The train jolted and swayed on its way through a desolate, sparsely settled country. Here and there was a farmhouse occupied or abandoned, as the case may be; here and there an abandoned oil-tank or an old pumping station, and at frequent intervals could be seen weather-beaten derricks, marking the spots whence petroleum once had gushed forth in a golden flood.

On the train rocked, and on, swinging around sharp curves, grinding up heavy grades, stopping now and then at unimportant stations—Tryonville, Sentreville, Spartanaburg, Hydetown—and finally, late in the afternoon, pulling into Titusville where the three friends disembarked.

"What's the best hotel?" Hambidge asked a hack-driver.

"Brunswick—get right in, sir," the man replied, holding open the door of his carriage.

They did so, and rolled away, looking anxiously out of the windows, wondering whether Eleanor really were here—whether they had actually got within reaching distance of her—and all because Mrs. Hazard's dream had recalled to Hambidge his experience in accidentally finding the gold locket on the platform at Corry.

"The first thing to do is to get the lay of the land," Barrett remarked, as they met an hour later, free of travel stains and wilted collars. "I move we hire a carriage, drive completely around the city——"

"Sort of circumnavigating it?" suggested Winthrop.

"Yes, that's the idea. Then right after dinner this evening we can divide the territory off into three sections, and to-morrow begin a systematic search."

"What excuse can we give for asking a lot of questions?" Barrett inquired.

"I've thought that all out," the lawyer said. "We can call at every house in Titusville by saying that we are gathering material for a book to be written about the region, with personal sketches of the leading citizens. I don't like to employ even subterfuge unless I have to, but it would be a harmless deception anyway, and through it we may get track of Miss Cuyler."

"Suggestion seconded, and adopted!" Barrett exclaimed, starting toward the hotel office. "Come along, you two, and I'll order the carriage."

XV.

While at dinner, a little later, they discussed the advisability of finding Wotsirb, who, like themselves, had left the B. N. Y. & P. train at Titusville the day previous, as they knew from having questioned Conductor Sperry.

"I haven't seen or heard of him," said Winthrop, "since early Sunday morning when he came to the studio to photograph Miss Cuyler's portrait."

"It isn't likely that a man of his ability and reputation would think it worth while, or even wise, to keep a lot of amateur detectives informed as to his moves," Hambidge remarked, with a quiet smile.

"Just the same," declared Barrett, "we have traced Miss Cuyler out here alone with no assistance from him. You will, of course, write Mr Cuyler at once," he added, turning to Winthrop, "telling him that we have got thus far."

"Certainly," the painter responded. "I intend to send him a note before doing anything else."

"The question in my mind," Hambidge went on, "is whether we ought not to look up Wotsirb the very first thing; let him know we are here on an independent clue, and make sure we don't interfere with any plans he has laid."

"I vote against it!" exclaimed the big man from New England. "He's deliberately let us alone, and we can let him alone. I shouldn't wonder if we would discover Miss Cuyler before he does."

"What do you think, Sheldon?"

"I agree with your idea. We must remember that Mr. Cuyler has placed this whole thing in Wotsirb's hands. We can't afford to run the risk of upsetting his plan whatever it is. We must find him first of all."

"And have him tell us to get out of the field just as we're about to succeed!" Barrett growled, jabbing his fork into a bit of steak.

"If he asks us to leave we'll have to do it," Hambidge responded. "We couldn't take the responsibility of refusing. The consequences might be too serious."

"How?"

"Suppose that the gang should discover us first—just before we stumbled upon their hiding place; and in order to escape themselves, made sure that Miss Cuyler would tell no tales afterward?"

This suggestion quieted even Barrett. Involuntarily his hand crept around to his side and touched the butt of his big revolver.

"Very well," he said, after a pause. "I'll agree to help find Wotsirb first."

"Of course, he may not be here," Hambidge continued. "The gang may have left Titusville an hour after arriving, and he may have followed them last evening."

"Let's see," Barrett remarked, knitting his brows. "What day was it that you found the locket at Corry?"

"Last Sunday, July twenty-second."

"And, according to the station agent there, they came down on Sperry's train and reached Titusville the previous Tuesday—on July seventeenth," Winthrop added.

"It is now Friday, July twenty-seventh," said Barrett; "so it was ten days ago that they arrived in Titusville. Much may have happened since then—much," he concluded, shaking his head.

"I'd give a good deal to know how Wotsirb managed to trace them away out here," Winthrop said, as he rose from the table. "With us, of course, it was the merest accident—Hambidge finding that locket, I mean."

When Wotsirb arrived in Titusville the previous afternoon—Thursday—he did not register as a guest at the Brunswick, seeking instead a smaller hotel, where he engaged an inexpensive room. The first thing he did thereafter was to write two letters, one to Buffalo, the other to Pittsburg. The contents were identical, and as follows:

I am engaged on confidential Washington business. Hold three in readiness day and night for quick, rough work.

Will wire you later to bring the men with all speed to this hotel, where letters of instructions will await you in case I am out.

Charter special engine if necessary.

Wotsirb carefully placed these letters in the general postoffice, and breathed more easily. They would be delivered early the next morning, and thenceforth he would have six able, powerful men on call, waiting to respond to his summons when he should be ready to round up the gang who held Miss Cuyler captive.

So far so good. The next thing was to adopt some role which would give him a legitimate reason for calling at all sorts of places—drug-stores, groceries, cigar-shops, barber-shops, police stations, undertakers' establishments, livery stables, and elsewhere. In some of these, he reasoned, he would be likely to hear of a sick lady in a Shaker bonnet, especially as she was accompanied by another woman, an old farmer with white hair and bushy beard, and a second man, clean shaven, who wore goggles.

With Wotsirb thought and action were practically simultaneous. Five minutes after despatching the letters to Buffalo and Pittsburg, ordering the assistants to be held on call, he climbed the steep stairway leading from the main business street of Titusville to the editorial rooms of the Morning Herald, and was cordially welcomed by the proprietor, who was the editor—a fine, noble little gentleman, peace to his ashes!

"Well, sir, what can I do for you?" he said briskly.

"I want a job," said Wotsirb. "Struck town this afternoon, like the looks of the place, and propose to stay here awhile."

"What can you do?"

"Anything — read copy, handle a stick, make-up, run a press. But what I want is an outside job as reporter."

"I'm afraid there's nothing open of that kind," said the proprietor. "We've got a good local man."

"You ought to have six," Wotsirb responded with decision. "The town's full of live news. I can see that. Lots of people in the stores, team-loads of country folks on the streets—you just give me a chance, and I'll show you what I can do."

"What wages do you want?"

"Never mind wages at first. You let me scout around on my own hook a few days. Wait until I show you some results, and then we can talk wages—if you want to keep me."

"Do you know anybody in Titusville? Got any references?"

"Haven't any with me, but I'll send and get them if you decide to keep me after a short trial."

"Well, it's a trifle irregular, but I'll run the risk. You wait around until Thomson comes in—he's the City Editor—and I'll tell him to give you a show."

Women's Pains

"I received your sample of Zutoo Tablets, and took them for severe pain (monthly) and headache. At the end of 30 minutes I was entirely free from pain and experienced no more throughout the period. HOW SKIN-TROUBLES HAVE BEEN CURED

A Remarkable Record of Itching, Burning, Disfiguring Eruptions Successfully Treated.

That those who have suffered long and hopelessly from eczema and other torturing, disfiguring eruptions of the skin and scalp and who have lost faith in all manner of treatment, may learn that there is one way to find immediate relief, the following remarkable series of condensed testimonials is published:

W. H. White, 312 E. Cabot St., Philadelphia: Knee to ankle a mass of eruption. Suffering simply indescribable for six long years. Had to scratch till blood ran and health was undermined from lack of sleep. Cuticura Remedies cured it without a mark.

Mrs. M. C. Maitland, Jasper, Ont.: Itchy rash on her baby's head when but three months old. It spread over entire body. Put mittens on him to prevent tearing skin. Reduced to a skeleton. One bath with Cuticura Soap and application of Cuticura Ointment soothed him to sleep. A single set cured him. Thinks child would have died but for Cuticura Remedies.

Mrs. Wm. Hunt, 259 Fairmount Ave., Newark, N. J.: Whole body a mass of raw, torturing eczema. Agony was beyond words. Hair all fell out and ears seemed ready to drop off. Clothing would stick to bleeding flesh. Hoped death would soon end fearful suffering. Cuticura Remedies cooled the itching, bleeding flesh at once and soon cured her.

Mme J. B. Renaud, 277, Mentana St., Montreal: Treated by doctors 25 years for bad eczema on leg. It peeled from knee down; foot like raw flesh. Doctor advised cutting leg off. Decided to try Cuticura Remedies first. In two months' use of Cuticura Remedies she was cured.

Mrs. Nora Emmott, 26, Lega Gardens, Brook Green, London: Two little girls had dreadful scalp trouble that doctors called ringworm. Cried with intense itching. Hospital treatment gave frightful pain but did no good. Suffered three years, cured by three sets of Cuticura Soap and Ointment.

H. A. Krutskoff, 5714 Wabash Ave., Chicago: Itching eruption spread from hands to body. Literally tore his skin off in shreds. Doctors and remedies did no good. Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills stopped itching quickly and cured disease in three weeks.

Frank Gridley, 325 E. 43rd St., New York: In twenty-four hours he became raw from head to foot with a dreadful burning itch. Suffered agonies and could not lie down or sit up. Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment cured him in a single day.

Mrs. Kate Brougham, 200 Dewey St., Bennington, Vt.: Rash came on her baby and soon turned to watery, crusted eczema over face, head and body. He was a fearful sight and all attempts at cure were fruitless. Vastly improved in a week by use of Cuticura Remedies and soon skin was clear and healthy.

G. J. Dance, 27, New Road, Brentford, England: Tortured for five years with bad skin disease. Attended hospital five months without success. Covered with eruption. No sleep nor rest. Felt like tearing himself to pieces with terrible itching. With first application of Cuticura Ointment was relieved and got good night's sleep. In a fortnight Cuticura Ointment cured him as if by magic.

Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, Cuticura Resolvent and Cuticura Pills are sold by druggists everywhere. Send to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Boston, Mass., for free 32-page Cuticura Book on skin diseases.

Not long afterward Thomson did come in, and the new reporter began his career at once. From that hour he was the most industrious man employed by the Titusville Morning Herald. He hustled all the afternoon and until after midnight, calling at one store after another, asking for news items, especially about strangers visiting the city, and about queer characters concerning whom interesting stories might be written. He was especially careful to ask clerks in the drug-stores regarding the sick, and how they were getting on, although it was difficult for him to obtain much information concerning them.

It was in this way that his first day in Titusville passed. By the next morning, Friday, he grew anxious, and decided that if he could get no definite trace of Miss Cuyler before Monday, he would return to New York and ask her father's permission to throw broadcast over the country those twenty thousand circulars and portraits. Should Mortimer Cuyler obstinately persist in his refusal to allow such assistance in this crisis Wotirb would simply withdraw from the case. He knew, of course, why the banker was determined to avoid publicity in the matter, but it was now a question of life and death, perhaps. In any event Wotsirb could not risk having his reputation injured by the conditions Cuyler had imposed. They were simply impossible; he never would have undertaken the case at all, with such a millstone around his neck, but for the President's personal urging.

When the Secret Service man arrived in Titusville, the first thing he did was to inquire at the railway station whether anyone had noticed the sick lady and her companions. Apparently nobody had seen them. None of the hack-drivers had carried them away from the station. None of the livery stables in town had been called on to transport them anywhere. The chances were, he thought, that the abductors might have separated on leaving the train, the men walking across country in different directions, the women quietly slipping down side streets to the other railway station, there boarding a D. A. V. & P. train, doubling on their tracks, and later meeting again at a pre-arranged rendezvous, perhaps five hundred miles from the oil regions. Why they should take all the trouble to do such a crazy thing, after a long journey from New York, Wotsirb could not imagine. Anything, however, was possible, especially to criminals who had a veritable white elephant on their hands. They were in control of the most priceless possession of the greatest financial power in America. They could not set her at liberty, or desert her, Wotsirb reasoned, without bringing down on their heads swift and terrible punishment from those who had employed them to kidnap the girl. Kill her, murder her in cold blood, and bury her body—they would not dare; at least for the present.

Another thing that worried the detective was the fact that she was "a sick lady," so weak she could not walk without assistance. What was the nature of her illness, he did not know. It might have been induced by the heat; it might result from terrific shock to her nervous system, with a hundred serious complications possible; it might be typhoid, or drugs, or slow poison.

XVI.

Wotsirb stepped into his hotel Friday afternoon, went to his room and wrote Cuyler, reminding him that his daughter had been missing for more than ten days, and that if there were no development in the following forty-eight hours he would go to New York and call at the banking house Monday morning.

Then he went to the postoffice, mailed his letter and casually asked the clerk at the stamp window whether he had any news for the Morning Herald.

"Not a thing," said the clerk, "but why don't you ask old Bill Tyson there? He's just come in from Pleasantville. . . . .It ain't a very lively place, but perhaps they do have some news to talk about, once a year or so. Hey, Bill," he concluded, "this gentleman's a reporter for the Morning Herald, and wants to see you."

As the facetious clerk concluded, Wotsirb turned around and saw, standing across the postoffice, a tall, elderly man who looked like a farmer.

"I don't know a thing to tell ye," the stranger remarked, cheerfully, "and I hain't got time to stop anyhow. I'm on the way home for supper."

"Where do you live?" the reporter inquired.

"Out Pleasantville way, between there an' Pithole. . . . .Ever hear o' Pithole?"

"I remember that somebody spoke of the place—deserted city, isn't it?"

"You bet it is! Deserted root and branch. I c'd tell you a lot of intrusting things about it if I had time," he added, as they walked out to where his waggon stood.

"Well, I've got time, lots of it," said Wotsirb, "and I'd like to go along with you part way."

"Jump in," the farmer rejoined.

The other did so, and the horses started off briskly, as they were headed toward home. Down Main Street they went, to the city limits, and then over a jolting plank road, the farmer talking of oil prices and production, the condition of the crops, the strike in the anthracite region, and the state of the political campaign. It was not until they were at the foot of a long steep hill, when the horses slowed down, that Wotsirb referred to the deserted city.

"What's the name of the place?" he said.

"Pithole," the farmer replied. "Pithole, and a good name fer it, too. I can remember, back in sixty," he continued, "when there was nuthin' there but a few farms; mostly no good, too, on account o' the soil, and the awful road leadin' to Titusville—which were th' nearest market.

"Then, one day, a well was sunk, an' turned out to be a gusher; thousan's an' thousan's o' barrels bustin' way up into the air, an' fallin' down to the ground like Noah's flood, hour after hour, day an' night. And oil with twenty dollars a bar'l! The news travelled like lightnin'. In twenty-four hours they was a thousan' people there, buyin' up little sections o' those farms. In a fortnight there was ten thousand, an' a roarin', smashin', money-crazy city started. Dozens an' scores of houses were bein' built day an' night; saloons, dance-halls, churches, and a reg'lar theayter was started. A railroad was surveyed, dirt banks built up to lay tracks on, an' a depo located. It was 'Hurrah boys!' for fair. I tell ye! Farms with six hundred dollars one week sold fer a hundred thousan' the next week, an' fer a million a month later.

"Then, all to once, the oil gave out. Sudden as a wink every single, blame well went dry! The petrolyum supply was exhausted. It was like a lightnin' stroke. The city was busted at a single crack, an' every individual man, women, horse, dog an' mule picked up an' skipped right out."

"You don't say so!" Wotsirb exclaimed.

"Yessir, that's jest what I mean. An' from that day to this, Pithole has been deserted—absolutely deserted. Th' buildings are all there, fallin' to ruins year after year, but not a soul lives there. Sometimes, when a stranger happens to be visitin' th' place as a sort of curiosity, he'll see some wanderin' sheep skurry through th' houses, peekin' at him from a winder, but that's about all—except birds, an' squirrels, an' snakes, an' such like."

"I'd like to go there myself, sometime," Wotsirb remarked. "How far away is it?"

"Oh, a few miles beyond my farm. . . . . Come t' think of it, though, there is a party stayin' there now fer awhile."

"Yes? Who is it?"

"Why, he's a perfesser from some college, Perfesser Simpson. His father was at Pithole in th' old days an' made a lot of money there. Then he told th' Professor about it, an' he come out this summer to sort of study around, an' learn just why all that oil sh'd have give out so sudden. He says it's a most instrustin' problem in geology."

"I should think it would be!"

"Besides which," the farmer garrulously continued, waving his hand to acquaintances gathered around a store in Pleasantville — through which hamlet they were passing — "besides which his woman has been sick-like, an' he brung her along t' git some rest an' quiet. . . . .I reckon she'll get all she wants at Pithole!" Tyson concluded with a cheerful grin.

"His wife, you say?" Wotsirb inquired casually, though a sudden thrill swept every fibre of his being.

"Yes, poor creetur. She's Quaker, or Shaker or somethin'—judgin' from her dress an' big poke bonnet. I happened to be in th' railway depo t' Titusville th' day they got there,—they got there,—it was last week, Tuesday,—an' he hired me to drive 'em right out to Pithole, soon's they got off th' cars, which I did—th' Perfessor hired me, I mean. Her father an' mother are along with 'em too."

"They're in th' last house on th' left-hand side of th' old Main street, as ye go in; sort of campin' out there. I hauled a lot of things for 'em that he got me t' buy in Titusville th' day after they come here; cot-beds, an' cups, an' plates, an' canned goods, an flour, an' so on, you know. . . . .I cal'late they're here fer quite a spell."

AT LAST, A CURE FOR RHEUMATISM

"Fruit-a-tives Cured Me" Says Mrs. Baxter.

"I was a helpless cripple from Rheumatism for nearly a year. All down the right side, the pain was dreadful and I could not move for the agony. I was treated by two physicians without help.

I saw "Fruit-a-tives" advertised in "The Telegram" and decided to try them. After I had taken one box, I was much better.

When I had taken three boxes, I could use my arm and the pain was almost gone.

After taking five boxes, I was entirely well again. The cure of my case by "Fruit-a-tives" was indeed splendid because all the doctors failed to even relieve me. "Fruit-a-tives" cured me.

MRS. LIZZIE BAXTER.

4 HOME PLACE, TORONTO, Dec. 15, '09.

In hundreds of other cases, "Fruit-a-tives" has given exactly the same satisfactory results because "Fruit-a-tives" is the greatest blood purifying medicine in the world. "Fruit-a-tives" the famous fruit medicine regulates kidneys, liver, bowels and skin, and prevents the accumulation of uric acid, which is the prime cause of Rheumatism.

"Fruit-a-tives" will positively cure every case of Rheumatism, when taken according to directions. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c. At all dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

THE DEADLY CIGARETTE.

The boy who smokes these filthy things—
These cigarettes, I mean—
With clothes and breath offensive, vile,
Can never be called clean.

They stunt the growth of the physique,
The brilliant eye bedim,
Befog the mental vision, too;
For judgment, don't trust him!

If he's a servant anywhere,
This slave of cigarettes,
His service cannot be the best;
His duties he forgets.

My boy, don't use those "coffin nails";
For surely, if you do,
You undervalue manhood's worth,
And crush your spirits, too.

Say "No!" when first you're tempted,
Say "No!"—you surely can;
Say "No!" to every evil;
Be first and last a MAN!

"MY GUESTS TOUCH NO WINE."

"The most effective temperance lecture I ever heard in my life was preached to me on New Year's Day," said a writer in Ram's Horn.

"Why Horace, where were you? And who delivered it?" was asked.

"I was visiting in Philadelphia and with my cousin, John Levins, set out to pay a number of New Year's calls. It is not the custom now as formerly to set out wine before guests, but it is still done sometimes. Our second call was at the princely home of Franklin Graves, of whom you have heard. His lovely daughter greeted us, smiling and beautiful, a very queen among women. There was also an elegant assortment of choice wines, which the father pressed upon his guests. 'Did you come to see papa or me?' was always the question asked of each guest and so far as I know, there was but one answer. 'We came to see you.' 'My guests touch no wine,' she said. 'I have other refreshments provided for them.' The wine glasses stood untouched, the fair girl flitted to and fro among her guests, ministering herself to their needs. Her father gracefully acquiesced, and finally had the wine glasses removed.

"'Did you ever witness anything so effectual as that?' said cousin John, as we started up the street together.

"'Never,' I answered. No temperance lecture ever touched me like that quiet speech, 'My guests touch no wine.' God helping me, it is the last time the glass shall ever touch my lips.

"I have since learned that more than one young man began reformation on New Year's Day as the result of that very call."

"'My guests touch no wine.' They were simple words, quietly spoken, but what did they not imply?

"This Christian girl performed a service as faithfully as though the kingdom of God depended upon her fidelity."—Selected.

PUSH HARD.

Push hard against the iron-barred door,
If you would dare or do;
Push hard; however strong the bar,
It may swing back for you.
Count not the weight against your own;
Nor height nor depth survey,
But lay your shoulder to the bar,
And push, and push away!

Be thoughtful. Use your strength aright.
Be patient and intent;
Full many a bar has been unlodged
That never could be bent.
Push hard; push long; pray as you push;
Use thought as well as strength.
The chances are the tireless hand
Will shift the bar at length.

Imitation Cough Cures

Is an Imitation Cough Medicine Good Enough for Your Children?

When you are sick and send for the doctor you don't want him to send a young medical student he has in his office. You would rather have the young fellow experiment on some body else.

No more do you want imitations of the medicine you know to be of proven value in the cure of disease.

The remarkable success of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine in the cure of croup, bronchitis and colds has proven too great a temptation to imitators. They expect you to take chances with their medicines because the price is a few cents less.

Imitations are never sold on merit but depend on the merit of the article they imitate. You don't want to be experimented on, and for this reason will insist on seeing the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author, on the bottle you buy.

As it is made of simple ingredients of proven value, it is well suited for use as a treatment for children. That it is effective in the cure of croup, bronchitis, whooping cough and the most severe coughs and colds is attested by its many years of continued success and enormous sales. 25 cents, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

A QUESTION AND ANSWER

From Farm and Dairy.

What would constitute a balanced ration of the following: Flaxseed meal, barley meal, oats and bran? We have corn ensilage and clover hay to feed until the cows go on grass about June 1st.

2. Would it be profitable to purchase cottonseed meal and mix with the above.

3. Are carrots good for cows.—H.E.J., Leeds Co., Ont.

A ration including the feeds mentioned and likely to give good results in the way of milk produced might be prepared and fed as follows: Corn silage, 100 lbs.; 15 lbs. oat chaff or better still, cut clover hay, mixed with the silage and the following meal mixture: flax seed meal, 50 lbs; bran, 100 lbs.; barley meal, 100 lbs.; oats, ground, 100 lbs.

First thing in the morning feed what the cow will eat up clean of the ensilage, straw, or clover mixture, scattering thereon the meal it is desired to feed. When this part of the breakfast is consumed give from three to four lbs. long clover hay.

At noon feed to heavy milkers from two to three lbs. of meal and an equal weight of clover hay. If carrots are available this would be the time to feed them in addition to hay and meal. They might be fed as much as 20 lbs. a day of carrots. If such a quantity could be or were being fed the meal might be reduced by two or three pounds. At evening repeat the morning feeding in every respect.

A good dairy cow can make a profitable use of meal up to about one pound of such a mixture as described for each three or three and a half lbs. of milk produced. This means that a cow giving 35 lbs. of milk a day should receive from nine to 10 lbs. of meal a day. The meal had better be fed in two nearly equal portions night and morning after allowing for the light feed at noon. Where feeding is done early in the evening, there is no advantage in feeding at noon.

2. Cottonseed meal of good quality is usually profitable. It should show about 41 per cent. protein and would then be worth about $38 or $39 a ton.

3. Carrots are a most excellent feed for dairy cows, as are most roots.—J. H. G.

FEEDING OF SPRING PIGS

From Farm and Dairy.

Concerning feeding of spring pigs, Mr. A. Lorejoy, writing in the "Berkshire World," has the following to say:

"Many men feed pigs three times a day, but in our 30 years of swine breeding we have never fed but twice daily. We think that the pigs should not be disturbed during the heat of the day. They will make more pounds lying in the shade during the middle of the day than if out roaming about.

"About 5 o'clock they will all come out and graze like a flock of sheep, and after the evening meal will remain out till dark, and will be out very early in the morning grazing, and will remain out till after the morning feed, when they will go back to the shade, and stay till towards evening again. Well-bred pigs carried on in this manner will make good gains and should make from one pound to one and a quarter pounds daily, and at a very low cost. As the season advances and the pastures become dry the grain ration should be increased, more corn can be used as the pigs become older, and if one will plant a few acres of sweet corn early as possible he can have one of the best feeds to grow the pigs and at a low cost. This should be fed very carefully at first, however, and only one ear and stalk should be given at first, but after a day or two it may be increased slowly, and at the end of a week they may have all they can eat up clean once daily, still having the one feed of old maize daily.

"By pushing the pigs along in this manner they should be ready for an early fall market. If one can get his crop of spring pigs ripe enough for the market early in the fall he can generally get a better price than if fed in a careless manner along till late fall or early winter when the markets are glutted. It is the early pig that gets to the top of the market."

The pure bred Yorkshire pig sent me by Farm and Dairy recently for a club of nine new subscriptions to that paper, was bred by Mr. J. E. Brethour of Burford, Ont. It is a fine animal, and I am well repaid for my work in getting up this club.—C. Jantai, Perth Co., Ont.

INFORMATION ABOUT POULTRY

From Farm and Dairy.

Much valuable information along poultry lines was given by Prof. Elford of Macdonald College in an address before the last meeting of the Huntingdon Dairymen's Association. Here are a few of the nuggets of poultry wisdom gleaned from the Professor's address:

"Too great a variety of breeds in a flock is a mistake. A uniform flock is desirable.

"Produce high quality eggs and fowl, and there will always be a good market.

"Housing is undergoing a revelation. Artificial heat is not necessary. Cold air houses give best results.

"Market clean, choice eggs, of which you have no suspicion and which you know are all right. When the consumer asks for fresh eggs, give him fresh eggs and your market will be sure.

"Select the best laying strains of the breed you fancy. The American breeds are best suited to our conditions.

"Keep the house dry. Damp houses will ruin your flock.

"Our farmers are only beginning to awake to the great possibilities in poultry raising. Every 100 acre farm should keep 100 hens, and from these hens a revenue of $300 a year should be realized. These 100 birds should consist of 50 hens one year old and 50 pullets. This will give winter and spring eggs when the egg market is highest. In 1910, the product of the hen in Canada equalled half that of the cows in value or a total estimated value of $40,000,000. Man owes much to the hen. She has supplied the eggs to meet all his needs at the country store, and supplied him with many a good dinner as well."

NOT SICK FOR 76 YEARS

Lord Swaythling Was a Marvel of Good Health

The late Lord Swaythling, the famous Jewish banker, was a marvel of health. The first illness he ever had was contracted in January, 1909, when he was seventy-six years of age, through a heavy London fog, when he was laid up with severe bronchitis. Lord Swaythling considered that his marvellous health was entirely due to the fact that he was a strict observer of the Mosaic laws pertaining not only to daily food, but to hygiene. Lord Swaythling was head of the great banking firm of Montagu and Co. and during his career had the honor of being consulted by no fewer than three Chancellors of the Exchequer—Tory, Conservative and Liberal. He passed through many crises in the City, and well remembered when the Bank of France was so short of gold that it paid the bankers to draw golden napoleons from the bank itself, send them over to England to be melted down into bars, and resell them to France at a profit.

A CENSUS OF THE STARS

Orbs That Move Less than a Second in a Century

Mr. F. W. Dyson, the Astronomer Royal, speaking recently on a Census of the Stars, said that great as was the value of the census of the stellar population, it would be of far greater value when additional details were given with it. To what questions could they reasonably expect answers from a census to be taken? They could tell in what part of the sky a star was situated. That could be clearly answered of every star that they could see in a photograph. They might ask how bright a star was, and an accurate answer could be given of every bright star and an approximate one of all other sorts. In what direction was a star's proper movement? The proper motion of thousands of stars could be given. How fast was a star moving in miles per second towards or away from the sun? The number of stars in respect of which that question could be answered had been rapidly increasing in the last few years, and had reached some thousands. They could also ascertain whether a star was double or single. In 1865 it was calculated that there were 300,000 stars, down to a magnitude of 9½. Now, more than a million for the whole sky had been definitely ascertained as regards their positions and magnitudes, and the number of stars approximately in the sky down to the 14th magnitude was 24 millions. The star with the largest proper motion was quite a faint one. It was discovered in 1897, and it moved 8.7 seconds a year. To make a complete circuit of the sky it would take 150,000 years. In the constellation of Orion there are eight bright stars that moved less than one second in a century.

40,000 TROOPS AT KING'S CORONATION

Lord Kitchener, of Khartoum, to Command Grand Military Pageant.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

LORD KITCHENER of Khartoum, who is to command the troops at the coronation, is expected to reach London early in April, and then the general scheme of military arrangements for the celebrations will be submitted for the king's approval.

It is expected that there will be forty thousand men of all arms in the pageant. Six infantry brigades will be mustered in London, and there will be two brigades made up of the Aldershot command under General Sir Smith-Dorrien, the southern command under General Sir Charles Douglas and the eastern command under General Sir A. Paget. These will provide twenty thousand infantry, apart from the mounted troops and artillery upon the outward, to guard and line the route. One of the features of the last coronation will be missing—the black troops from India and elsewhere.

In the decoration of London's streets for the royal progress there will be hardly any uniform scheme, but the buildings along the route of the procession will be covered with flags and swathed in bunting by day and illuminated brilliantly by electricity at night. In 1902, when King Edward was crowned, gas was used as the illuminant.

The decoration of the bridges will be one of the attractive features of 1911. They will fairly blaze with light at night during the celebration. Westminster Bridge will be decorated more ambitiously in line with the plan adopted in 1902, when two great lions stood at each end and sixteen masts twelve yards high bore cross arms from which banners, painted by the pupils of the Royal School of Art, and sixteenth century lamps were hung. Plaster busts of English kings and queens stood on a dozen pedestals, each of which was fourteen feet high, and in the centre of the bridge towering above all others were busts of Queen Elizabeth and Queen Victoria.

HINT TO AMERICANS.

With plans so well forward it may be a timely thing to let Americans who intend to come over to see this great pageant know that unless they engage hotel accommodations or lodgings now they will have to put up with quarters in distant suburbs. It is true that money will do much, and it may be that many rooms in London's hotels have been engaged for purely speculative purposes and that these can be obtained by belated millionaires, but as, notwithstanding general English belief, the majority of Americans are outside that happy, favored class, the thing to do is to engage rooms at once.

There are many stories afloat of fabulous prices being demanded for rooms by hotel proprietors, but that this is not true is evidenced by the naive declaration of a manager of one of the leading caravanseries that the increase in prices would not be great. To prove this contention he instanced the fact that rooms in his hotel which are now let at $3 a day will bring in only $5 a day for the coronation celebration. This statement should serve as a hint that it will be well to bring a plentiful supply of the root of all evil, as foodstuffs, too, like the champagne of France, will "mount upward" in price.

While hotel keepers are being severely criticised because of the exorbitant demands they are making, the average English householder should not be overlooked. Apartments which are now being rented at $15 a week are expected to bring $60 a week during the coronation celebrations. These landlords, in order to obtain their share of the gold that is coming, have notified tenants not protected by leases that they must surrender their rooms during the month of June.

One of these victims, a resident of New York by the way, has lodged in the apartments from which he is to be evicted more than three years.

TWO SIDES TO THE CASE.

Owners of windows along the route of the procession are determined also to share in the prosperity that is to be brought to England by hundreds of thousands of visitors from the overseas possessions and America. When an Englishman thinks of the United States the next thought is a "dollars," and so if you are coming to join with your "kin across the sea" in the glory of the crowning of the fifth George don't forget to bring a plentiful supply, for you can't walk back and it's a mighty long swim.

There is another side, however, to the hotel question, and it must be said that the directors of the Savoy, the Ritz, Claridge's, the Cecil and the Carlton are making every effort to make these hotels as comfortable as the hotels to which Americans are accustomed at home. Several of the managers have made arrangements to import American delicacies, and those who are wise in their generation are trying to find out just what Americans like.

Just a word of warning to those who are coming to the coronation. Be sure that your return passage is engaged, or you may be as long in London as some of the young American prosperers who came to London on a week and remained to grow Rip Van Winkle whiskers.

Although "fancy" risk business at Lloyd's now is openly discouraged by the committee, there are numerous insurances being effected to cover the payment of claims arising out of the forthcoming coronation. West end tradesmen in particular—little as the risk may appear as the time for the coronation draws nearer—are not spending their efforts to protect themselves against loss that might result from a postponement or an alteration of the route.

CANADA WILL GET MONEYED SETTLERS

"Emigrants de Luxe" Are Now on the Way to the Dominion To Be Farmers.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

WHEN the Royal Edward left Liverpool for Halifax she carried aboard a unique party of emigrants. In comparison with the ordinary run of emigrants landed at New York they might well be styled "emigrants de luxe," for they are all persons who are more or less well to do. The amount of capital which each one takes into Canada varies from five thousand to twenty-five thousand dollars.

The party numbers a little more than two hundred and has been gathered from all sections of England. They are all farmers or are going to be farmers, and with the means at their command can start on an extensive scale and without any of the handicaps which usually retard the new settler.

In this party of moneyed emigrants are many retired army officers who have sons growing up. It is mainly for the benefit of these sons that the change will be made and new homes established in the Dominion, where the prospects for future prosperity are so much brighter than they are in England. It is the plan of the heads of these families to train their boys in practical farming for a few years and then when they are grown up to give them farms of their own to develop. Land in sufficient quantities will be bought, so that there will be plenty to divide up when the time comes. With land at two shillings an acre these "emigrants de luxe" can easily afford to purchase large tracts.

The party is under the personal direction of Mr. J. M. Clarke, an agent of the Ontario government, who came to England for the express purpose of assembling the emigrants, conducting them to Canada and seeing to it that they are satisfactorily settled in various parts of the province of Ontario.

"Still another party, similar in character and numbers, will leave England on April 6," said Mr. H. A. Macdonald, who is at present acting as the agent of the Ontario government in Great Britain. Mr. M. B Colcock, the regular agent, has been ill for three months and unable to attend to his duties. He is now rapidly recovering and will be back at his office in a short time.

"This second party," continued Mr Macdonald, "will be under the direction of Mr. James Farrell. They will go over on board the Tunisian, of the Allan line, and will take up homesteads with a good bank account to back them.

"These are the kind of emigrants we want, and really the only kind. We don't seek to dump a lot of paupers into Canada. We want emigrants who have capital enough to insure their enterprise being a success, and I am happy to say that we are at last getting just that kind.

"Of course we cannot expect all the emigrants to be well to do men, and we strongly encourage young men who are willing to go on the land and become farm laborers. We do not encourage them to start out on their own, however, even if they have sufficient capital, until they have had a few years' practical experience on a farm and find out for themselves if they are suited to be farmers.

"Those young men who go over to work on farms are assisted by the government to the extent of £4 if they have not sufficient money of their own left after paying their transportation. They must have £5 when they land in Canada, you know, or they will not be allowed to come in. Mr. D. Sutherland, the Director of Colonisation in Toronto, finds them a job on a farm as soon as they land and gives them a card which insures them protection by the government against any ill-treatment by the farmer. If the farmer doesn't use them right he is blacklisted and will have his labor supply cut off.

"We are interested only in sending over farmers and domestic servants. Skilled labor we have nothing to do with. That is a supply that the demand will create itself. We tell all mechanics who think of going over that the government will not aid them and that they do it on their own responsibility. We could not help them, as it would get us into all sorts of difficulties with the trades unions.

"So successful have we been with our high class emigration work lately that we are now rebuilding the structure at No. 163 Strand and will soon have large and fine offices there for the work. Mr James Duff, the Minister of Agriculture, will come over in June to make a personal investigation of the situation here."

WALES RECOGNIZED IN PRINCE'S ARMS

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

The coronet of "Leo" and "Ys" and rarebits has won its fight to be recognized in the Arms of the Prince of Wales. The arms assigned recently by the King in council consist of the Royal Arms, differenced by the Prince's label and charged in the centre with an escutcheon of the Arms of Wales, surmounted by the Prince's coronet. The inclusion of the Arms of Wales is the outcome of a wish long expressed by the Welsh people, that the principality should share with Scotland and Ireland the honor of representation in the Arms of Dominion. The arms given for Wales are those of Llewellyn, the last and most powerful of the Welsh princes of the Welsh line.

Beautiful and High Bred English Girls Chosen by Queen Mary as Train Bearers

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

GREAT interest has been aroused since the announcement that Queen Mary intended to select a number of young girls for her train bearers instead of pages, as in the case of Queen Alexandra, and the publication of the names of those who are to be thus honored has been eagerly waited.

The six girls are Lady Mary Dawson, daughter of Lord and Lady Dawtrey; Lady Mabel Ogilvy, daughter of the Earl and Countess of Airlie; Lady Eileen Butler, daughter of the Earl and Countess of Lanesborough; Lady Dorothy Browne, daughter of Lord and Lady Kenmare; Lady Victoria Carrington, daughter of Lord and Lady Carrington, and Lady Eileen Knox, daughter of the Earl and Countess of Ranfurly.

Nothing can yet be said as to the form of dress this sextet of pretty young girls will wear, but they are certain to add a picturesque touch to the procession. In the case of Queen Victoria eight daughters of peers were selected to carry her train, while Queen Adelaide's train was carried by six daughters of peers. Queen Alexandra therefore departed from precedent by selecting pages.

The Queen's canopy bearers, four in number, have been chosen for their height, and three of them are the same as did duty in a similar capacity at the crowning of Queen Alexandra. These are the Duchess of Sutherland, the Duchess of Portland, the Duchess of Montrose and the Duchess of Hamilton, the last named being the only one of the handsome quartet who did not officiate at the last coronation.

But it is hardly likely there will be a prettier, certainly not a more interesting, personage at the coronation than the little Baroness Clifton of Leighton-Bromswold a child of only eleven years. And this will be the second occasion upon which, young as she is, she has taken part in the coronation of a British Sovereign, for at the tender age of two she wore her peeress' robes and coronet in Westminster Abbey when King Edward was crowned.

How she came to the barony, of which title she is the seventeenth holder, is interesting. The title dates back to 1608, when the little lady's ancestor, Sir Gervase Clifton, was summoned to Parliament as Baron Clifton. Her father was the sixteenth baron, and also the seventh Earl of Darnley, in the Irish peerage; but when her father died, in 1900, the year his only daughter was born, the Earldom of Darnley passed to his brother, the Honorable Ivo Francis Walter Bligh, while the Barony of Clifton remained with the infant Elizabeth Adeline Mary Bligh.

THE BARONESS CLIFTON OF LEIGHTON BROMSWOLD

BRITONS BOMBARD KING WITH VERSE

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

THE author of "Mother, Pin a Rose on Me" must look out for his laurels in this the coronation year of King George V., for all England, like Silas Wegg, is dropping into poetry, or what passes for it among the charitably inclined.

Dressmakers, clerks, commercial travellers, actresses, sailors, street cleaners and office boys are breaking out into verse, and music publishers and magazines are being deluged with so-called coronation odes, but, so far as heard from, the laurels of Sir Alfred Austin are absolutely safe.

Nothing can give you a clearer line on the character of the verse that is being offered than the foregoing statement. One of the odes, written by an office boy, who has evidently been in touch with the genius American, begins:—

"Great George our King, You're the real thing."

And a clerk at Harrod's begins his offering with a majestic sweep, thus—"Mighty, Monarch of a wave swept realm.
We pray that you may hold the helm."

Which after all is not half bad when you consider that the fifth George is a sailor King.

Patriotism is usually a good thing, but when it finds relief in verse it becomes painful. A reader for one of the leading magazine houses says:—

"We have been overwhelmed by poets and would-be poets, mostly the latter. Hundreds of the efforts are so laughable that I really am glad that I haven't chapped lips. One versifier in Houndsditch has a peculiar idea of what a coronation celebration is, for in his contribution he describes it as an "orge," thus finding a word that rhymes with George. On the other hand, I have passed upon some high class coronation odes and songs which will be read and heard by the public in the near future."

So you will see that being King has its disadvantages, as fully a million verse makers in England are bombarding His Majesty, with Scotland, Wales, the Overseas Dominions and, last but by no means least, Ireland still to be heard from. In fact, the ode making habit has become so general that instead of putting a penny in the slot it is only necessary to buy a whiskey and soda for a loyal Briton—same price to hear him declaim his coronation ode.

BELGRAVE SQUARE'S MANY NEW TENANTS

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

ANNOUNCEMENT that the late Earl of Ancaster's town house, at Wilton terrace and West Halkin street, with its fine front toward Belgrave square, is in the market, marks the latest of the many changes that have come to this aristocratic neighborhood in the last quarter of a century.

When Lord Ancaster's house, No 18, goes into other hands, as no doubt it soon will, all the four great mansions at the corners of Belgrave square will have changed owners within a short space of time. The Marquis of Downshire sold the house that bears his name to Lord Pirrie. When Lord Sefton died, Sefton House was bought for a fancy sum by Lord Howard De Walden, who, it will be remembered, was awarded a farthing damages a few weeks ago when he sued a tenant named Lewis for displaying placards containing reflections upon his lordship outside the building occupied as a store by the defendant.

Lord de Walden has spent quite a fortune on the interior decorations of Sefton House. There have been many other changes of late in Belgrave square. The pleasant house where the Squire of Masham, Sir Villevois, and his wife were wont to give many entertainments is now the town house of Viscount Hamilton, who lives there in retirement.

The splendid old Canyngham town house has been empty since the death of the Dowager Marchioness. The changes in the square culminated when Mortimer House, the rather commonplace residence of the late Lord Penrhyn, was transformed into palatial Forbes House, the residence of the present Master of the Horse, and when, only a few months ago, that architectural relic of the late Georges, Belgrave Chapel, was wiped out, it was one change for the better.

Reference to Lord Howard de Walden as the plaintiff in an action for libel recalls the fact that he derives most of his income from ground rents in London. He is a many sided man, as will be evident when one realises that, in addition to being poet and playwright, he is also an all round sportsman, much interested in the once royal sport of falconry, which he is endeavoring to revive as a national pastime.

Once he achieved the unique feat of shooting a pheasant and a hare almost simultaneously. When he fired at the bird the report disturbed the hare. Like a flash Lord de Walden turned round and killed the hare with the second barrel.

King George Rides a Horse Once Meant for a Sultan

KING GEORGE ATTENDED BY MAJOR WIGHAM.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

KING GEORGE is evidently bent upon reviving some of the glories of Rotten Row, but if society is going to keep pace with the court in this matter it will have to change its hours.

For some reason King George suddenly dropped the habit of early riding in the Row soon after his accession, but now he has resumed, and if the royal example is to be followed fifteen o'clock must cease to be the fashionable hour in the Row, for the King is out riding in the mornings before most of the dwellers in Mayfair and Belgravia have finished breakfast.

The King used to ride a big black horse, but his favorite now is a rich light chestnut a horse with a history. It is a splendid animal, standing 16.2, beautifully formed. It is, in fact, the charger which King Edward bought as a present for the deposed Sultan of Turkey. The horse was selected with special care, and the precautions were arranged, the Sultan had accepted the King's offer and the Foreign Office had approved the presentation.

The gift was duly despatched and had got as far as Marseilles when the news came that Abdul Hamid had been deposed. The charger was returned to the royal stables in London and now is admired by all who see him with King George in the saddle.

TURKS TO STUDY IN JAPAN.

[Special Correspondence.]
Tokio, Feb 25, 1911.—Ten students commissioned by the Turkish government will soon arrive in Japan to enter the Imperial University after they have learned sufficient Japanese. It is stated that "some of them are of royal descent, while the remainder are scions of wealthy commercial families. They are all graduates of the French University maintained by the French at Constantinople and are proficient in French and Russian.

FOR A $75,000,000 LOAN.

[Special Correspondence.]
Tokio, Feb. 25, 1911.—It is stated by the Yomiuri that the government is negotiating with London and Paris financiers for the flotation of another loan of fifteen million pounds sterling. It is believed that the rate will be four per cent, but further information in which the money will be expended is that it will be used for the redemption of outstanding debentures bearing higher interest.

CRUSHING JAPAN'S ANARCHIST PLOT

Luncheons Returned from the Prison to the Senders the Signal That Sentence Was Executed.

[Special Correspondence.]
Tokio, Feb 27, 1911.

THE Japanese are not in the habit of wearing their hearts upon their sleeves for daws to peck at, but none the less there is still room for doubt that the lurid tragedy of the anarchist plot against the life of their ruler has left a very unpleasant impression upon the national consciousness.

Although, too, the official press professes great relief that the execution of Kotoku, Suga Kanna and their ten comrades in crime and misfortune has relieved society from the "shame and disgrace of living under the same heaven" with these abominable traitors, it is equally certain that news of the hanging within a week of the pronouncement of sentence of death—a thing totally unprecedented in the history of the Japanese criminal code—gave an unwonted shock to the nerves of the community. The general impression—an impression shared even by the semi-official press—was that the doom of the anarchists would be deferred until April or May.

Particulars of the dreadful ceremony are necessarily conjectural, since only officials were allowed to witness it. Still, when on their mettle, the Japanese newspapers show wonderful resource, and seeing that even prison officials are only human it is a fairly safe assumption that the meagre accounts so far published possess a reasonable basis of fact.

Denjiro Kotoku, the head of the conspiracy, was first to expiate his crime. He and five of his comrades mounted the scaffold in succession during the forenoon of the day set for the hangings. The Japanese arrive at this conclusion by a very simple induction. It appears that during the afternoon of this day the friends and relatives of the condemned sent in to the prison the luncheons ordered had been served daily since the trial, but that of these luncheons six remained untouched. For the men themselves there is no concern with all the pomp and circumstance so often distinguishes the execution of capital murderers. The Japanese [illegible] the extra luncheons is that are extended to prisoners awaiting execution.

JAPAN'S FIREMEN A HOWLING MOB

Cool Enough in War, in the Presence of a Conflagration They Are Lamentable.

[Special Correspondence.]
Tokio, Feb 27, 1911.

AS a display of low comedy talent, of acrobatic skill and of lung capacity the review of the Tokio fire brigades at Hibiya Park may have had a certain degree of interest, but as a demonstration of practical efficiency in dealing with what the Japanese translator loves to designate "conflagrations" it was unutterably farcical.

After witnessing such a lamentable display of ineptitude one could only marvel that the capital has hitherto escaped total destruction or that the ravages to which Tokio was subjected last year were restricted to some twenty thousand houses. It is true that the metropolitan fire companies represent a great advance upon what they were during pre-Meiji days, when the greatest solicitude of the members of the "hi-keshi-gumi" was devoted not to the task of extinguishing the flames but rather to that of deterring from interference the little effigy of a god or patron saint, which every company unfailingly carried with it on these expeditions for good luck.

Old residents bear witness to the vociferous energy and enthusiasm with which the firemen fulfilled this self-appointed task, while the fire in its turn merrily disported its minions of sizzling everything inflammable within an accessible area. If, however, in the end the firemen escaped [illegible] withdrawing with their little wooden [illegible] and still intact they were immensely pleased with themselves and were satisfied that society at large could have no ground for demanding anything more than this.

[illegible] and capable in war, the Japanese, [illegible] entirely of familiarity, appear to [illegible] heads when fire starts [illegible] reigns supreme. Connected [illegible] fire station are large numbers [illegible] may be termed auxiliaries who [illegible] nothing to do with the actual [illegible] extinguishing the flames, but [illegible] appointed on the [illegible] principle [illegible] [illegible] to remove goods and chattels from [illegible] within the danger zone.

NOW DR. OWEN IS TARGET OF POET

His Friends in London Believe That After All He Deserves a Better Fate.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

DR. ORVILLE OWEN, once of Detroit, Mich., but now "the mud digger of the Wye," is out with a challenge to publicly debate the subject of the Baconian authorship of Shakespeare's plays with any Shakespearian authority.

He offers to prove the existence of a secret cipher in these plays and prefers to meet such accepted Shakespearian authorities as Mr. Andrew Lang, Mr Sidney Lee, Sir William Robertson Nicol or Mr Clement Shorter.

Mr. Montyn Pigrott, the poet laureate of the Savage Club, has contributed a few stanzas dealing with the work of the Sage of Chepstow. Here they are—

Upon the mud banks of the Wye
He's digging daily, digging nightly,
In garb that to our island eye
Is most unsightly.

The wildfowl send weird cries abroad,
And on his toil the ducks and drakes peer.
As he attempts to prove the fraud
Of William Shakespeare.

The mist looms o'er him like a pall,
But [illegible] undismayed
To show that Shakespeare's plays were all
The work of Bacon.

He'll also prove that Bacon wrote
The works of Dickens, Swift and Shelley,
Of Philip Sidney, Milton, Grote
And Miss Corelli.

So let's not seek the Yankee's blood
Or pass the sentence of a "lifer"—
We have our own who deal in mud
To find a cipher.

All lovers of Shakespeare will no doubt agree that Dr Owen deserves some punishment for trying to upset our belief in the Bard of Avon, but making fun the target of Mr Pigrott's poesy is going a bit too far. Next thing we know the Poet Laureate will have a shot at the digger of the Wye [illegible] what, rather say, mud!

HORSE RACING AND THE KING

His Majesty Has No Hankering After the Reputation of Being a Sporting Man

Although King George intends to bestow his formal encouragement upon the social aspect of the Turf, it is an open secret at the Court that he does not mean to elevate the sport of horse-racing to a supreme place in his personal interests. King George is a firm believer in physical recreations for the nation at large. He desires to make it clear that, so far as he is concerned, personal effort in recreation deserves a higher place in the estimation of the people than mere attendance at spectacular sports. He is very proud—and does not hesitate to say so to his intimates—of the title of "sportsman," but he has no hankering after the reputation of being a "sporting man." While, therefore, he will go down to Epsom for the summer meeting, and drive from Windsor to Ascot in traditional State, King George intends to give every special encouragement to other forms of sport as opportunity serves. This means several things. It means that Cowes will be a more brilliant affair than ever, especially as the King and Queen will not be back again from Holyrood in time for Goodwood. It means that, when staying at Windsor in the first week of July, their Majesties may very possibly drive over to Henley, although they have no intention of taking over the leadership of the social side of the regatta. It means that they will be seen at Lord's; that they may drive down to the Magazine to see one of the meets of each of the coaching clubs; and that they will increase the number of cups and trophies which they have already offered for various forms of championship.

LONG SPEECHES IN PARLIAMENT

Some of the Orators of the Past Who Sometimes Occupied Hours in Important Debates

"Never in the history of Parliament," Mr. Balfour once exclaimed, with clenched hands and flashing eyes, "has such a proposal been made in so brief a speech." Such was the right honorable gentleman's surprise and indignation when Sir William Harcourt sat down after a five minutes' speech introducing the Evicted Tenants Bill.

Indeed, any speech less than an hour in length on an occasion like this would almost have seemed an insult to the House.

In 1642, after hours of dreary oratory, a member rose and exclaimed, "The House is empty, and so be our stomachs. I pray ye, therefore, adjourn the debate for one hour." But Speaker Long would not listen to the pleading. He could sit as long as Legislators could talk; and sit he did, until he fell off his chair in a dead faint.

In the Stuart days, when it was no uncommon thing for a parson to turn his hour-glass three or four times before he arrived at "Lastly, my brethren," the man who could not and did not keep on his legs at Westminster for three hours at least was thought as little of as the squire who could not carry his three bottles of port. Any prosy legislator, it is said, spoke for seven hours; and another for six, without leaving the perpendicular.

In later years Sheridan, speaking on the Begum case, held the floor and his audience for five solid hours at a stretch; and Sir Robert Peel apologized for the "shortness and inadequacy" of a speech on the Corn Laws which fell just short of four hours. Lord Palmerston once orated four hours and a half on Don Pacifico and five minutes later was on his feet again, as fresh as when he started. And did not Mr. Biggar, that loquacious Irishman, once "hould the flure" from half-past twelve to half-past five on the thrilling topic of the Devon Commission?

No matter how trivial the subject, an hour was a very modest limit, as when proved when one honorable gentleman spoke for eighty minutes on undersized fish, and another took up sixty minutes with a learned hanangue on bog in the Hebrides. Mr. Gladstone, who, when wound up, "could go on all day without turning a hair," spoke for five hours without a pause when introducing his first Budget; and such was the magic of his tongue that he kept his auditors entertained and breathless to the last word. He made dry figures as fascinating as romance.

There have been many attempts to curb this oratorical flow since, in 1848, Mr. Milner Gibson proposed a new Standing Order directing "that the speeches of members be limited in duration to one hour"; but the weight of opinion has been fatal to them. Mr. Gibson's motion was negatived by 96 to 62, and a much more recent motion by Major Rasch, imposing a twenty minutes' limit, by a majority of 40.

KINGS WERE LIBELLED

Offenders Did Not Get Off Easily in the Long Ago

People who went out of their way to libel their Sovereign in days gone by did not usually get off so lightly as did the defendant in a recent notorious case.

For instance, Leigh Hunt, the famous essayist and poet, was sent to prison for two years—exactly twice the length of Mylius's term—for calling George IV. "a fat Adonis of fifty." And George was not even King at the time, only Regent.

Going back further still we find John Stubbs, a student of Lincoln's Inn, arrested for libelling Queen Elizabeth. He was sentenced to have his right hand cut off, and the barbarous punishment was inflicted in public in the market-place at Westminster by driving a cleaver through the wrist with a mallet. The moment Stubbs lost his right hand he waved his cap with his left, crying, "Long live the Queen."

Then there was that unhappy Walter Walker, grocer, at the sign of the Crown, who said he would make his son heir to the crown. When Edward IV. was told of this merry jest, he ordered Walker to be arrested and put to death for treason.

Almost as hard was the fate of the Buckinghamshire churl who, drinking one day in a village alehouse, spoke disrespectfully of Henry VIII. "King Hal," he hiccoughed, "is no true king. Would I had his crown here, that I might play football with it."

The libeller was hanged, drawn, and quartered, and pieces of his body were distributed as a warning amongst the market towns of the county.

ARTFUL DODGES TO AVOID RENT

Tricky Tenants who Plot to Have Comfortable Abodes Free of Charge

The methods adopted in London, England, to obtain the tenancy of a a house by rogues who never intend to pay any rent are extremely artful. Three constitutes the usual number of confederates in each gang, and for the moment we will suppose their names to be Smith, Brown and Robinson. The first step is for Smith to pose as a prospective tenant and visit various house agents' offices in the neighborhood selected, and obtain particulars of ...ious habitations to be let. He is, as a rule, loudly dressed, wears expensive jewellery, and adopts no end of swagger, which as often as not deceives the unsuspicious agent.

Having chosen a suitable residence, Smith returns to the agent's office and agrees to rent the premises on the usual agreement, subject, of course, to the necessary decorations, etc., being carried out at the landlord's expense.

The agent makes a practice of asking for references, but this difficulty is easily overcome. Mr. Smith refers the agent to his landlord, Mr. Brown, and to his solicitor, Mr. Robinson. These gentlemen are then written to, and their replies being, as may be supposed, so very satisfactory, Mr. Smith obtains possession of the house. Mr. Brown and Mr. Robinson also obtain their houses in different localities in an exactly similar manner.

Of course, no rent is ever paid, and in order, as long as possible, to delay the agent distraining, all kinds of excuses are made. At last the agent's patience is exhausted and an entry is effected. Imagine the bailiff's dismay when, upon entering the premises, he is immediately shown actual receipts in Robinson's or Brown's name for the whole of the contents. He has no alternative, therefore, but to withdraw the man in possession.

In similar circumstances, when the bailiff in Brown's district distrains for rent, receipts are produced in Smith's name, and likewise as regards Robinson. But this is not all. These gentry refuse to give up possession of the house until paid a sum of money by the landlord, and often as not they obtain fairly large sums in this manner, as the owner would, by the cumbersome methods of legal procedure, be kept out of possession for quite a lengthy period. Hence, it is often to his advantage to pay the rogues rather than walk and incur further loss of rent.

Of course the landlord may go to the expense of a summons, and win, perhaps, be successful in obtaining an order for payment by instalments, but before the first instalment has become due the rogue has disappeared, only to adopt similar practices in different neighborhoods under various aliases. The landlord is thus left with further costs to pay and nothing in return.

STOMACH DISTRESS AND DYSPEPSIA GO

Makes Your Out-of-order Stomach Feel Fine in Five Minutes

As there if often some one in your family who suffers an attack of Indigestion or some form of Stomach trouble, why don't you keep some Diapepsin in the house handy?

This harmless blessing will digest anything you can eat without the slightest discomfort, and overcome a sour, gassy Stomach five minutes after.

Tell your pharmacist to let you read the formula plainly printed on these 50-cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin, then you will readily see why it makes Indigestion, Sour Stomach, Heartburn and other distress go in five minutes, and relieve at once such miseries as Belching of Gas, Eructations of sour, undigested food, Nausea, Headaches, Dizziness, Constipation and other Stomach disorders.

Some folks have tried so long to find relief from Indigestion and Dyspepsia or an out-of-order stomach with the common, ever-day cures advertised that they have about made up their minds that they have something else wrong, or believe theirs is a case of Nervousness, Gastritis, Catarrh of the Stomach or Cancer.

This, no doubt, is a serious mistake. Your real trouble is, what you eat does not digest; instead, it ferments and sours, turns to acid, Gas and Stomach poison, which putrefy in the digestive tract and intestines, and, besides, poison the breath with nauseous odours.

A hearty appetite, with thorough digestion, and without the slightest discomfort or misery of the Stomach, is waiting for you as soon as you decide to try Pape's Diapepsin.

OFF WITH HIS HEAD

Amusing Story Told of Louis of Bavaria

A service-paper relates an amusing story of King Louis of Bavaria. His Majesty was much annoyed one one occasion when the soldier on guard at the palace gates neglected to present arms. The truth was the soldier did not know His Majesty by sight.

"Why don't you present arms?" the latter asked, angrily. "Don't you know to whom you are indebted for your daily bread?"

The sentry glared angrily at the King, and, imagining him to be the Army baker, said:—

"So you are the miserable son of a baker who furnishes the soldiers with bread, are you? Well, I should like to have you by yourself in some quiet place. I'd spread your ungainly anatomy over three kingdoms! I'd make dough of you!"

GREAT BRITAIN AIR BATTALION

A Recent War Office Order Gives the Details of the Proposed Organization

England is to have an Army Air Battalion. An order has just been issued from the War Department, which explains how this new branch of the service is to be organized.

It will be an engineering unit—a body of expert airmen, organized in such a way as to facilitate the formation of units ready to take the field with troops, and capable of expansion by any reserve formation which may be formed in the future.

"In addition," the order states, "the training and instruction of men in handling kites, balloons, aeroplanes, and other forms of air craft will also devolve on this battalion.

The warrant officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the battalion will be selected from the Royal Engineers, but officers of any branch of the Regular Army who are on the active list will be eligible for service in the Air Battalion.

The following qualifications will be taken into account in the selection of officers:—

Special recommendation from commanding officer.
Aviator's certificate.
Experience in aeronautics.
Rank not above captain.
Medical fitness.
Good eyesight.
Proficiency in map-reading and field sketching.
Unmarried.
Not less than two years' service.
Under thirty years of age.
Good sailor.
Knowledge of foreign languages.
Taste for mechanics.
Light weight (under 11 st., 7 lbs.).

Applications for appointment in the Air Battalion are to be submitted to the War Office through the usual military channels.

Selected candidates will, on joining the Air Battalion, go through a six months' probationary course, including two months kiting and ballooning.

If, at the end of that time, they show no aptitude for the work, they will rejoin their units. Those who prove satisfactory will be seconded and appointed to the Air Battalion for four years, inclusive of the probation period. At any time, however, officers will be allowed to resign their appointment with the battalion.

MURDERED A COUNT

An Accused Married Couple Say the Countess Lured Them to do so

The beautiful Sardinian Countess Zolo Delitala has been arrested at Sassari. In June last her husband was found murdered in a lonely spot in the outlying village of Bolotana. Some months later the police arrested a married couple, named Nuroni, and shut them up in the Sassari prison on the charge of having assassinated the count. They are now said to admit the crime, but allege that their services were hired by the countess. Her pretty 16-year-old daughter, it is said, was deeply in love with a smart young military officer. Her father, the Count Delitala, resolutely refused to sanction the match. The countess, however, persuaded that this marriage would seal the girl's happiness, finally determined to arrange for the nobleman's death.

40-lb. Salmon Landed

Weighing 40 pounds and measuring close on four feet in length, a large Jock Scott salmon has been caught on the fly in the Hampshire Avon, near Christchurch. At the first attempt at landing the gaff broke, and the fish made a grim struggle for life.

Where Houses Are Wanted

There are families in Braintree Workhouse, Essex, who would not be there if enough cottages could be found at the average rental paid by an agricultural laborer. Young men cannot marry because there are no houses for them in the district.

CEILING SENSE

cover old plaster with them

You would not tolerate a plaster ceiling in your home or store, if you really knew how much better are Preston Steel Ceilings. For plaster cracks and crumbles—and these steel ceilings cannot. Plaster harbors dust, disease germs, vermin—and Preston Steel Ceilings cannot, because they have no crevices and can be washed like a pane of glass.

PRESTON

save on fire insurance

And, then, any fire insurance company will grant you a lower rate if you put in Preston ceilings. For they go a great way towards fire-proofing an interior. Of course they are damp-proof as well. You can have Preston Ceilings put on to cover old plaster ceilings. Easily done. We tell you how.

STEEL

and they cost so little!

Preston Steel Ceilings never need repairs and seldom need re-decorating. They will outlast the building you put them in. Thus they are the cheapest ceiling money buys, in point of service. Even in first cost they compete easily with plaster. In the long run, plaster simply doesn't compare. Nor does it in beauty. For these ceilings come in hundreds of most graceful, eye-charming designs, that can be painted in any color scheme. Our skilled decorators advise you, free, about colors, if you wish.

HASTINGS, MARCH 22.—Rev. Mr. Richards of Westwood, occupied the pulpit of the Methodist church on Sunday last, in the absence of the pastor, Rev. C. W. Barrett.

On Saturday night last, some unknown person or persons broke into Mr. B. M. [illegible] and stole away several dollars' worth of goods. As yet the guilty parties have not been captured.

On Wednesday last as three small children, belonging to Mr. R. Walsh, were playing around an old well, one of them slipped and fell in. With great presence of mind the eldest child grasped him by the clothing, while she sent the other one to the house for assistance, but before the help arrived she had let go and the little one was in great danger of being drowned, but just in the nick of time an aunt of the children appeared on the scene and succeeded in pulling the little fellow out. He was taken to the house where he received the necessary treatement and is none the worse for his cold bath.

PRIZE BUTTER

From Farm and Dairy.

H. W. Patrick, Elgin Co., Ont

The butter which won me the first prize at Toronto last fall, the manufacture of which I will outline at the request of Farm and Dairy, was not made especially for the occasion, but was selected from the everyday make of the factory. Our creamery is run on the gathered-cream system, all patrons having individual cans. The cream is gathered three times a week. Some is drawn by teams and some by express routes. We endeavor to interest our patrons in the proper care of the cream. On the whole we get very good cream.

The cream comes in at a temperature of 60 degrees and contains about 28 per cent. fat, with acidity reading 3.5 to 4 on the acidimeter. The cream is all strained through a large sieve into the ripening vat. I then add about two per cent. of culture to the cream, containing about six-tenths acid. Then I heat the cream to 70 degrees, and leave it at that temperature for a couple of hours, giving it an occasional stirring. I then cool the cream as rapidly as possible to 50 degrees. By this time the cream has developed acid very close to five-tenths. The cream is held at that temperature till morning, when it is churned.

It takes from 30 to 40 minutes to churn. I stop the churn when the granules are like small beans. After the buttermilk is drawn off I spray the butter with water at about 54 degrees. I then wash the butter once at 52 degrees, giving the churn only about 15 revolutions in washing, which will take the buttermilk out just as well as 40 revolutions, and has not so much tendency to spoil the grain. I then salt it five per cent., work it for five revolutions, and let it stand about 10 minutes. I do this three times, giving 15 revolutions in the whole working.

Our butter is put up in one pound prints, in as neat a condition as possible. Careful printing has a very important influence on the sale of butter.

CONSIDERED ENLARGEMENT

From Farm and Dairy.

The Winter Fair Board Executive met at Guelph on March 17th to consider the enlargement of the Winter Fair Buildings. More stabling room is essential, and to get more room the present fire hall, carcass room and lecture hall may be turned into stables for horses. The lectures could be held in the city hall adjoining and the dressed carcass room could be moved upstairs.

Over 1800 entries of seed grain of a quality that has never before been equalled on the Island, made the provincial seed fair held at Summerside, P.E.I., on March 8, 9 and 10, the most successful in the history of the fair. This seed fair, one of the largest in Canada, is a great stimulus to the Island seed growers, and to it seed buyers come from all parts of the Maritime provinces, and in fact from all parts of Canada, to purchase the high class seed for which Prince Edward Island has a reputation.

Discussing the next possible city where their convention may be held, the directors of the Western Dairymen's Association, which met in London last week, left it with the executive committee to decide later. The directors discussed the dairy farms and factory competitions, and appointed J. N. Paget as representative on Farm and Dairy. It was decided to continue the dairy herd competition along similar lines to last year, any changes in details to be left with the executive. A few minor points regarding the coming season's work were discussed, which as yet are not in shape for publication.

USING PURGATIVES INJURES HEALTH

What You Need in Spring is a Blood Building Tonic

A spring medicine is an actual necessity to most people. Nature demands it as an aid in carrying off the impurities that have accumulated in the blood during the long winter months of indoor life. Unfortunately thousands of people who recognize the necessity for a spring medicine do not know what is best to take and dose themselves with harsh, griping purgatives.

This is a serious mistake. Ask any doctor and he will tell you that the use of purgative medicines weakens the system, but does not cure disease. In the spring the system needs building up—purgatives cannot do this—they weaken you still more. The blood should be made rich, red, pure, and only a tonic medicine can do this. The best blood building, nerve restoring tonic medical science has yet discovered is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Every dose of this medicine actually makes new, rich blood. This new blood strengthens every organ, every nerve and every part of the body. This is why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure headaches and backaches, rheumatism and neuralgia, banish pimples and eruptions, and give a glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. Men, women and growing boys and girls who take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills eat well, sleep well, and feel bright, active and strong. If you need a medicine this spring—and most likely you do—try this great reviving tonic and feel the new life, new health, and new strength it will put into you.

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

ALFALFA A MOST VALUABLE CROP

From Farm and Dairy.

A goodly number of farmers in Peterboro County have found out from several years' experience with alfalfa that it is a most valuable crop. Several of these alfalfa growers when discussing this crop with an editor of Farm and Dairy last week stated their views in a decided manner in favor of alfalfa.

Mr. Alex. McGregor, of Central Smith, has six acres of alfalfa. He has taken crops from it for two years. He states that he will sow six acres more this spring, and wishes he had more alfalfa now. "It is one of the best feeds I ever had," he said. "I would not care if I never had any grain for my cows if I had alfalfa, corn ensilage, and a few roots."

Mr. Sam Stenson, also of Smith, has had a few acres of alfalfa for several years. He finds it to be great stuff for feed.

Mr. James Young, of Smith Township, has seven acres of alfalfa. Last year he had the best crop of alfalfa in the district. He fed the bulk of it to his sheep during the past winter, and is greatly in favor of alfalfa.

SHOULD HAVE STARTED EARLIER

J. K. Moore & Son, of Smith township, started with three acres of alfalfa. The next year they put in four acres, and last year they had 11 acres seeded to this crop. They intend sowing 10 acres more of their farm to alfalfa this spring. When speaking about alfalfa while he was in the office of Farm and Dairy last week, Mr. C. E. Moore said, "We have been kicking ourselves that we did not start to grow alfalfa long ago. It is great feed, and is good for horses, too. It will clean their legs out as good as a ball."

Mr. Sam. Deyell, of Otonabee, has had three and a half acres of alfalfa now for two years. His son, Bert, informed us that they like it fine, and are going to put in four acres more this coming spring. "Our horses like it too," he said. "In fact, a driver that we have would scarcely eat other hay at all after she had once been fed on alfalfa."

Mr. Sandy Matchett, of Otonabee, Master of the Subordinate Grange in that section, has four acres of alfalfa, which he states is doing well. He is greatly in favor of the crop, and told one of our editors that he intends sowing five or six acres more this spring.

ANIMALS CRAZY FOR ALFALFA

Mr. J. H. Sanderson, four miles out of Peterboro, has six acres of alfalfa. He sowed it with barley two years ago. He says that everything on the farm is crazy for it, and his cows greatly increased in milk flow when fed alfalfa. His pigs also eat it readily, while the results of mixing finely cut alfalfa hay in the regular mash he feeds his hens is seen in the increased size of the egg basket required in which to gather the eggs.

Mr. Geo. A. Gillespie, seed merchant, Peterboro, informs Farm and Dairy that he has sold more alfalfa seed already this spring than he sold all of last year. The local farmers, he says, are much alive to the merits of alfalfa, and there is a great enquiry for seed.

Mr. Geo. Webber, a well known farmer to the west of the city, has a large acreage of alfalfa, and has grown it successfully for several years.

WISHES HE HAD 20 ACRES

Mr. John Lancaster, of Westwood, has five acres of alfalfa. He told Farm and Dairy, while he was in our office last week, that he was well satisfied with his alfalfa, that he wished he had 20 acres of it since all kinds of stock around the farm ate it with a relish. Last summer, when the pasture was poor, Mr. Lancaster began feeding his cows alfalfa hay, and was surprised at the great increase it caused in the milk flow. He has experimented in feeding alfalfa to his pigs, and is satisfied that the economic production of pork in Canada, as it is in the western states, will be obtained through the extension here of alfalfa growing.

REQUIRES INOCULATION

Two years ago, Mr. Lancaster sowed three acres of alfalfa on corn stubble land with a light seeding of alfalfa. He used the nitro-culture as supplied by the O.A.C. at Guelph, and obtained a good crop of barley and also a splendid stand of alfalfa. Last summer he cut his alfalfa twice, and then as his pasture was poor he pastured the third crop. Last year he sowed two acres more in the same way as his first seeding and on equally good land, but without inoculating it with nitro-culture. The result was that the field was very uneven and patchy.

Mr. D. K. Cameron, also of Westwood, has three acres of good alfalfa. He also used the nitro-culture as obtained from Guelph, and he sowed his alfalfa with a light crop of spring wheat.

Farm and Dairy would like to hear of other farmers in Peterboro County and elsewhere who have alfalfa of one or more years' standing, or who intend sowing alfalfa this spring. Write short letters giving your experience with this crop for the benefit of the thousands of others who read Farm and Dairy.

Alfalfa is making money for the farmers in the Western States sure enough. On irrigated land in Washington State yields as high as eight and nine tons per acre are secured, and this hay sells for $14 a ton. On Friday last Mr. Hutchison, lately from the Western States, but now of Cavan township, Durham Co., Ont., called on the editors of Farm and Dairy in Peterboro, and during the course of our conversation some very interesting facts in regard to alfalfa were given us.

Rough, unimproved land in Washington State, which cost from $1 to $1 25 an acre, on being improved, irrigated and seeded to alfalfa, sold for over $300 an acre. This alfalfa land rents for $15 an acre. It yields from seven to eight tons of alfalfa hay per acre, and frequently a yield of nine tons is obtained.

The Washington farmers use 25 pounds of the best alfalfa seed obtainable per acre. They have no barns, so their alfalfa hay is all stacked. Mr. Hutchison is confident that there are great possibilities for Ontario farmers in the matter of alfalfa growing. He intends seeding a large acreage on his Durham County farm this spring. He believes that we can grow alfalfa in Ontario, and that when we farmers generally grow this great crop, our land, which now sells for about $50 an acre, will be worth from $100 to $150 an acre.

From his observations that he has been privileged to make of alfalfa growing throughout the west and here in Ontario, Mr Hutchison is of the opinion that too many of us farmers, who have had, heretofore, only a small patch of alfalfa, have plowed it up too soon. Out in the Walla Walla Valley in Washington, he states, there are stands of alfalfa that are now over 20 years old, and these are producing nine tons per acre. The longer the crop is established the better it grows and the heavier yields it produces. He feels that we are too inclined here in Ontario to think of the high first cost of alfalfa seed and sow it, if we sow it at all, in too small a quantity, probably 12 lbs., whereas we should sow at least 20 lbs. of seed to the acre.

There are possibilities in alfalfa other than for hay. The hay may be ground into meal. Mr. Hutchison told us of two boys at Wapito, Wash., who, with a somewhat crude grinding machine and a portable engine, ground up stacks of alfalfa, which they bought from the western farmers, and made over $8,000 clear profit in one season of less than six months. The alfalfa meal, which they thus produced, they shipped down through the central states, where it found ready sale, much of it being used as a basis for the stock feeds that are so common upon the market.

COW TESTING MOVEMENT

From Farm and Dairy.

J. A. Ruddick, Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner

A further advance has been made in the cow testing movement by the organization of "Dairy Record Centres" in several localities. The Recorder, as the man in charge of each centre will be designated, will devote his whole time to a limited territory, covering something like a radius of six or eight miles. He will be expected to secure a complete census of every herd and to encourage as many as possible of the farmers in his district to keep accurate records of the individual cows. It is the intention to follow up this line of work for several years in each locality. Dairy Record Centres have already been established in Oxford County, Ontario, St. Hyacinthe county, Quebec, and at Kensington in Prince Edward Island. Others are likely to be started in the Eastern Townships and in central and eastern Ontario.

There is every prospect for another record year in dairying if the weather conditions are favorable. Winter feed has been abundant, including a largely increased supply of corn silage. There were probably more silos erected in Canada in 1910 than in any previous year.

There is a revival of interest in the questioned "paying by test" at cheese factories, and many factories will adopt the system this year for the first time, and others will resume this method of declaring dividends.

The Minister of Agriculture has authorized the calling of a conference of dairy experts during the year 1911. It will probably be held during December next.

A beginning has been made towards co-operation among the fruit growers in the province of Quebec. There is a great opportunity to improve the apple trade of that province. There are many fine old orchards, that include a large proportion of trees of some of the finest dessert apples in the world, which are almost non-productive through neglect. The renovation of these orchards and the proper handling and marketing of the crop would, under present conditions, yield a handsome return to the owners.

MADE IN PETERBOROUGH

Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unparalleled

BY ROY GILRAY

To be, or not to be! That is the question; whether it is more profitable for us to remain in our present dormant, inactive state, or arise in our might and assert our individuality. When we see other cities, even towns, leaving us far behind in the exciting race for business, is it not time that some one should sounds note of warning and endeavour to retrieve the losses of the past?

Experience is a great teacher. As we look back over our short lives we are forced to confess that the most lasting lessons are those that were bought with the bitterest losses. After two or three strokes of misfortune we are ready to look around and take notice of how the other fellow gets along; and, little by little our faculty of perception becomes whetted with the desire to profit from the experience of the man who crosses our path.

This rule applies not only to failures, but also to successes; not only to private life and its vicissitudes, but also to public life and its environments.

Who was not impressed with the recent Hardware Convention? It was replete with object lessons for the wide-awake citizen.

Aside from its educative value, it contained two splendid pointers: one for our Fair Directors, the other for our Manufacturers.

The Fair Director must have been impressed with the splendid success of the whole undertaking. No doubt he was comparing it with the show that our citizens try to hold once a year at the south end of the town. His insight must have been exceedingly dull if he could not have comprehended that the "show" part of the proposition was of secondary consideration only. The paramount question was: "Get the Business."

From the viewpoint of the manufacturer that was the sole purpose of the exhibition, and if all reports be true the money appropriated by the respective firms was wisely spent — in other words, the returns justified the expenditure.

Now, if the Director, with his observation in tow, and the Manufacturer with his profitable experience still fresh in his mind—and on his order books—if these two get together, what a magnificent Fair we would have!

Do not be a Knocker and cry: "It can't be done." Be a Booster and say, "It shall be done."

What was possible in London, Ont., is feasible in Peterborough. In London, a little lone lady, for the benefit of a local Sanatorium, planned and carried through to successful issue a "Made-in-London" Exhibition, the equal of which had never been held in Western Ontario before.

"Oh!" I hear some one say: "that was the wife of Ontario's Power Minister, the Hon Adam Beck." Quite true, but is Adam Beck or his talented wife the only one who has "power to-do-things?"

If we cannot invent, then let us copy. If we see something good, then let us adopt it.

Therefore, be it resolved that we shall have a "Made-in-Peterborough Exhibition."

It would prove the greatest advertisement Peterborough ever had; and who will deny that our city needs advertising? There are two ways of bringing a city before the public: By the direct method of a municipality doing its own publicity work, or by the indirect method of a city's industries so attracting the attention of the consumer that its name is coninually on the mind of the people. The latter is the ideal, because the most economical, but is possible only where manufacturing establishments abound. As an example we might cite Brantford. Such concerns as the Massey Harris Co., Verity Plow Co., Cockshut Plow Co., Adams Waggon Co., Waterous Engine Co., Pratt & Letchworth Malleable Iron Works, Buck Stove Co., and Goold, Shapley & Muir Co., are names to be reckoned with, any two of which possess plants equal to our own Canadian General Electric Works.

The only course open to us is by the direct method. Here is where our Board of Trade might justify its existence and map out a comprehensive scheme of advertising.

Truly we possess a splendid heritage, unequalled in power, factory sites, railway and canal facilities.

Our power is largely on paper for the present, but, nevertheless, we know it is right at our door, capable of being developed when the occasion demands it. (Just here it might not be out of place to state that we are anxiously awaiting that power scheme promised by our Industrial Commissioner.)

Our factory sites are practically unlimited at the south end of the city, where the land is level, and the river, with its constant flow, close at hand.

Our railway facilities are excellent, possessing both G.T.R. and C.P.R. (thus ensuring competitive rates) to be augmented shortly by the advent of the Canadian Northern Ontario Ry.

The presence of the Trent Canal, if it never serves any other purpose, will always remain a silent guardian over the freight rates in the Midland district.

All we need is an industrial awakening. Instead of letting the opportunities pass by in a steady procession we should get busy and keep busy.

The time has arrived when the Manufacturer and the Fair Director should join forces in creating an Exposition that shall be a credit to its founders. Make it a business proposition through and through. The Manufacturer could offer some slight inducement to the retailer in the way of cheapened transportation; anything to draw the crowd; being careful to draw the buyers. The whole project would be an education, productive of tangible results. The sales would more than pay for the expenditure and would prove a cheap method of advertising, the goods to the consumer. Intending purchasers could be driven to the works and shown the process of manufacture. Little attentions shown in this manner go a long way towards popularizing the goods. A few tickled or well satisfied customers invariably form an endless chain of inexpensive advertisers.

The Exhibition should be held at some convenient time of the year, suitable to the buyer as well as to the manufacturer.

The results would be far-reaching. Every class of citizen would be benefited. None more so than the merchant, for he would have an excellent chance of increasing his sales through the great influx of strangers. Our merchants should be the first to volunteer assistance, and, with the hearty co-operation of her enthusiastic citizens Peterborough should so boom her resources that she would soon become the "Banner City of the East."

WARSAW NEWS

Special to The Examiner:

The following clipping from the Boy Scouts' department of the Toronto Globe of March 18th, may be of interest to readers:

The first spring scouting expedition of the 11th and 12th Peterborough Peewits, Warsaw branch, was held on Saturday last. The troops, under the command of Patrol-leaders Selkirk and Aitken, left headquarters about 11:30 a.m., with Scouts Graham, Bell, Selkirk, Darling and Morgan, and a sled with provisions. The boys skated about a mile up the Squaknegisippi River to Quarry Lake, where they made camp at their secret cave among the rocks and prepared dinner, which consisted of pork, potatoes, tea and bread. Considerable difficulty was experienced in getting water, and after chopping with their hatchets in two feet of ice with no water in sight, two of their number were despatched across the lake to an open place. After the repast had been partaken of, a game of hockey was played, which was followed by the return home, concluding a very pleasant afternoon. The boys are planning their summer camp, which will be located on the shore of the river about one mile from the village.

Arrangements have been made whereby the patrols will march to the home of Mrs. David Miller, about two miles distant, on Thursday evening, when Mrs. Miller, who for a number of years was superintendent of the Nicholls Hospital, Peterborough, will demonstrate first aid and bandaging.

H. G. E. Choate, Scoutmaster.

Warsaw, Ont., March 7.

In reference to the above it may be said that the boys are indebted to Mrs. Miller for an exceedingly beneficial demonstration and a very pleasant evening. The boys are making special efforts to increase their numbers within the near future, and the Scoutmaster will be pleased to receive applications at any time.

Messrs. Thos. and Edward Chown of Sarnia, have been spending a few weeks in town, assisting their sister, Mrs. S. R. Payne, to pack her household effects prior to moving to Western Ontario.

Neilson's Chocolates

The Chocolates That Are Different.

The first enticing piece of Neilson's Chocolates you taste, will show you how different are these delicious confections.

To secure the richness of flavor and delicacy that are inseparable with Neilson's "Hard Centers", we use rich, sweet cream—and make the centers only firm enough to be easily eaten. To keep these centers just right—neither too soft not too hard—is the perfection of candy-making—and Neilson's "Hard Centers" are as perfect as they are different.

All these chocolates have the "Extreme Split Dip". It's a Neilson specialty—exclusive with Neilson's Chocolates de Luxe—another touch of distinction that makes them different.

Perhaps you prefer Creams to "Hard Centers"—or "Cherries in Maraschino Chocolate Dipped" to either. You can get all three under the Neilson name—also 30 other packages of these different Chocolates.

If you cannot get Neilson's Chocolates in your neighborhood, send 80c. for a pound box of the most delicious assorted Chocolates you ever tasted. 3

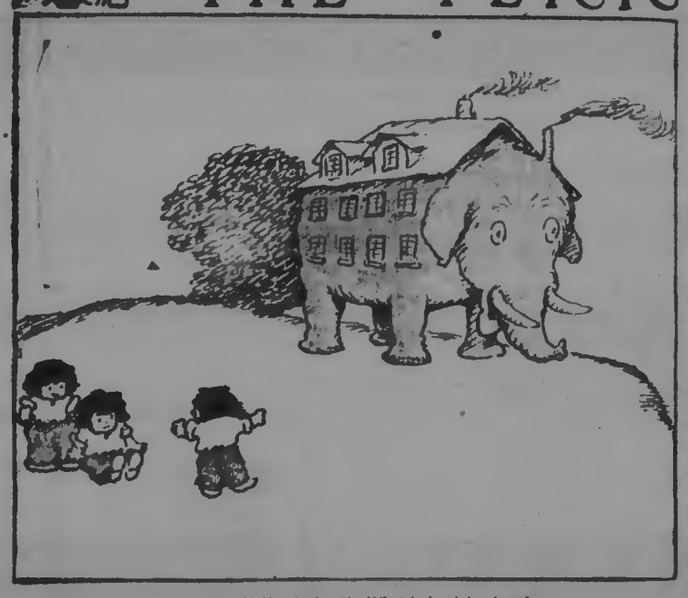
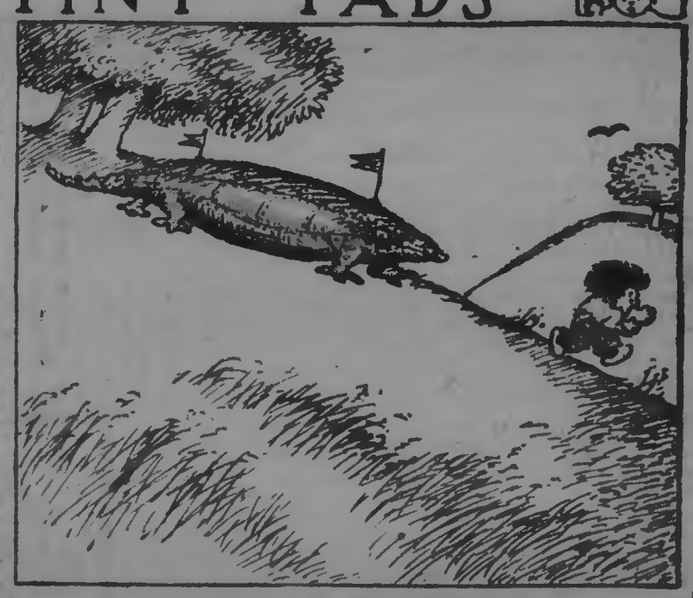
THE TERRORS OF THE TINY TADS



1.—Oh, see the old Hotelephant! What is he doing here?
One of the Tiny Tads is gone; where is the little dear?

2.—Ah, here he is exploring in the wild woods, all alone!
What is that funny noise he hears? What makes that dismal moan?



3.—What is this funny looking thing? It's not a Potatoad.
An Alligatorpedo? Oh! I hope he won't explode.

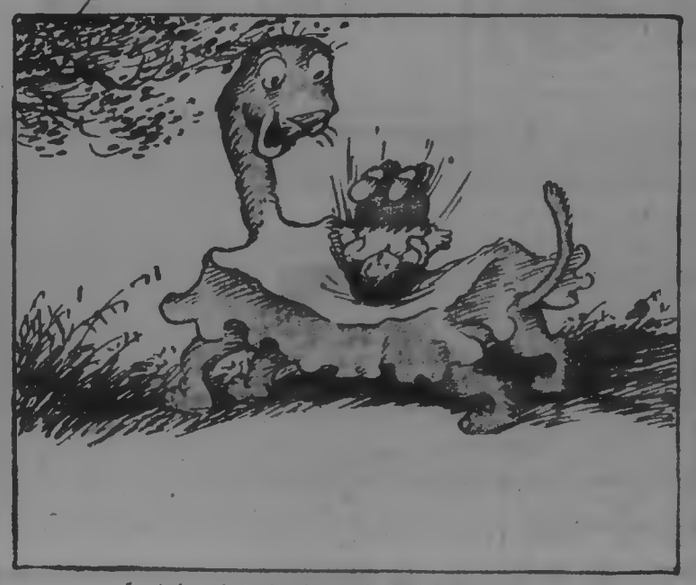
4.—Bing! Boom! He's gone and done it, and the Tad—oh, where is he?
Oh, no! he isn't on the ground! Look way up and you'll see.



5.—And now he tumbles down again, but isn't hurt at all.
For on a queer Divanimal he lands and breaks his fall.

6.—"I'm feeling faint," declares the Tad. "I'm thirsty, too, I think."
"Let's go to the Hotelephant and have something to drink."

Twenty-two Years Caretaker

The curling season in Peterborough has closed, after one of the most successful winters in the history of the club. The consolation series of the local bonspiel was finished on Saturday night of last week, the winning rink being skipped by Mr. J. E. A. Fitzgerald. The primary series had been played the Saturday night previous, the winner being Mr. W. H. Taylor. The open bonspiel which was run off in January proved to be a grand success, Mr. George H. Giroux being successful in the primary series and Mr. S. T. Medd's rink having won out in the consolation.

In the inter-rink schedule the winner proved to be Mr. Tom Brightman, one of the most ardent lovers of the "roarin' game" that there is to be found in Peterborough.

Peterborough curlers succeeded in winning the District Cup of the Ontario Curling Association, for the second year in succession, and should next year make a strong fight in the Tankard Competition. The skips of the two rinks that this year won the District Cup series are Messrs. T. E. B. Yeates and Wm. M. Lang.

The weather this year could not have been better for curling. From the night the first stone was thrown in December until about the 14th of the present month there was scarcely more than one night that the roar of the stone and the shout of the curlers could not be heard in Charlotte Street rink.

Mr. Angus McIntosh, the veteran caretaker of the Charlotte Street rink, has just closed his twenty-second year in that capacity. What Angus doesn't know about the game is not worth knowing; and some quiet evening, if you can get him away off in one corner of the waiting room and get him talking about the days of years gone by, some most interesting reminiscences may be enjoyed. The other night, looking out over the sheets of ice that will soon pass away, and meditating deeply, Mr. McIntosh was trying to recall the names of any curlers of 22 years ago who are members of the club of to-day. He concluded that there were not more than three or four. Angus has seen many changes in the membership of the club, has witnessed many exciting matches and experienced many busy times, particularly during the bonspiel periods and during the strenuous hockey days of ten and fifteen years ago. It must be remembered that previous to the building f the Brock Street rink, the old Charlotte Street rink was the centre of both curling and hockey activity.

Angus McIntosh is deservedly popular with the curlers, and with the public generally who may happen in for an evening to watch the game. He is always the same—thorough in his work, courteous and obliging, and ever with a particularly kindly interest in the younger players. The young skip has always a good friend in Angus. He likes to see the young man win, and if he can offer a kindly bit of advice or any encouragement he never fails to do so. He is not only caretaker, but official umpire, and not infrequently he trots out on the ice with his measuring apparatus, and in short order gives a decision i case of a dispute between the skips a to which stone is shot. If the ice is not prime it is the fault of the weather man and not the fault of the caretaker; and if the Peterborough Curling Club is a success from year to year, no one contributes more in that direction than Angus McIntosh.

THE FAMILY HEARTH

For the Engaged Girl.

Here is an old-fashioned rhyme which the engaged girl may like to read:

Marry when the year is new,
Always loving, kind and true,
When February birds do mate,
You may wed nor dread your fate.
If you wed when March winds blow,
Joy and sorrow both you'll know.
Marry in April when you can,
Joy for maiden and for man.
Marry in the month of May
You will surely rue the day.
Marry when June roses blow
Over land and sea you'll go
They who in July do wed
Must always labour for their bread.
Whoever wed in August be
Many a change is sure to see.
Marry in September's shine,
Your living will be rich and fine.
If in October you do marry,
Love will come, but riches tarry,
If you wed in bleak November,
Only joy will come, remember,
When December snows fall fast,
Marry and true love will last.

Wit and Wisdom.

Some married women not only have the last word, but all the rest of them.

Why is courtship like Canada? Because it is on the borders of the United States.

It seems to be the general opinion that charity should begin at somebody else's home.

Make friends with your creditors, if you can, but never make creditors of your friends.

"Where there's so much smoke there must be a man around," uz th' old maid once said.

Nobody is so weak but he is strong enough to bear the misfortunes that he does not feel.

Weak characters never show any decision except when they commit some act of stupidity.

The only strong people are those who work, and it is only work that gives courage and faith.

"Hoo dae ye like me now hat, Tom?" "It's a wunner yer hair's no' stannin' on en wi' hale fricht."

Maid—"Do you believe that piano playing on the Sabbath is wicked?" Parson—"Well—er—most of it is."

First Nighter—"Usher, can you tell me where my wife is seated?" "Second row on the first aisle, seven hats to the right."

"Why is it, I wonder, that Wilson has stopped bragging about his ancestors?" "I suppose he'll have found out who they were."

Lady — "My husband gives me a piece of jewellery every birthday." Friend—"You must have quite a collection of them now, my dear."

Tonal—"Fat wey tid she nefer mairry, Tuncan!" Tuncan—"Shust pecuss she wass neffer asked by ony ponnie lass." Tonal—"Puir chief!"

Teacher (giving lessons on the seasons)—"Now, what is the best time to gather fruit?" 'Small Boy—"Please, sir, when the dog's chained up."

Mary—"I wouldn't marry the best man in the world!" Agatha—"Nor I. I wouldn't marry the bridegroom, and let the best man have one of the bridesmaids, if I ever got the chance."

Teacher—"Jimmie, suppose you had ten apples and ten oranges, and gave nine-tenths of them to some other little boys, what would you have?" Jimmie—"I'd have my head examined."

What a happy world this world would be if the innocency of childhood's tender years could be carried through age. So while we are training them in the way they should walk, let us watch our own footsteps, and not cut off their harmless mirth to suit our tastes that have grown sombre with age and care.

Be as careful to keep the weeds out of the minds of your children as you are to keep them out of your garden. But remember something will grow there. If you don't plant them with good grain, the tares will take root in spite of you. Keep a library of good clean books, and by all means keep your home paper before them.

To make a boy into a pure man, a mother must do more than pray. She must live with him in the sense of comrade and closest friend. She must stand by him in time of temptation as the pilot sticks to the wheel when rapids are around. She must never desert him to go off to superintend outside duties any more than the engineer deserts his post and goes into a baggage car to read up engineering when his train is pounding across the country at forty miles an hour.

Whoever takes a litle child into his love, may have a very roomy heart, but that child will fill it out. The children keep us from growing old and cold; they cling to our garments with their little hands and impede our progress to petrification; they win us back with their pleading eyes, from cruel care; they never encumber us at all. A poor old couple with no one to love them, is a fost pitiful picture; but a hovel, with a small face to fill a broken pane here and there, is robbed of its desolateness.

A taste for music, poetry, pictures, etc., tends to destroy the attraction for the vulgar. A home of beauty, of taste and refinement always tends to elevate and ennoble the mind, and cultivate the spirit of contentment. Beauty fills the world, as well as heaven, if we have eyes to see it. It is open to all. The rose is as fragrant, the lily as white, and the hyacinth as delicately blue, when cultivated by the poor, as by the jeweled fingers of the wealthy.

It is the mother who holds the world in place. They are the balance wheels of the universe. They hold the scepter of power by controlling the affections of men. "The hand that rocks the cradle" has controlled armies. Marie Theresa quelled the tumult of a mighty army in Austria by raising her fair hand, and we are told that all was hushed to silence, as in clear, sweet tones, she spoke, "The bravest battles that ever were fought have been fought by the mothers of men."

It is claimed that all the presidents of the United States had good mothers. It is said that John Q. Adams until the day of his death said the prayer his mother had taught him. Lincoln said, "All that I am I owe to my mother." Garfield kissed the wrinkled face of his mother on the day of his inauguration and said, "You brought me to this." Grover Cleveland said, "Worldly honours or worldly perplexities will never cause me to forget the lessons my mother taught me." As the Theresa quelled the tumult of a mother's love becomes intensified The vision grown dim with age becomes clear and pictures of childhood days rise before us in their perfections. It is well so few instances are on record where a mother has failed to impress her children with the value and purity of a mother's love.

What are those whom we meet in society to us as compared to our own home circle? Why to do take pains to be polite and agreeable to them and neglect those who have the strongest claim upon us? It all comes about because we have got into the wrong way of thinking. We have put the home in the background, when it should occupy the foremost place in our thoughts

You get "down in the mouth" too easily, my friend. Cheer up; walk on the sunny side of the street; live where you can catch the south winds. Sunshine always warms and cheers.

Little arms encircling the neck will make the heart light, over which no diamonds sparkle. All the grand pictures and splendid works of art one can possess will never adorn a room as do the smiling faces of those dearest to us. The things that may be bought are pleasant to have, nor is wealth to be despised; but never pity the poor man who has the wealth that gold cannot buy, nor the woman whose jewels are hopes of which Cornelia was so proud—good and obedient sons.

The parlour as a parlour will soon get more of it and give it out. you have lived in the frigid zone too long already. We would like to send a gulf stream of joy into your life. Give us a chance. Read the Home Circle Department and you will always wear a smile. It is the best known tonic for the "blues."

The parlour as a parlour will soon be relieved the poor The very name seems to suggest stiffness and lack of comfort. The new houses will have the best room, the one in which the whole family gathers, a warm, sunny place, a home room in its truest sense. The next generation will not waste space on parlours. Perhaps a little library, for privacy, will also be indispensable to many. This cheery room of the future will hold the piano, the general books, the pictures, work baskets and everything that serves to make home a heaven of rest for loyal hearts. Speed the day.

Who pay only $1.50 per week and secure a fine high-class Piano worth $375 for $300. : : : :

NO INTEREST FREE INSURANCE FREE TUNING

The advantage of cumulative buying has never been illustrated more remarkably than in this Piano Club and the circumstances which have led up to it. Briefly they are as follows :—

Messrs. Gourlay, Winter & Leeming, a firm of the highest reputation, with whom we are proud to be associated, found over a year ago that to meet steadily increasing demand for their Pianos, a new factory of enlarged capacity was required.

A new factory was therefore built, which in its equipment is one of the finest Piano Manufacturing Plants on the American Continent. In November last, a larger staff of expert piano workmen having been engaged, work was commenced looking to an output of nearly double the previous capacity. During the usually quiet winter months the factory has been running full time and in some departments overtime, and as a result, the larger output is now a daily fact. Though the makers have a market provided for every piano they can turn out as soon as the spring season opens, the interval of a few weeks between now and then gave us our opportunity.

We Offered a Contract for Fifty Pianos For Immediate Delivery, Receiving in Return Special Purchasing Advantages That Make This Club Offer Possible.

This Piano Club Offers to its Members Advantages and Privileges not Otherwise Obtainable. Read them carefully :—

First : — Members secure a Fine Upright Piano which regularly sells at $375 for $300—actual saving of $75.

Second:—Members pay $10 deposit upon joining the club ; the piano is delivered at once, and the balance may be paid in weekly instalments of $1.50 each without interest or extras of any kind.

Third :—We agree to tune the Piano whenever required without charge until the time of payment has elapsed—a saving to club members of what is usually an expense.

Fourth—We have made arrangements to insure every club piano delivered in the county of Peterboro, against loss by fire until it is fully paid for. Should a piano be injured or destroyed by fire during the time of paymant, we agree to replace it by a new Piano of similar style and make—Another item of expense and worry saved.

Fifth :—In some cases another plan of payment may be more convenient than that outlined in Clause 2. We have, therefore, prepared four other plans for the option of members, from which it will be seen that the faster you pay the less it will cost. The options are as follows :

Plan B—A deposit of $10 and monthly payments of $6 until paid, without interest. Price $300.

Plan C—A deposit of $25 and monthly payments of $8 until paid, without interest. Price $288.

Plan D—A deposit of $50 and monthly payments of $10 until paid, without interest. Price $280.

A Word About the Pianos

We want to impress it upon the minds of every resident of Peterboro County that these fifty pianos are from the regular stock of the Gourlay, Winter & Leeming factory. They are not, as is sometimes the case, made for special sale of very ordinary material by some unknown maker. They are manufactured throughout of first class materials by the highest skilled labor, in a factory that in its equipment and standards of work, has no superior anywhere. The manufacturers themselves bear a reputation as a firm of the highest integrity who have never yet made a piano of even doubtful quality, and we do not believe they could be induced to do so.

The pianos are what are known as the Style X McMillan Piano, manufactured by Gourlay, Winter & Leeming. The cases are made in handsomely figured walnut and mahogany, are all double veneered throughout and beautifully finished.

DESCRIPTION—7⅓ octaves; copper-wound overstrung bass; full composite metal frame with maple bushed tuning pins; fine quality spruce sound-board; compound quartered rock-maple tuning pin block; double repeating action, three pedals; third pedal sustaining; dulcephone or muffler stop under key board; ivory keys and ebony sharps; full length music desk; Boston double fall board; continuous hinges on top and fall board; carving on panels hand work, not stucco or machine carving.

DIMENSIONS—Height, 4 feet 8 inches; depth 2 feet 3 inches; width, 5 feet 2 inches; weight (boxed) 850 pounds.

A Double Guarantee

Every piano is fully guaranteed for five years by its makers, Messrs. Gourlay, Winter & Leeming, whose standing in the trade is the very best recommendation.

In addition, we personally guarantee every piano, and, what is still more important, we guarantee permanent satisfaction to every club member. The lasting advertisement of each and every club member's enthusiasm will be our chief interest as long as we do business in Peterborough—and we are here to stay.

The club is limited to fifty members. Fifty pianos are all we can procure at the special figure. We, therefore, need scarcely say that prompt enrolment is advisable.

A Reunion Of The Sullivans

John L. Sullivan has a great scheme under his hat. He wants to hold a re-union of the Sullivans.

"You hear of re-unions of the Brown family, of the Jones family, of the Smith family, and so forth, but what tribe can show up like the Sullivan family?" says John.

"There are enough of us Sullivans to repel an army, and we're always ready. Why, the Sullivans could come a pand take Canada without asking help from any other first family. There are Sullivans enough to fill every position you may name. Do you want brawn? Look at the Sullivan in Boston, who is 6 feet 8½ inches tall, working as a longshoreman for $1.50 a day. Do you want brain? Look at another Sullivan in Boston, 5 feet 5 inches short, working as president of a railroad at a salary of $25,000. There are Sullivans of all grades in between these two samples, and I hope some day to see the family reunited—if there is any place big enough to hold us all."

Here's a chance for the Sullivans of ePterborought to get busy. What better place on earth could be selected for the re-union than Peterborough. Let the Sullivans of Douro, the Sullivans of Ennismore, the Sullivans from all over this district extend an invitation to John L., the leader of the movement, to gather the clan in Peterborough this summer. It would be the biggest advertisement this city ever had. The Hardwaremen's convention would be like a little sideshow compared with it.

EAST CITY COMMITTEE TO FRONT

East Ward Section of Citizen's Committee First in the Field to Support Independent Tire By-law

COMMITTEE ROOMS

The East Ward section of the Citizens' committee organized to assist in the passing of the Independent Tire Company by-law has the honour of being the first to take the field for active work. Last night the East City committee held an enthusiastic meeting in the city council chamber and arranged details of the campaign. The two across-the-river representatives, Ald. Morgan and Anderson were present and explained the by-law at length to the committee, all of whom were satisfied of the soundness of the agreement and the desirability of passing the measure. It was unanimously decided to rent the vacant store in the town hall block as a committee room and it will be opened at once. All residents of the ward are invited to drop in any evening to talk over the by-law and willing workers will be on hand to explain the merits of the measure. Mr. Wm. Scott has very kindly offered to supply the coal necessary for heating the committee rooms, free of charge. The East City committee is enthusiastic over the prospects.

SPLENDID PICTURE

Magnificent Normal School Group by Roy Studio

A magnificent group picture of the Normal school faculty and pupils, the work of the Roy Studio is on exhibition to-day in the window of Richard Hall and Son and has attracted a large amount of attention and admiration. The picture is one of the largest of its kind ever made in Canada and measures five by six feet. No less than one hundred and forty-six portraits make up the group and each individual photograph is a gem in itself, the whole being a remarkable illustration of modern photographic methods, which is another proof of the enterprise of the Roy studio. The arrangement of the group is worthy of especial attention.

INCREDIBLE? RIDICULOUS.

Possibly, to Pitmanic or Gregg acquaintances, but "seeing is still believing," so any who doubt the idea of a college being able to fully equip strictly first-class, high-grade stenographers with only twenty-five to thirty-five days' study are urged to apply at, 282-286 Yonge street, Toronto, (Moon College), and ask for good, sound, sensible, reasonable and convincing and satisfying evidence. They say: "Come, see and believe."

BOAT TURNS TURTLE MANY ARE DROWNED

Between Thirty and Forty Workmen in the Employ of the Canadian Northern are Believed to Have Lost Their Lives---Crew Lost Control of Their Boat in a Gale.

Special Wire to The Examiner.

VICTORIA, B.C., MARCH 25.—Between thirty and forty English and Italian workmen, employed by the Canadian Northern are believed to have been drowned in the capsizing of the small ferry steamer Sechelt on the way to the construction camp at Peddlar's Bay last night. They left here yesterday afternoon and encountered a storm off Beachy Head where navigation is very treacherous. It is thought that the captain and his crew of four men lost control of the craft in the gale and it turned turtle and caught the passengers in the rigging like rats in a trap. A boy in a gasoline launch brought word of the disaster but could give no particulars. Several rescuing vessels have gone to look for the survivors, but there has been no word by wireless yet.

MR. STEWART'S WITHDRAWAL IS DEEPLY REGRETTED

Otonabee Township Council Sorry to Have to Accept the Resignation of the Deputy Reeve.

COUNCIL MEETING

The Otonabee Council met on the 20th of March. Mr. Galbrath, on behalf of H. P. Kennedy, presented a plan of 186 lots, laid out for a summer resort on lot 26, and part of lot 25, concession 14, and asking the Council for an approval of the plan. On motion, the plan was approved and the Reeve and Clerk authorized to sign it.

A communication was received from Mr. Stewart resigning the office of Deputy Reeve. On motion, it was accepted, and the Clerk was instructed to convey to Mr. Stewart, that the Council deeply regret his severance with them, and offer to him their heartfelt sympathy in his severe illness and express to him their appreciation of the harmony and goodfellowship that always prevailed between himself and his fellow-members during his five years in the Council, for his earnest activity to his public duties, the able manner in which he expended the money appropriated for the roads in his ward. The clerk was instructed to ask for tenders for shingling the town hall, also tenders for operating the grader, and for making cement tile.

The following accounts were passed: Curtis Bros., tile, $24.60; Dr. Harrison, medicine and attendance on J. A. Trotter, $30.06; Mrs. Redpath, five weeks board of J. A. Trotter's wife and family, $12.00; J. H. Fletcher, cutting wood for J. A. Trotter, $9.25. G. T. Gall account, $3.80; Scarlet fever placards and telephoning, 85c.; Robert Orde, cedar, $10; Stillman Bros.' account, $2.77. H. Cavanagh, refund of dog tax, $1.00; John Andgrson, gravel, $3.92.

Council adjourned to April 17.

JAS. GIRVEN'S TENDER FOR TOLLS ACCEPTED

Will Pay $915 for Privilege of Collecting Market Charges—Mr. Comstock Gets the Ambulance Contract.

COMMITTEE MEETING

The Property committee of the City Council met last night to open tenders for the sale of market tolls, which were disposed of to Jos. Girven who submited the highest offer $915.00.

The tenders received were as follows:

William H. McDonald	$900.00
Jos. Girven	915.00
Walter Fisher	880.00

The committee also went into the matter of the contract for the care and service of the Dan Spence Ambulance. Mr. Aaron Comstock submitted a tender of $200 and Mr. D. Belleghem of $400 and the committee awarded the contract to Mr. Comstock.

The contract for a city dumping ground was made on the same terms as last year.

The committee approved of a by-law to compel scavengers to use proper receptacles and it will be submitted to the council at the next meeting.

The chairman was instructed to make terms with the Bell Telephone Company for a telephone in the Isolation Hospital.

City Clerk Armstrong made the suggestion in this connection that the city should decide upon a name for the Isolation Hospital. The city had a Queen Alexandra school and it might be advisable to call the Isolation Hospital the Alexandria Hospital or perhaps the Queen Mary Hospital.

TOURIST CARS TO WESTERN CANADA

There is no more comfortable way to travel to the West than in a Canadian Pacific tourist sleeping car. These cars run from Toronto to Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver daily at 10.10 p.m. Berths are fully equipped with bedding, every travelling convenience is afforded and an attentive porter is in charge. The extra cost is very small and tourist cars are attached to each Homeseekers' special train from Toronto. Early application to local C.P.R. agent should be made for berths.

THE "ONWARDS" AT HOME

An evening of unusual interest and pleasure was spent last night in the lecture room of the George Street Methodist Church, when the Onward Young Ladies' Bible Class, with their teacher, Mrs. Jas. Stubbs, entertained Mr. Thornton's Young Ladies' class and Mr. Robertson's class of young men.

A unique and interesting programme was given by the members of the class. Mr. Geo. Robertson and Mr. J. Thornton gave a very able talk on Reciprocity.

Another feature of the programme was a guessing contest, the winner being Miss Dales, of the Normal School.

The singing by Misses McGee, Chasety, and Mrs. McCall was much appreciated, as well as a recitation by Miss Verna Merrill.

Mr. S. R. Armstrong made a very acceptable chairman.

After refreshments were served the evening was brought to a close by singing the Doxology and prayer by Rev. Mr. Couch.

CONFLICT PROMISED

OTTAWA, MARCH 25. A conflict between the Dominion and Provincial Government on provincial rights, is promised as the result of an order in the Canada Gazette this morning cancelling certain amendments to the Chartered Accountants' Act, on the ground that they are not within the jurisdiction of the provincial parliament.

ACCIDENT AVERTED

What might have been a serious accident was narrowly averted by the presence of mind of a number of passersby. A farmer was driving up George street to-day at noon, when one of the lines became disconnected, thereby placing the horse beyond control of the driver. A number of passersby seized the horse, which by this time, was proceeding to make an entry into a clothing establishment. Beyond a general disarrangement of the harness, no damage was done.

TENDERS FOR RURAL MAIL DELIVERY SERVICE

Two New Routes Are Being Established---One Hundred Persons Will Get Daily Delivery Practically at Their Doors ---The Routes Arranged.

It will be seen by an advertisement in another column that the Postmaster General has invited tenders for a Rural Mail Delivery service, to leave Peterborough Post Office at one o'clock daily, six times a week and proceeding via Jackson Park to the Fourth Line Cheese Factory, in Smith, and westward to Fowlers Corners, thence south two miles and returning to Jackson Park.

Tenders are also invited for a Rural Mail Delivery Service to leave Peterborough at mid-day and proceed along the first concession of Smith, taking the boundary line between Smith and North Monaghan, to the boundary line between Cavan and North Monaghan; thence south to the 13th concession of Monaghan and along the said concession to the Gravel Road, coming out at the toll gate near Mr. R. A. Morrow's residence.

The tenders are to be received at Ottawa until 12 o'clock noon on Friday, the 6th day of May. As soon as tenders are accepted and contracts awarded, the Rural Mail Delivery will be established on the roads mentioned.

Further information may be obtained by making application for forms at the Peterborough Post Office or to the Postmaster General at Ottawa.

SIX LIVES DEPENDED UPON A GAME OF CARDS

NEW YORK, MARCH 25. — Six lives hung on the turn of the cards in a game of solitaire played last Friday night by Michael Cribben, an automobile mechanic, in his home, at No. 411 West Fifty-Sixth street. When all the suits from ace to king were neatly piled in sequence, Cribben, his wife and their four children were saved from the mad destruction which the player, according to his own written statement, had planned for himself and his family.

Mrs. Cribben noticed that her husband was nervous that evening. She heard him walking about another room of their apartment and saw him write a letter, which he took out to post. When he returned he was very quiet and Mrs. Cribben went to the door and looked in on him.

Her husband was seated at a table with a deck of cards, slowly exposing them one after the other and laying them in lines before him. His figure was tense, perspiration stood on his forehead and he seemed struggling under strong excitement.

"What on earth are you doing, Michael?" she asked.

"Just playing solitaire," Cribben answered, never raising his eyes from the cards.

"And what are you playing that for?" she persisted.

"You'll know soon enough," said Cribben in a voice so strange that Mrs. Cribben left him and hurried all the children to bed.

Cribben went to his place of employment in Yonkers on Saturday, drew his week's pay and disappeared. His cousin, James McCormick, of No. 432 West Fifty-Eighth street, received a letter from Cribben Saturday night when he returned from work. He read it half way through and then rushed off at a run for Cribben's home.

"Thank God!" he exclaimed, when he found Mrs. Cribben and the Cribben children safe and sound. He did not tell them or anyone about the letter until yesterday, when it was decided to ask the police to look for the missing man.

"Dear Jim," the letter ran, "I am going to kill myself, my wife and children. I have something pressing on my brain that makes me want to kill them. I must do it. I can't help it.

"The only way I've kept from doing it is by playing solitaire. I've been playing it all the time at home so I won't kill them.

"Now I am going to play just one more game to-night, and if I beat it, I won't kill them, but if I don't make it, I will."

Cribben was seriously injured three years ago in stopping a runaway at Columbus Circle. His recent condition which was unsuspected by his family and friends, is attributed to skull depression resulting from that accident.

The police and Cribben's family are uncertain whether he has made away with himself or fears to return home because of his letter to McCormick.

"BELIEVER" REPLIES TO MR. CARLISLE'S LETTER

My Dear Brother Carlisle, — Your "post card" letter in Friday's Examiner clearly shows your misapprehension of the meaning of the words "higher criticism."

There are as yours letter intimates, higher "destructive" critics and there are others, devout, scholarly men who apply all their learning to exalt and make dear God's teaching in the writings known as the holy scriptures. These may be called constructive and not destructive critics. The Bible is a compilation of writings by many men in many ages, all inspired of God to teach the truth—but being simply men of their day and generation, they were like the men of the present day generation—some learned, some less learned. They were earthen vessels, and if in their writings there was with the gold some inferior matter, yet the gold remains, and the objection to that which was of man—the earthly—cannot destroy the imperishable gold.

Have not you and I often heard unlettered and uneducated men in our pulpits preach in the Spirit-enriching and doing good to our souls, and yet they have uttered some absurd things, absurd because not correct, and not true according to scientific or historical fact. These men were called of God without doubt. They may have been butchers of blacksmiths or tailors—who never went to college, but they were learned concerning experimental religion and things of the soul men, like Sammy Hicks, or Moody, or Casey. They taught the gospel but everything they said was not gospel. Why do you claim any different inspiration for the men of the less enlightened age than for those of to-days? Tom Payne and Ingersoll and the "Destructive Critics" of to-day, including all simple rationalists found most of their objections to the Bible on the imperfect parts which were natural to and characteristic of the earthen vessels. The devout and scholarly men of to-day by their work, have left such men as Payne and Ingersoll without the ground on which they found their, the uncertain footing, and the race has died because the light has dissolved the ground on which they built the fabric of their arguments.

The men to-day who scoff at religion and are delighted to find apparent ground for scoffing in the book—and the honest, sincere and godly, but unlettered men who treat the book as a fetish—who prate about the ipsissima verba, and the jot and tittle—who would lay rash hands on the ark to save it—are working together. God will take care of His work—it will come through the fire like the burning bush unconsumed, and, if it needs champions, the learned of the world, to whom we owe its preservation and translations and revisions, will take care of it as zealously as the more humble, but not more devout ones who have found in it the pearl of great price. So thank God, my brother, for the book as you have it, and love it, but let the more learned see it through glasses that bring it larger and nearer to them than it appears to those who see through a glass darkly. The learned and the unlearned alike can set to their seal that God is true, and with glad hearts can say, I know in whom I have believed.

BELIEVER

P. S.—I know from your life and conversation that when your call comes, no one will want to "fly the room," for the angels will not be far away, but please in charity don't try to frighten those dear people — the higher critics—the constructive kind, with visions of the "awful scene"

TWO FREAK EGGS

One Weighs Over Quarter of a Pound—the Other About Half an Ounce

There seems to be an epidemic of freak eggs just now, and the Examiner received a couple to-day that in point of contrast break all previous records. Mr. Geo. Bidgood of South Monaghan, brought them in this morning, and they have attracted much attention since their arrival. One of the eggs in question is about the biggest heard of for some time, weighing over a quarter of a pound and measuring 8 1-4 in. in circumference one way, and 6 1-4 the other; the other is remarkable for diametrically opposite qualities, being little larger than one of the marbles we used to use in our boyhood days, and weighing about half an ounce. Curious to say the eggs were laid by the same variety of hen—the Rhode Island Red.

FARMERS AND HIGH PRICES.

It is felt by many to be a matter of surprise that in a splendid agricultural country, like Canada, the price of living and farm products, especially manufactured farm products, should be so high. It is argued that according to the prices we pay for some articles of farm produce every farmer should be rolling in wealth. We are inclined to charge high prices upon the farmer; but is this fair? If the products we use came directly from the farmer to the consumer, such an assumption might be justified. But there are intermediate processes that add to the cost and subtract from the profit of the farmer. The last annual report of Secretary Wilson of the United States Department of Agriculture, states that, after a careful examination by experts it is shown that the farmer gets only 50 per cent. of the price, paid by the consumer, for farm products. The railways get about 7 per cent. and the balance, or about 43 per cent. goes to the middleman. Whether such conditions in the United States explains similar things in Canada that certainly demand explanation, may be well made a subject of inquiry. Even in Canada in many lines there is a large disproportion between what the farmer receives and what the consumer pays. For instance the price paid the western farmer for his wheat is fixed by the British market, but not so with the manufactured product flour. The Canadian consumer, even in the home of wheat, the west, has to pay a higher price for flour from wheat ground within possibly a mile or two of the field where it grew, than the English or Scotch consumer in Manchester or Glasgow—for flour shipped 3,000 miles. The present wholesale price of flour in Winnipeg is $2.85 per hundred weight. The wholesale price (by cooperative purchase) of the same grade of Canadian flour in Manchester or Glasgow is $2.50 per hundred weight. So that after paying 50 cents per hundred for shipment across the ocean the British wholesaler must necessarily buy Canadian flour at 95 cents less than the wholesale price in Winnipeg—for Canadian flour for home consumption. The same difference is maintained in the course of manipulation, to the consumer. This way. In Toronto, for instance, the price of a seven-pound sack of flour (such as is bought by the poorer consumer) is 30 cents, or at the rate of $4.28 a hundred weight. The Glasgow or Manchester price of a seven-pound sack of the same flour of the same weight is 22 cents, or at the rate of $3.14 per hundred weight. It is thus seen that in the matter of flour, there is some agency or set of agencies between the farmer who produces the raw material, the wheat, and the consumer of the manufacured product, the flour, that exacts a tremendous profit and thus adds to the final cost. According to a government report "Wholesale Prices in Canada," in the ten years, from 1900 to 1909, the price of No. 1 Northern wheat in Winnipeg increased only 17 2-3 per cent. During the same ten years the average wholesale price of flour in Toronto increased 54 1-2 per cent. per barrel; the price of shorts, per ton, increased 59 1-2 per cent. and the price of bran per ton increased 67 1-2 per cent. So that as far as flour and bread and by-products are concerned, the poor farmer does not seem to have played a very large part in producing, or receiving the benefit of, the prevailing prices. If the same process applies, and there is reason to believe it does, to other products of the farmer, in course of transit from producer to consumer, a great deal of the secret of the high cost of living is revealed, as to result, if not as to cause of result.

If reciprocity will, as it is pretty certain to do, by enlargement of the farmer's market, and the equalizing of prices, tend to decrease the high price of living so far as his products are concerned, it will be a good thing; something worth giving a trial at least.

EDITORIAL NOTES

If there is any danger of the favourable relations of Canada with twelve or thirteen countries interfering with the working out of reciprocity, Great Britain will no doubt be willing to terminate these treaties as she did, in Canada's interests, in the case of Germany and Belgium.

An example of the value of a good name and the disadvantage of a bad is found in the fact that because of the typhoid epidemic in Ottawa, due to bad water, the Baptist Young People's Union has cancelled its meeting at the Capital and will go to Hamilton this year. A good name is better than riches.

Immigration into Canada last year amounted to 280,687 new arrivals, a gain of 95,120 or fifty seven per cent. over the figures of last year. A large proportion of these was annexed from the United States; so that even without reciprocity there is a pretty brisk north and south movement now, and all to Canada's advantage.

We can take "pointers" from the enterprise of Western Canada. Lethbridge is to spend $35,000 for agricultural society buildings and the School Board of Medicine Hat has decreed the flying of the flag on the school buildings every day and has provided for the establishment of savings banks in schools. Note the difference: Peterborough was an incorporated city when Lethbridge and Medicine Hat were hardly big enough to make a spot on the map.

Letting in the light helps the Niagara district fruit growers to see the advantages of the reciprocity agreement. At the beginning of the reciprocity debate at Ottawa a large deputation assuming to represent the fruit interests went to Ottawa to protest against the agreement. But some Niagara people are not afraid that reciprocity will hurt them. Mr. J. L. Weller, superintendent of the Welland Canal, and a brother of the late Judge Weller, has joined with another gentleman to purchase thirty acres of land, near St. Catharines, to grow peaches; and this season twenty-seven hundred trees will be planted. They don't believe that reciprocity will ruin the peach business, but on the contrary, will improve it.

NORTHERN ONTARIO.

(Toronto World.)

In the address by Hon. A. S. Goodeve on the resources and development of British Columbia at the Empire Club yesterday there were further good reasons adduced to stir Ontario to action in developing her own territories. The warning, for such it was, is one that cannot be neglected without ultimate danger to the present eminence of the province. Mr. Goodeve pointed out that with a population of 350,000, the revenue of British Columbia was $7,000,000 which he compared with Ontario's population of 2,250,000 and revenue of only $8,000,000 British Columbia's credit stands highest among the provinces in the London market, and she could pay off every cent of her indebtedness to-morrow if called upon.

Such a competitor is much more formidable to Ontario than may appear. British Columbia has coal, black coal from the mines, and white coal from the glaciers with her perpetual water power. In no long time British Columbia will be a manufacturing province looking for markets in the prairie provinces. Her coal and her proximity will be determining factors in appeal to the prairie markets and if that appeal be successful, as no one need doubt, Ontario has a market problem ahead for her manufacturers.

We cannot too strongly impress upon the Ontario Government that the future welfare of old Ontario is bound up with the development of New Ontario. In the great clay belt with its millions of acres of fertile soil, are the homes of future customers of old Ontario's manufacturers. If we fail to settle those millions of acres, our manufacurers will not wait to ask who is responsible.

Nor is it British Columbia only we have to meet in this respect. When Port Arthur and Fort William get over their childish individualism, a rival to Toronto is sureto grow up in the great city which they will then become. Winnipeg is certain to be a manufacturing centre of the first importance, for we do not think the good sense of the country will permit any reciprocity arrangements to upset the prospects of the country's national development.

But the certain growth of manufacturing centres in the prairie and Pacific provinces is the strongest intimation to Ontario that Ontario must look after her home markets.

The largest home market we can foresee will be in the clay belt of Northern Ontario, and its settlement depends on the vigour and resourcefulness of the provincial government.

The contention of the World as to the necessity of developing New Ontario to timely, as well as characteristic of its public spirit. The enterprise it urges upon the Ontario government is long overdue. The World will, however, need to do considerable urging to overcome the prejudice against New Ontario that Sir James Whitney and his party have inherited from their opposition days. When the Ross government caused New Ontario to be explored and a portion of its riches revealed, Sir James, then plain James, Whitney, pronounced it worthless—"the land of the stunted poplar." In the face of his scepticism, the Liberal government began an aggressive policy of development of the resources of the new country, by building a railway, which proved to be a magic wand, for in its very construction the mineral possibilities of the country were discovered. Since that time or little after the country has been in charge of the present government and it is sufficient comment upon its inaction, in the way of development to claim as true the statement, that New Ontario has practically developed itself so far as this process has gone on. Its phenomenal mineral wealth has, so to speak, automatically invited enterprise, which has meant development, for whose initiation the present government has not been very seriously responsible. If the government had been as energetic in opening up the sixteen million acres of arable lands it controls in New Ontario as the Dominion has been in opening up and settling the lands in controls in the Northwest, the World would have seen realized to a very large extent the possibilities it now only foresees in New Ontario. A Mr. Sifton was prominent in applying the Liberal policy of enterprising settlement which has made the Canadian west the new and important economic, industrial and political factor in the national life it is to-day. New Ontario needs another Sifton. Perhaps the old Sifton, even under the altered conditions, has enough Liberalism and enterprise left—as much as the Ontario government could assimilate at one sitting—to still set an example; and if the Whitney government could secure his services or catch a little of his spirit there would be a great deal more hope for the development of the splendid possibilities of New Ontario; than at the moment is justified.

IS CAPITAL TIMID?

(Montreal Herald.)

If any stock were to reflect apprehensions of capital as to the results of Reciprocity on Canada's material welfare, it would be Canadian Pacific, that Company being is intimately associated with the varied interests of the Dominion.

Since the Reciprocity pact was announced on Jan 6th, C. P. R. stock has advanced some fifteen points, touching its highest mark to-day (March 23rd) at 220 1-8.

The C. P. R. is a ten per cent. stock. So is Union Pacific. But Union Pacific is quoted about forty points below C. P. R.

People are buying C. P. R., therfore, not so much because of present yield, as by reason of expectation of future profits. Capital, we are told, would shrink at the result of Reciprocity. Yet Capital hastes to invest in stock that would be the first to feel the evil effects through tariff changes.

HOW THE UNITED STATES FARMERS LOOK AT RECIPROCITY AGREEMENT

They Strongly Object to the Competition of Canadian Farmers —Will Lessen Value of United States Grains

While the Farm Journals of Canada, representing the opinions of the mass of Canadian farmers, are all favourable to reciprocity in farm products, the same class of journals in the United States strongly object it as voicing the views of United States farmers:

New England Homestead.—There is very litle opposition to the so-called Canadian Reciprocity measure in Canada, and the Parliament at Ottawa will doubtless pass the measure by a well-night unanimous vote, which will not be surprising in view of its colossal advantages to Canada. The farmers of America are not averse to close relations with Canada. Indeed, they are even willing to make sacrifices to have such relations possible, though they do not want to carry all the burden.

Looked at from a purely selfish ted States, the measure might well be called "a bill to reduce farm values throughout the United States, to curtail farm production, to reduce the price of farm products, and to increase our farmers' competition with cheap lands." Or it might be called "a bill to increase land values throughout Canada, to still further advertise that enterprising country and promote its development at the expense of the farmers of the United States.

Injustice to American Farmers.

Chicago Dairy Produce.—The full meaning of the so-called reciprocity bill now pending between this country and Canada is beginning to dawn upon the people and especially upon those engaged in agricultural pursuits. Notwithstanding the fact that some of the great statesmen we have in this country have come out in favour of it, others equally as great have been examining into the measure and are satisfied that a great injustice is about to be done to a certain class of our people. The farmers' products are placed upon the free list and this bill cannot fail to injure him, while it will undoubtedly increase the export sales of manufacturers.

We fail to see any justice or right in the farmer's grains, seeds, dairy products, eggs and poultry coming into this country free while the wagon he hauls it to market with is taxed 2 12- per cent. and his threshing machine, mower, hay rake and other farm implements are taxed 15 per cent. In fact, we would like to inquire why farm wagons are especially favoured anyway, and we would like to know also why a cream separator is admitted free into both countries, it being practically the only article that the farmer uses that is so specially favoured.

Again, we would like to inquire where is the justice or right in compelling the farmer to pay on an average of about 45 per cent. duty on everything he buys and subject him to free trade in farm products, which can be produced more cheaply in Canada than in this country?

This is a statement that may not generally be admitted as a fact; but when it is considered that the prices of farm lands in Canada are fully 50 per cent. lower than here and farm labour 33 -13 per cent. lower, it cannot fail to convince any honest person that the above statement is a fact.

Sentiments of Northwestern Farmers.

The Farmer, (Minnesota) — Some four weeks ago The Farmer took the position that the pending treaty was decidedly unfair, in principle, to our agricultural interests, all the concessions to Canada being asked of our American farmers and all the prospective benefits going to our American city interests. Naturally, we believed that the American farmer would resent an injustice of this kind. The scores of letters received from readers commending us on our position, and the utter lack of criticism leads us to believe that in the articles appearing in The Farmer we have voiced correctly the sentiment of Northwestern farmers.

Certainly, we see no reason for changing our opinions unless reciprocity can be taken a step farther and made of some real value to American farmers by a general revision of the tariff on some things that our farmers buy. If the American farmer does not resent the present situation, he can scarcely demand some things he should rightfully have later on, in case the pending treaty is consummated.

The Grange is Alarmed.

The appeal sent out by the legislative committee of th National Grange condemns the proposed reciprocity treaty with Canada. This appeal is addressed to the members of the United States senate and is as follows:

We, the undersigned farmers, respectfully urge that the Canadian Reciprocity bill now pending in Congress should not become law. Following are some of their more important reasons.

The bill provides for the admission free of duty of all Canadian farm products. Since Canada is the only country from which any considerable quantity of these products can under any circumstances be imported, this would result in practically free trade in everything the farmer produces.

The Canadian farmers, by reason of their lower general tariff, and their preferential trade arrangements, can buy manufactured goods at lower prices than those prevailing in this country. The prices of farm lands in Canada are also much lower than in the United States. These conditions give the Canadian farmers an advantage over us, and the free admission of their products will subject us to unfair competition.

We hold that the farmers should receive exactly the same measure of protection as is given the manufacturers, and that there must be no reduction of duties on farm products, either by reciprocity or tariff revision, unless the duties on all manufactured articles are at the same time correspondingly reduced.

As the adoption of the proposed reciprocity law would be a serious injury to the farming interests of this country, and woul greatly reduce the value of our farm lands while increasing the value of Canadian farms, we earnestly protest against its enactment.

PUNCH ON GOLDWIN SMITH.

London Paper Amuses Itself With Canadian's Book.

Goldwin Smith, whose "Reminiscences" have been skilfully edited by Mr. Arthur Haultain, was a Superior Person, even to a fuller extent than Horsman reached, or a more modern instance has attained. Looking around him, commentating on men and matters, he found little that was good. His memory of the Duke of Wellington is limited to the veteran's appearance in connection with the Oxford Commission appointed by Lord John Russell, when "he seemed to proclaim his inauguration by making false quantities in reading his Latin speech and wearing his Academical cap wrong side before." Lowell he dismisses in a word. Of Emerson he writes: "I heard him read his own poetry aloud, but it remained as obscure to me as before." I note these characteristics without prejudice, rather in despite of grateful acknowledgment of rare personal compliment. Goldwin Smith quotes with approval two little tapes, long since passed into currency, which, in the exuberance of youth, I fastened, one upon Disraeli, the other upon Robert Lowe. With many other authorities he accepts as a matter-of-fact a parentage of which those eminent persons were innocent. He is at his best in his early reminiscences, where the intellectual austerity of the man is mellowed by the memories of boyhood. Other interesting passages are found in the chapter devoted to the American Civil War. Outside academic circles, Goldwin Smith is perhaps best known as "the Oxford Professor" introduced by Disraeli into "Lothair" as "a social parasite." This gratuitous attack deeply wounded Goldwin Smith. "Your expressions," he wrote to Disraeli, "can touch no man's honor. They are the stingless insults of a coward." All the same the sting remained to the end. In his "Reminiscences" he finds it as difficult to keep out reference to his old enemy as did "Mr. Dick" to avoid illusion to the head of King Charles the First when drafting his memorial. In spite of, perhaps because of, certain foibles on the part of the diarist the book is full of interest.

The $6.50 Voile Skirt

A Talk On Dress Skirts

The many ladies who thronged our ready-to-wear opening were delighted with our dress skirts, the styles were so much in advance, the qualities so fine and the designs so much superior to the usual skirt shown, no wonder they expressed their approval so freely.

Our skirt factory is known to produce the best skirts in the trade. We control all their output for this district and we get the newest patterns hot from their presses every week.

It is a good thing to remember that by special arrangement we are able to sell these high-class dressy skirts at no higher prices than you will be charged for the ordinary skirts you may be shown.

Every skirt we have in the store, no matter what price it may be is pure wool, stitched with silk, thoroughly shrunken and cut with a style.

These skirts we can show you at $3.75—$5.00—$6.50—$7.00, etc.

See our dressy all wool voile skirt at $6.50—it has style to it.

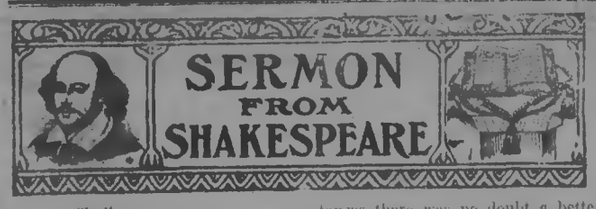
ELLIOT'S



Shall we now
Contaminate our fingers with base bribes,
And sell the mighty space of our large honours
For so much trash as may be grasped thus?

Julius Caesar, Act IV., Sc. 3.

Evidently boodle and graft are no new things in the political world. Here is Brutus represented in the drama of Julius Caesar as speaking over two thousand years ago, to his friend and fellow-worker Cassius just as some indignant congressman or member of parliament might speak to a political comrade whom he had found guilty of accepting bribes. The human heart is much the same as it has been from the beginning of history; the desire to possess has been its blessing and its bane.

Mankind detises anyone who could be induced to depart from principles for a consideration; this is peculiarly the case where the consideration is money. The acceptance of a bribe is one of the lowest forms of immorality; "base" is hardly a strong enough epithet to apply to the word bribe. It is worse than lying or stealing; it includes both of these. A man may have stolen to save a life, in both instances there was no doubt a better way, but the heart of the sinner may not have been corrupt. A bribe is invariably bestowed to win a man from a course of action he deems to be right, or to win a man to a course of action he knows to be wrong.

The briber invariably despises the individual bribed. A man known to have accepted a bribe is held in general contempt, and yet bravery is deplorably common. It is the main weapon in politics, it is a force in the business world, and it is prevalent in social life. As in Roman times, the money bag is still the sword and buckler of the average politician, and for gold officers are sold to undeservers. Men whose votes count at the polls are bribed by insignificant sums; men who control many votes receive lordly rewards. The railway magnate and the corporation labourer are, in the time of political battle, too often induced to sell the mighty space of their large honours. As Whittier has magnificently pointed out the ballot makes the humblest citizen a king equally with the loftiest; as he drops it in the box he is for the moment wearing a crown and wielding a sceptre. How base to sell one's kingship!

In the mad race for wealth, particularly on the American continent from the standpoint of civilization the last hope of the world, the political world is honeycombed with bribery. Federal contracts, state and provincial contracts, city contracts, investigation has proved in many instances to have been won by dollars. Those in authority have contaminated their fingers with base bribes. This is so common that men of clean life and high principle are apt to shun public office. The forces that today practically rule this continent, the vast railway corporations and the gigantic trusts, have achieved their power largely through their generous contribution to party funds. Ancient barons rode forth on their marauding expeditions with battle-axe and spear, and took chances for their lives in maintaining their positions; the modern baron travels comfortably in their Pullman cars or palatial steamers, waited on by servants and physicians, their only weapon the unerring cheque.

The forces of righteousness are no doubt battle royal to keep [illegible] evil. Not unnaturally! In a low state of civilization a few rule; in a high state many have power. It is only where men have personal power or influence to sell that political bribery can exist. The United States is in the van of civilization, and within her borders are more fingers contaminated with base bribes, more men who have sold the mighty space of their large honours than there are in any other civilized country. On the other hand there is a stalwart army of earnest men and women vigorously and fearlessly fighting the forces of corruption. They are the leaven of righteousness in the nation, and, in the end, their influence must prevail; otherwise creation has been in vain and society is a farce.

The examples of the contempt and abhorrence in which bribery is held are manifold. In what horror is the act of Judas, which took place two thousand years ago still held by humanity; the name of Benedict Arnold one of the bravest soldiers that ever led a charge, is, as we have pointed out in a previous sermon, the most abominated in America. The one sold his friend and leader for a base bribe, the other attempted to sell his country. Not all the water on the surface of the globe can wash their deeds from the memory of man; not all the fire in the bowels of the earth can purify their names. Yet, every man who, in any degree, is induced by a bribe to break a trust or sell principle is a Judas or an Arnold.

Got Father Morriscy's "No. 10"

Just in Time—To Save His Life.

Mr. Aylward's letter tells the story:,

Campbellton, N.B., Feb. 5, 1909.

Father Morriscy Med. Co.,

During the winter of 190?, while travelling on the Gaspé Coast, I contracted a severe Cold which settled upon my lungs.

After I returned home I wrote to Father Morriscy explaining my case. I received a letter from him with a prescription for his medicine, which could not be filled at the time here. After one week's delay I received it, just in the nick of time to save my life. After one month's use I felt like a new man.

Yours truly,
Jno. Aylward.

There is not much time to lose when a cold settles on the lungs. Pneumonia kills within a week. With Father Morriscy's "No. 10" at hand, you don't even have to wait for a doctor. "No. 10" cures all throat and lung troubles. It is a real Lung Tonic, and fortifies against future attacks. Trial bottle 25c. Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured His Rheumatism of Thirty Years Standing

Now he is helping hundreds of other Islanders tell that the one sure cure for all Kidney Disease is Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Alma, Prince Co., P. E. I., March 24.—(Special.)—Cured of Rheumatism and Heart Disease after thirty years' suffering. Wm. J. Vincent, a well known farmer living near here is spreading the news throughout this little Island that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the sure cure for Kidney Diseases.

"I had been bothered with a lame back, Rheumatism and Heart Disease for over thirty years," Mr. Vincent states. "For days I would be laid up in bed. At times it caused me great pain to even turn in bed. I tried all kinds of liniments, plasters, electric belts, but got no relief till I used Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three boxes of them cured me."

Hundreds of the residents of the Island have used Dodd's Kidney Pills and they all tell the same story. No other Kidney Disease no matter how severe or of how long standing can resist Dodd's Kidney Pills. They are the one sure cure of every Kidney Disease from Backache to Bright's Disease.

Lesson for Sunday, April 2, 1911. Elisha Heals Naaman, the Syrian. 2 Kings 5.

Douro Township Council Holds A Busy Session

The Douro Township Council met on Monday, March 20, at the Town Hall, pursuant to adjournment. All the members were present. On motion, the minutes of the previous meeting were read and signed.

Moved by W. J. Charlton, seconded by M. Moloney, that the statute labour on the Downs' property, now owned by W. J. Dunford, be placed on line between cons. 4 and 5, in front of lot 20, and that W. J. Dunford be overseer.—Carried.

Moved by Coun. M. Moloney, seconded by Coun. B. Leahy, that the Clerk be instructed to prepare a by-law providing for the removal of all fences and obstructions from the high ways in the Township, and also to regulate the running at large of horses, cattle, sheep, and pigs.—Carried.

Moved by Coun. W. J. Charlton, seconded by Coun. B. Leahy, that the Reeve and Coun. Moloney be appointed to inspect the bridge between con. 3 and 4, in front of lot 6, and to report at next meeting of Council.—Carried.

Moved by Coun. M. Moloney, seconded by Coun. W. J. Charlton, that the following be appointed overseers to expend the money appropriated under By-law No. 723, viz.:

Ward No. 1—W. J. Charlton and W. J. Dunford.
Ward No. 2—M. Moloney.
Ward No. 3.—P. Farley.
Ward No. 4.—B. Leahy.—Carried.

By-laws No. 731, authorizing the Reeve and Treasurer to borrow certain sums, not to exceed $1,000 from the Traders' Bank, Lakefield, and No. 732, also to borrow $2,000 from the Royal Bank, Peterborough, for 1911, for school purposes, were each read its several number of times and were passed, signed and sealed.

Moved by Coun. P. Farley, seconded by B. Leahy that upon the receipt by him of an order so to do from the Reeve of the Township, the Treasurer of the said Township of Douro is hereby directed to pay to each overseer such amounts as may be required from time to time to pay for works done under by-law No. 723, year 1911, and said overseers are here by directed to file said pay-sheets with the Township Treasurer, when properly receipted.—Carried.

Mr. G. W. Bennett, inspector of Colonization Roads for Peterborough County, was present at the meeting, with regard to the laying out of the money appropriated under by-law No. 723, by which the Department of Public Works has placed in the estimates for Douro $600.00 for 1911. The Township Council places an equal amount for the building of permanent roads. Mr. Bennett went into detail very fully as to the laying out of this grant, and condemned very strongly the use of too many overseers. He said one good overseer and well paid for his services, was a far better way of getting roads built than several overseers with only a small grant to expend.

Mr. Bennett also explained the commuted statute labour system in vogue in his Township of North Monaghan. All their statute labour is commuted at the rate of 75c per day and the Township divided into six road divisions, under six overseers, who work out all the commuted statute labour on their divisions. Every ratepayer is asked to go out and earn money on the road, oftentimes earning two or three times as much as they pay in the taxes for said labour. Mr. Bennett said it was a great effort for some ratepayers to change from the old way of fifty years ago of doing statute labour, but after it was introduced, and he would not advise the council to commute all the statute labour in the Township at once it was looked upon as the only way of getting work done and have good roads. At the conclusion of Mr Bennett's remarks it was moved by M Moloney and seconded by W. J Charlton, and carried, unanimously, that a vote of thanks be tendered Mr G W Bennett for his able explantation of the commuted statute labour system, and also regarding the expending of government grants.

The orders upon the Treasurer were as follows:

M. D Sullivan, Collector, $5.00, being balance of salary for 1910, the Peterborough Hardware Co., $1 for crowbar, purchased in 1910.

On motion of W. J. Charlton and M Moloney, the Council adjourned to meet at a call from the Reeve.—Carried.

PERTINENT PARAGRAPHS

BY SIMPLE SIMON

Re Chinese Famine Fun. Bravo St. Andrew's church—but where are the others?

The Rev. Bourne of Kingston, is credited (it should be discredited) with declaring that he will shoot any Kingston girl appearing on the streets in the Harem skirt! It is hoped that his aim will be as wild as his rhetoric, otherwise the intrepid wearer may be despatched, as Shakespeare says, "to the undiscovered country from whouse bourne no traveller returns."

The White Plague Crusaders have developed into a duly organized corps with a strong list of officers, and probably a big gun—at least there was one at the meeting—and will henceforth be known by the somewhat prosaic title of the Peterborough Health Association. If it has not already a motto, I would suggest "Mens sana in corpore sano".

The Eight Hour Bill, referred to in these paragraphs a short time ago, was ignominously killed in the Legislature last Tuesday. Mr. Studholme appealed for consideration of the working class, who had never secured a square deal, but on the division being taken his was the only vote in its favour. Another injustice to the working man.

In spite of the School Inspector's wrath, anxious parents cannot be blamed if they refuse to expose their children to the risk of infection. Scarlet fever is not chicken pox, mumps, or measels. The after results are more to be dreaded than the disease itself.

It is hard to see how disinfecting the school renders the children immune. Better disinfect each child as he enters the building.

Press plebiscites re reciprocity are all the rage. I wonder what paper will have the temerity to launch a plebiscite on annexation.

AFTER EFFECTS OF THE GRIP

It is fortunate that the Grip epidemic this year is milder in its action than in previous years. This does not mean that it is less dangerous.

The after results of the Grip are apt to be exceedingly serious. Do not take any chances—for the general weakness, and to allay all bronchial irritation after the fever has passed, nothing equals Vinol, which is a delicious combination of the health-giving properties of the cod's liver, with the grease eliminated and tonic iron added.

A lady from Long Branch, N. J., writes: "The Grip left me in a nervous, weakened, run-down condition. After taking three bottles of Vinol I am better and stronger than I have been for years, and I cheerfully recommend Vinol to all who have been ill and need strength." (Name furnished on request.)

After Grip or any severe illness try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not restore your vitality and strength. McDermid and Jury, corner George and Charlotte street; also Payne's drug store, corner George and Simcoe streets.

CHOIR ENTERTAINED

Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Fowler Proved Delightful Hosts

The members of the Mark Street choir and a few of their friends were entertained last night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Fowler, 165 Hunter street.

A most delightful evening was enjoyed by all. The only marring feature was the regrettable absence of the esteemed choir leader, Mr. J. H. Callander, who was detained by the indisposition of Mrs. Callander.

Games and music featured the entertainment of the fleeting hours, with the usual tempting refreshments, and before dispersing the guests united in a most hearty expression of appreciation to Mr. and Mrs. Fowler for their generous hospitality.

C.P.R. PROGRESS

The Remarkable Development of Railroading Since 1881

If you look at an old map of Canada as it was some seventy years ago, you begin to realise what railways have done for the Dominion. Even forty years ago Winnipeg, as a city, did not exist—it was only a trading station, known as Fort Garry. Now, owing to the fact that the C.P.R. touched it in its track from the Atlantic to the Pacific, it is a great city with handsome public buildings and an estimated population of some 200,000. Where yesterday there was silence, broken only by wandering Indians and voyageurs, and by the buffalo and other wild animals, to-day there are busy cities and towns growing in size and importance every year. And it is the great railways of Canada that have worked this marvellous change.

The builders of the Canadian Pacific Railway were far-seeing, and they believed in the future of Canada. Now their faith and their pluck in undertaking to level up the Atlantic and Pacific coasts have been rewarded. As time has rolled on and Canada has grown into a prosperous nation, cause and effect seem to have become a little confused. While it is true to say of the C.P.R. that it is, still helping to build up Canada, it is also true to say that the growth and progress of Canada are now doing much for the railway. Also, while no one would deny that the present position of the Canadian Pacific Railway is, of course, dependent to a great extent on the prosperity of Canada, it must also be remembered that the foundation of that prosperity was practically laid by the Canadian Pacific Railway.

The railway, which was incorporated in 1881, opened its main trans-continental line for traffic in 1886. In 1882 its gross earnings were $2,484,780 and the number of its locomotives 146. These figures had, by 1892, increased to $19,791,080 and 569 locomotives. In the next decade the increase was even greater, the figures being $33,503,050 and 745 locomotives. The latest report of the Company shows that for the year ending June 30, 1910, the gross earnings of the railway amounted to $94,989,490, and the number of locomotives had reached a total of 1,534. The Canadian Pacific Railway has gone on growing year by year, until the system extends over some 15,000 miles, the greatest mileage operated by one railway enterprise on the continent of North America.

THE ENGLISH DREADNOUGHT

Mrs. Stubb:—"John, what do you think of the English Dreadnoughts?"

Mr. Stubb:—"Battleships or Suffragettes, Maria?"

LEFT HANDED BARBERS

They are Very Rare, Also Those Wearing Glasses

Left-handed barbers seem almost as scarce as dead donkeys. "We don't like left-handed assistants," said one master barber, "neither do customers consequently they are seldom employed. I do not suggest that a naturally left-handed barber is not as dexterous as one who is right-handed; in fact I have an assistant here who shaves himself left-handed, but we always use his right hand for customers. A left handed barber looks awkward, and is apt to make a customer nervous. It has from time immemorial been the custom to always begin to shave a man on the right side of his face.

"I suppose there are scientific men who could tell us why we do this. I don't know the explanation myself, but I do know the right-handed barber begins work naturally on the right side of the face, while the left-handed barber naturally begins on the left side. This is apt to cause a collision between two assistants as they work in a row in front of the glasses, and the left handed barber would often find himself in the way of the barber at the next chair who shaved right-handed.

"You will understand our strong antipathy to left-handed barbers when I tell you that a short time ago we dismissed a learner who began to lather left-handed, and who, we found, was unable to use his right hand with any degree of quickness or confidence.

"There is also another peculiarity about barbers which is interesting. It is seldom that you see one wearing glasses. There is a great objection to employing barbers with defective sight necessitating the wearing of glasses, for the simple reason that they might misjudge the distance of the razor from the face and cut the customer. I don't mean to say that no assistants are employed who wear glasses, and first-class men some of them are, too, but there is a prejudice against them, and that is why you seldom come across one in the trade."

BACK FROM THE DEAD

The Body of a Guide Received After Twenty-three Years

The body of a guide, perfectly preserved, has been yielded up by one of the Swiss glaciers after a period of twenty-three years. In 1888 the guide fell into a crevasse. His body was lately recovered, its appearance unchanged by its long imprisonment in the ice.

There have been other cases of the bringing back of a long-lost body held for years in the close embrace of the ice. One of the first instances on record relates to the Hamel accident, which occurred in 1820. Several guides were swept down by an avalanche and hurled into a crevasse. Hamel prophesied the glacier would yield them up in the course of 1,000 years, but Professor Forbes, a British expert in Alpine affairs, believed that the end of the glacier would be reached by the bodies in forty years. This statement was considered bold, but its accuracy was borne out by the event. In forty years the flow of ice brought the bodies to light.

In 1866 Henry Arkwright was lost in a glacier. In just thirty-one years his brother received a telegram from the Mayor of Chamonix stating that the body had been found. Every article of clothing was intact. His name and regiment could be read clearly on his handkerchief, and his gold pencil-case opened and shut as easily as when he had last used it, three decades before.

THE KING OF WURTTEMBURG AND HIS WIFE

His Majesty has reached his sixty-third birthday. The king's health is by no means satisfactory, and the heir apparent, Duke Philip of Wurttemburg has already taken over many state duties. The king has been married twice his first wife being the late Princess Marie of Waldeck and Pyrmont, who died in 1882, leaving him one surviving child, a daughter, the Princess Pauline, who is married to the Prince Zu Wied. After the death of his first wife the king married Princess Charlotte Zu Schaumburg-Lippe. They have no children.

NEW AUSTRIAN GUNS

Up-To-Date Equipment for Three Battleships

An order for twelve new 12-inch guns similar to those to be fitted in the Austrian Dreadnought has been placed with the Skoda Works at Pilsen. The new guns are intended for the battleships Erzherzog Karl, Erzherzog Friedrich, and Erzherzog Ferdinand Max. The last of these 10,600-ton ships was completed in 1907. All three are now to be modernized and refitted with turrets with four large guns each at a total cost of $3,200,000.

KING OF THE BELGIANS

Not Willing to Pay a Big Price For His Photograph

A curious little story of the King of the Belgians and his visit to Rapallo is going the rounds just now. The King detected a photographer in the act of snap-shotting him, and afterwards followed him to his studio, where he intimated that he would be glad to purchase two copies of the photograph. "How much do you want?" said King Albert when the prints were forthcoming. "Twenty four lire," said the photographer. "Too much," replied the King. "I shall only buy one," and he handed the man twelve lire.

ON THEIR GUARD AGAINST SPIES

Instructions Issued to the German Soldiers as to How to Deal with Espionage

The War Department in Berlin has issued a manuel for the use of soldiers on spies, with instructions how to deal with them. The publication of the book has been accelerated owing to events connected with the well-known Brokum case. Hints are first given as to how the soldier is to recognise a spy and how spies ingratiate themselves into the favor of soldiers often as peddlars. Soldiers are requested to be very cautious what they say in public-houses or on journeys. They are not to be communicative to strangers; not to be confidential in military affairs; to exercise a wise taciturnity. When a soldier suspects a spy he is to go to his superiors and report, and at the same time keep his eye on the suspect. Should he detect his spy in action he may arrest him, particularly should he find him photographing or burgling military stores or loafing about fortresses without a permit. Should a soldier err on the side of too great zeal, and his suspicions turn out to be unfounded, his superiors are not to punish him. The will is to be taken for the deed, and his zeal is to be commended. The successful man who has caught his spy is to be rewarded in an especial manner. Soldiers are warned about the dishonorable character of espionage, and reminded of the terrible punishment awaiting the man who willingly makes himself a spy's tool. Even after doing his term of penal servitude such a person is despised forever. Soldiers in frontier garrisons and fortresses, where the danger of espionage is great, are to be supplied at once with this manual.

INFLUENCE OF JEWS

They Wish to be Admitted to the Official Ranks of the German Army

The question of the admission of Jews to the grade of officer in the German army is becoming a more heated one every year, now that Jews of capacity and wealth are daily increasing in number and influence. At present no Jew can become an officer, and consequently cannot return to civil life with the social privileges which the title of "reserve officer" confers. The Minister of War disclaims all intention of partisanship in favor of any one race or confession, but he says the other officers won't have it, and, according to German army traditions, it is for them to decide. The Minister says that there is an anti-Semitic spirit abroad among the officers and that this is natural as reflecting an anti-Semitic feeling among the population at large. It will, therefore, one may conclude, be a long time yet before the Jewish officer is found in the German army.

A STRANGE QUACK

Grant, of Maidstone, Described Himself to the Coroner as a Human X-Ray

An extraordinary quack came before the Maidstone coroner recently in connection with an inquiry into the death of an aged woman named Winn, of Barming. Mrs. Winn, who died from heart failure following kidney trouble, had consulted a so-called mental scientist named Grant, of Maidstone. Grant, called as a witness, described himself as a human X-Ray. He had been practising about nine months, and could not exactly explain his treatment. He simply held his hand over a patient and gave no medicine.

The Coroner:—"Do you hold yourself out as being able to cure people by occult or some hidden mysterious power?"

Witness:—"I can cure any disease that anyone likes to put before me. The scientific cure is hidden to the public, but not to me."

"Do you get many patients?"

"About one hundred a day; never less than fifty; and I have had as many as three hundred in one day."

Further questioned, Grant said he never charged poor people. His practice was for every disease they could mention, but blindness, consumption and cancer were the diseases he particularly looked after. In consumption, if he took it at a certain stage, he could cure a bad case. He had grown a completely new eye and lung, and had cured seven distinct cases of total blindness.

"You rely upon X-rays more than anything else, don't you?"

"No. I have a particular power of smelling a disease directly the patient comes into my consulting-room."

A verdict of death from natural causes was returned.

FOR ECZEMA

A Treatment That is Guaranteed to Give Relief

Eczma is parasitic in nature. It is said to be a contagious disease. Until the parasite or germ hidden in the skin is completely destroyed and removed, eczema cannot be cured. Fully one-third of all skin disease is in the form of eczema. It affects persons of all ages and classes. It is very prevalent among people between the ages of 20 and 40.

We unhesitating guarantee to return every cent paid us for Rexall Eczema Ointment in every case where it fails to give entire satisfaction. It possesses remarkable cleasing, antiseptic, healing and curative power. Its great value is very pronounced in the treatment of eczema, whether of the dry, scaley sort, or of the weeping type, where there is a constant flow of ill-smelling excretion, or of the other intermediary forms, such as ring worm, acne, pimples, blotches and discolourations.

Rexall Eczema Ointment is very useful in treating ulcers, sores, wounds, insect bites, nettle rash and hives. It is particularly recommended for the treatment of children who are tormented with itching, burning, and disfiguring skin disease. We urge you to try it at our risk. Your money waits you if you are not satisfied with the treatment. Two sizes, 50c. and $1.00. Remember you can only obtain Rexall Eczema Ointment in this town at our store. SKIN-GRAFTING

May Be of Much Value to the Scientific World

Through the successful outcome of an operation performed upon Anna Windt, 18 years old, the surgeons of the Samaritan Hospital at Philadelphia have made a discovery which may be of great benefit to science in the grafting of skin. The discovery is that skin taken from the body may be kept in a healthy condition for an indefinite period without suffering harm, and may then be used to replace skin that has been burned or otherwise destroyed, and will "take hold" as well as skin cut fresh from the flesh. Twenty square inches of the right forearm of Anna Windt are now covered with skin that had been out of contact with the body for five entire days, and kept on ice during that time in order that it might be preserved. Dr. Wayne Babcock, who has received much attention from the medical world during the past few days because of his invention of several new anaesthetics, made the new discovery. He tried by experiment to ascertain whether the theory he had held was true, and the trial more than satisfied him of the correctness of his belief.

FUTURE FARMERS

A National School of Agriculture is shortly to be founded here, where boys will be trained to take positions in England or the over-seas Dominions as farmers, farm managers, and stewards, and gardeners. Girls will be taught dairy work, plain cooking and laundry work. The necessary capital has already been found, and it is the intention to secure a farm of about 100 acres near a large city, preferably London, where the work will be carried on under the tuition of qualified instructors. To commence with, about 100 pupils, boys and girls, will be specially selected from the elementary schools. No fees will be charged, either for tuition or board and lodging. For the boys a course of training similar to that given to Boy Scouts will form part of the curriculum. All the produce raised on the farm, which is to be conducted on strictly commercial lines, will be sold, and the scheme, it is hoped, will be entirely self-supporting. In cases where the value of their work exceeds the cost of maintenance wages will be paid to the pupils.

FORD AUTOMOBILES

Do not buy a FORD because you can buy it for less money than nearly any other car but buy it because 30,000 satisfied owners of model T Fords have proved that it IS the car to buy in order to get REAL VALUE for your money.

Henry Ford is building 37,500 automobiles this year, and it is for this reason you can buy a model T touring car fully equipped for $975.00 and a runabout for $875.00 as any body knows that a very large output can be marketed at a much smaller profit per car than a small output. Futhermore as has been already stated Mr. Ford has actual CASH enough to carry on his business and pay spot cash for every particle of stock he requires. Hence it is that in buying a FORD you pay no penalty of price beyond value.

Not only is it easy to buy but it is equally so to maintain. You save enough in maintenance to pay the interest on the whole investment. Then again if should decide to dispose your car, you can get twenty buyers for a Ford to one for any other make of car.

Demand proves satisfaction and judging from the demand for FORD cars YOU can make no mistake in deciding to take one of the 37,500.

IT'S no experiment. It is simply this that on account of building so many THOUSAND cars the FORD CO. has this model T as near perfection as it is possible to get it.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES

One of the chief difficulties connected with the working of the library lies in the fact that those who make use of it are so apt to lose sight of the extreme trouble caused by the laying down of volumes in the first accessible place they find on the shelves. Owing to this the present state of the shelves renders it practically impossible to lay one's hands on a book, where by rights it should be found. The public are asked once more to take due note of this in order to render it easier both for themselves and others to obtain such volumes as they are in quest of. Another matter which should be borne in mind is that a considerable amount of annoyance would be saved readers if they made it a rule to bring their returned books to the desk before going to the shelves to search for a fresh allotment. It is also in the highest degree advisable that every one should take his ticket with him, and not leave it in the charge of the librarinh, or his assistants, till they return with their newly acquired volumes. On a busy evening such a course is apt to cause considerable annoyance not only to the waiting public, but also to the owner of the tickets. The Board are in the highest degree anxious that the public should be pleased and it would conduce very much towards such a desirable result if those who have been pursuing the course above mentioned would desist from doing so in the future. A very gratifying feature of library work in Peterborough lies in the fact that three well-attended and enthusiastic reading circles in this city are making extensive use of the Public Library in their researches. One of these circles is engaged in the study of the ancient epics of Europe and the earlier German novelists; another in a survey of the history of Spain, whilst the third, which is composed of a group of the younger ladies is busying itself with the lives and works of certain famous poets. The T. A. S. also has a very large and very successful Literary Institute in connection with its organization, and although at the present time it draws largely on its own well selected stock of reading matter, nothing would give the Library Board greater pleasure than to see its members making all the use possible of the Public shelves in the furtherance of their work. Next winter, it is to be hoped that even a younger set than those who have already entered upon the work of studying special branches in literature will come to the front and that we shall see boys, as well as girls, supplementing their college debates with evenings devoted to some special course in reading. The Library, it must be remembered is for all, high and low, rich and poor, and that no matter how badly equipped for the task anyone may fancy himself, he is entitled to ask for and obtain all the help needed in whatever comes within the possibility of a library to offer him.

Miss Newman's Brilliant Recital

A very successful pianoforte recital was given last night at the Conservatory of Music, by Miss Laura Newman. Miss Newman has been at the head of the piano faculty for the past four years, succeeding Mr Harry Field of Dresden. She has had splendid success as a tetcher, and has been able to infuse into the members of her large class a great deal of her musical enthusiasm, and much of the brilliant skill of performance that she displayed at her recital last night.

There was a splendid attendance of musical people, who were delighted with, not only the well-balanced programme, so artistically presented, but by Miss Newman's charming personality. She wore a gown—beautiful, in its classical simplicity, of pale pink crepe de chine, with crystal and sable, with exceedingly becoming effect.

While Miss Newman has a clear, brilliant technique, she is not a mere virtuosa, but impresses her playing, when occasion demands, with true musical feeling and effect, and a large tone, her delightful legato being especially developed in the adagio movement of Beethoven's Sonata Pathetique. Her technical facility, as well as artistic temperament, was especially well brought out in the piece de resistance, of Listz's fourteen immortal rhapsodies, the eighth. Miss Newman scored a genuine triumph. Every number was redemanded, and the applause that followed the Liszt number was so insistent that the pianist was compelled to respond, which she very gracefully did with a brilliant performance of "Anitra's Dance," from Greig's Per Gent Suite. She was also presented with a beautiful bouquet of American beauty roses.

Miss Newman was very efficiently assisted by Mrs. Ryerson Ritchie, who contributed three songs, which were very heartily appreciated and encored, a deserving tribute to the delightful employment of her sweet and cultured voice—a very pleasing contribution to an all-round most successful recital.

Miss Hazel Dean, a member of the faculty, very satisfactorily furnished the accompaniments in Mrs. Ritchie's songs. The pianoforte, used on the occasion was a Nordheimer Company Steinway Grand. The following is the programme:

Sonata Pathetique ..... Beethoven
(Arabesque—Two Larks) Leschetizky
Etude, Op. 25, No. 1 .....
Nocturne, Op. 62, No. 2 .....
Etude, Op. 25, No. 9 ..... Chopin
A la Bien-Aimee, Valse ..... Schutt
Doll's Waltz ..... Poldini
Rhapsody, No. VIII ..... Liszt

Mrs. Ryerson Ritchie

Song of Waiting ..... Ellen Wright
Absence ..... Metcalf
O Heart of Mine ..... H. Clough Richter

"Macbeth" Was The Subject Of An Excellent Address By Father Fitzpatrick

Father Fitzpatrick Discusses This Well Known Shakesperian Tragedy at the St. Alphonsus Lyceum Last Night---An Excellent Musical Programme.

A large and appreciative audience partook of the intellectual and interesting literary treat which was provided by the Ladies' Literary Society and held at the St. Alphonsus' Lyceum last night. At the opening of the meeting a short programme was provided, consisting of vocal and instrumental selections. It would be invidious to dwell on the merits of any special number in a programme that was so uniformly good.

Next followed one of the most interesting and forcible interpretations of one of Shakespeare's dramas that the citizens of Peterborough have had the pleasure of hearing for some time. Rev. Father Fitzpatrick is a forcible and most convincing speaker — broadminded, and proved himself to be thoroughly versed on the subject in hand.

"Macbeth is the greatest drama that has been written in any language," said the speaker, in his opening remarks. While other nations have surpassed us in sculpture, music, etc., "Macbeth" remains as one of the greatest dramas that the world has ever produced. The speaker then gave a short summary of the five acts, which go to make up the plot, interposing them with descriptive history relative to the chief characteristics concerning Lord and Lady Macbeth. The first and second acts lead up to the assassination of Duncan, King of Scotland. Lady Macbeth was not the inparnate devil, as some of the critics and commentators of Shakespeare are wont to think. She was a woman, she loved her Lord, even though she was cruel and wicked. She was the principal instigator in the plot leading up to the assassination of the Scottish King, and his followers. Retribution rapidly followed. Lady Macbeth was stricken with insanity. She was haunted by the constant apparition of the gory sight, which presented itself in the death chamber on that fatal night.

Father Fitzpatrick regretted that, owing to the limited time at his disposal, he was unable to go into this Shakespearian tragedy more fully.

A unanimous vote of thanks was then tendered the speaker in behalf of the Ladies' Literary Society.

Rev. Father McColl, in a very suitable speech, referred to his colleague as a gentleman of high literary attainments. He also took occasion to thank Rev. Father Fitzpatrick for the very interesting portrayal of the characteristics of Lord and Lady Macbeth.

A very successful meeting was then brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

MANY PRESENTATIONS MADE TO DEPARTING CITIZEN

Mr. N. A. Howard-Moore Honoured by Several of the Organizations in Which He Took a Prominent Part.

GOING TO NEW YORK

Mr. N. A. Howard Moore who has been a resident of Peterborough and prominently connected with different organizations here for the past six and one half years left today for New York where he has accepted a lucrative position and will reside in future. Mr. Moore will be greatly missed in many circles, and his friends will wish him every success in his new field of labour. Since coming to Peterborough he has been very active in Church of England work and his absence will be felt. In Orange circles particularly he will leave a vacancy that will be hard to fill. He was county financial secretary and deputy district master of the city of Peterborough district and at the recent session of the Grand Chapter of the Royal Knights of Ireland was elected Deputy Grand Registrar. Mr. Moore is an enthusiastic amateur photographer and has been secretary of the Peterborough Camera Club. Last year he was the recipient of twenty-four prizes for photographic work. He was prominent as well in Sons of England work.

During the past week Mr. Moore's friends have indicated their esteem for him in no uncertain manner. On Thursday night he was entertained by the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, All Saints' chapter to a banquet at Hooper's Palm Parlours and during the evening he was presented with a handsome dressing case, the presentation being made by Mr. Adam Bell on behalf of the members, while Rev. H. R Trumpour made a neat speech, in which he eulogized Mr. Moore's services to the church and expressed regret at his departure. Brief speeches of the same tenor were made by Messrs. Greensted, Hall, Bell and Moffatt, and Mr. L. C. Playden enlivened the proceedings with several enjoyable songs.

On Wednesday night the J. W. Bell Memorial Lodge, No. 1175, of which Mr. Moore is financial secretary, presented him with a Royal Arch emblematic ring, while the following address was read:

Bro. N. A. Howard Moore.

Dear Sir and Bro.—The officers and members of L. O. L. No. 1175 having learned of your intended departure from our midst, desire to extend to you our best wishes for a bright future in your new field of labour.

We presume your work in connection with the Association has been a pleasure to you, else you would not have taken such an active part in the upbuilding and promoting of Protestant principles.

Although your connection with 1175 has not been as long as we would desire, yet, we have the assurance that by your untiring efforts, wherever you may be, you will still have the good of the Association at heart, and be ever ready to lend a helping hand or give us a word of cheer.

We fell that we could not say goodbye to you without showing, in some small way, our appreciation of your services in connection with this lodge. We, therefore ask you to accept this ring, and we sincerely hope you may be spared for many years to wear it, and that it may serve to bring to your memory the many pleasant evenings spent in 1175. Signed on behalf of the Lodge—H. C. Patterson, W. M.; H. Stenson, D.M.; R Farthing, Chap.; R Perry, Rec.-Sec.; H. Noyes, Fin.-Sec.

A number of Mr. Moore's young friends presented him with a steamer trunk and a pair of gold cuff links as a mark of their esteem.

CANADIAN MANUFACTURERS TO THE FRONT

That Canadians manufacture goods, which equal anything produced elsewhere, is now a fact generally admitted.

Some years ago, the Canadian manufacturer was inclined to concede superiority to foreign goods, and was quite willing to let buyers have the impression that his goods were imported.

All this has changed. Our manufacturers have jumped to the front. "Made in Canada," stands for quality; and the Canadian people as a whole have found by careful comparison, that goods made in our own country are quite as good in every way as anything bearing a foreign trade mark. To-day the Canadian manufacturer considers it an honour, as well as a mark of merit, to label his goods — "Made in Canada."

More than this, in some products, Canada has the proud distinction of producing something far superior to anything else in the world. One of these articles is Granulated Sugar refined from Cane Raws; and in a recent comparison it was shown that samples taken from the St. Lawrence Sugar Refinery in Montreal, were pronounced by experts as being as near perfection as possible, and of better colour and higher test than any other sugar produced. The St. Lawrence Sugar Refinery, although established for over thirty years, has one of the most modern plans in existence, a large amount of money having been spent during the past few years in putting in the most up-to-date machinery for sugar refining, the result being that this progressive firm now enjoys the reputation of producing the choicest sugar in the world. The name "St. Lawrence Sugar," is well known all over Canada. In these days when the cost of living is so high, owing to much higher prices for almost all food products, it is a very noticeable fact that sugar is one article which has been considerably reduced in price, although such a high standard of perfection has been attained.

TO-DAY'S MARKET

The market this morning was rather quiet, there being a fairly good supply of small produce, such as butter, eggs, etc. But the supply of larger foodstuffs, such as apples, potatoes, meat, etc., was rather poor, while the demand was brisk. There was a small quantity of maple syrup on hand, which sold for 40c per qt.

Butter—27 cents per lb.
Fresh eggs—18c per doz.
Potatoes—90c per bag.
Apples—35c peck.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

Miss A. C. Macdonald of Japan, who was to have addressed a public meeting to-morrow afternoon in St. Paul's Church, and a Drawing Room meeting on Tuesday afternoon, has been obliged, owing to overstrain, to cancel all engagements for the present. We hope later to again announce Miss Macdonald's coming.

Dr. Marsh has kindly offered to give a stereopticon lecture on his trip through Labrador. We trust a large number will plan to enjoy this evening in the Gymnasium Hall. The date is Friday evening, March 31st. A musical programme will also be given.

The Board meeting is called for Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

COMPROMISE HAS FAILED

Check Has Been Put on Tariff "Working Agreement" and the Fight Will be Bitter

DEMOCRATS DETERMINED

New York, March 25.—The Washington correspondent of The Tribune writes: Plans for arranging for a "working agreement," acceptable to both the Senate and the House, by which a definite program may be made out for the forthcoming session of Congress, have been brought to a halt, for the present at least, by the uncompromising attitude of the House Democrats, who are apparently averse to any understanding which will put a check on their legislative activities. One suggestion, attributed to Senator Drane, which coincides substantially with the ideas of President Taft, has been flatly rejected by them. This was to act on the reciprocity agreement and either leave tariff revision until the regular session beginning next December, or take up only such schedules as the tariff board may have reported on. There is now little hope for anything like an understanding between the two Houses. The Democratic representatives, to all appearances, have resolved to make campaign material, now that they have the opportunity, without regard to the fate in the Senate of such measures as they may pass.

The majority membership of the ways and means committee may go as far as it likes in revising the tariff, but that does not mean that the Senate is going to do likewise. Democratic Senators admit that it is impossible to predict what will happen when the House measures are sent over to them. They, too, have not been consulted by their party colleagues on the ways and means committee, and there is no one among them who is able at the present time to give assurance of what action may be taken. Not the least of the Democrats who have not been consulted is Champ Clark, the Speaker designate, who arrived yesterday prepared to remain until the close of the session. While the Democrats have been selecting their membership for the new committees he has been out in Missouri, and he admits that he has had only three letters in three weeks and does not know what has been happening or what is likely to happen. He is inclined to the belief that a working agreement would be a good thing provided one could be found that would work.

Will Keep It Dark.

Montreal, March 25.—In order to encourage municipalities throughout the province to report cases of smallpox within their confines, the Board of Health has agreed that in future no information will be given to the public of new victims.

Dr. Lachapelle, president of the Board, yesterday said that it had been found difficult to get municipalities to inform the authorities of new cases largely through dread of unfavorable publicity.

He added that the disease is of epidemic proportions on the north shore of the St Lawrence, below the Saguenay, and on the south side below Rimouski. He said, however, that while there are cases in the vicinity of Montreal, there is no cause for alarm, particularly where the precaution of vaccination has been taken.

New Viscount's Title.

London, March 25.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—War Secretary Haldane in becoming a peer takes the title of Viscount Haldane of Cloan, his Scottish estate.

Suffered Greatly From Heart Trouble.

NERVES WERE VERY WEAK.

Mrs. John Farrell, Rose Hill, P.E.I., writes:—"It is with the greatest of pleasure I write you stating the benefit I have received by using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

"About five years ago I suffered greatly from heart trouble, and my nerves were very weak. After seeing several doctors and using their medicine, I got no relief until a friend told me of your Heart and Nerve Pills. I took two boxes and they effected a complete cure. I can recommend them highly to all nervous and run down women.

"I have advised many others to try them and they have all been cured of the same trouble."

The proper action of the nerves, so important to the well-being of the heart, depends entirely upon the general condition of the nervous system. If there be nerve derangement of any kind, it is bound to produce heart derangement.

In Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills is combined a treatment that will cure all forms of nervous disorders, as well as act on the heart itself, and in this is the secret of their success in curing so many cases of heart and nerve trouble.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box, or 3 for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Capt. J. S. Allan of Port Dover died suddenly.

Two liquor detectives were assaulted at Trenton.

The Sheffield Choir landed at Halifax yesterday.

Mgr. Stagni, the new papal delegate, arrived at Ottawa.

Six firemen were killed and several injured in a fire at Milwaukee.

A Toronto woman was awarded $15,000 damages in a suit against the Toronto Railway Co.

The new C.P.R. building at King and Yonge streets, Toronto, will be sixteen stories high.

Warrants have been issued on three charges against J. Y. Murdock the absconding barrister of Jarvis.

A manager of Harrod's stores said a million and a half of dollars would be spent upon a store at Calgary.

Manufacturers and labor will be equally represented on the new advisory committee on technical education.

John Strange Walter Reeves, aged 100 years, died yesterday at his home in Tacoma, Wash. He was born on Oct. 18, 1810, in Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

A gang of roughs attacked Policeman Auger of Montreal and broke his law. Two other constables came to his assistance and there was a savage fight.

Mr. T. W. Crothers, M.P., speaking at Jarvis, made a personal attack on Hon. Messrs. Fielding and Paterson in connection with the reciprocity agreement.

President Taft has accepted the invitation to make the principal address before the Church Congress on April 25, when it opens its twenty-ninth annual meeting in Washington.

Frank Mitchell, a young man well known in Strathroy, was sentenced to three years in Kingston penitentiary yesterday for highway robbery. Last summer Mitchell robbed William Welch, who is partially paralyzed.

A Martyr to Science.

New York, March 25.—Dr. Raymond W. Brown, house doctor of the Hudson Street Hospital, it was learned yesterday, died of spinal meningitis Thursday within 24 hours of the appearance of the first symptom of the disease. His is the second death within a few days past of a physician who is believed to have contracted the dread disease through contact with the cases of infected Greek immigrants. Dr. Brown's death, following closely that of Dr. Edward F. Ashley, the bacteriologist on Swinburne Island, under similar conditions. Physicians could not remember a case of meningitis in which death had followed so quickly the appearance of the disease. Dr. Brown was 25 years old, and was a graduate of the University of Penna in the class of 1909.

How It Affects Them.

Providence, R.I., March 25.—Because of position action by Congress upon schedule K. of the Payne-Aldrich tariff law, it was announced by officials of the Greystone Woolen Mills yesterday, the wool sorters at that plant will not work on Saturday. The reduction in time will affect about sixty of the fifteen hundred operatives. The mill officials also announced that should the tariff be revised unfavorably, the mills and probably many others, will run on short time or close.

Tore Up the Track.

Welland, March 25.—Yesterday Rowland Tanner, a well-known citizen of Fonthill, was arrested charged with tearing up a portion of a Niagara, St. Catharines & Toronto Electric Railway spur, running to a gravel pit. The track runs over a portion of his farm. Tanner claims the road has no right there, and had considerable litigation over it. He was remanded for eight days, bail being refused.

Met Horrible Fate.

Elizabeth, N.J., March 25—His body covered by quicksand to a depth of several inches, which prevented discovery by searchers for the last 16 days, the body of John Donnell, 67 years old, was found accidentally. Indications are that he died in great agony while held a prisoner by the sand.

Many Canadian Creditors.

Boston, March 25.—A receiver was appointed yesterday for Dalong, Seaman & Co., one of the oldest commission firms of the city, dealing in Maine and Canadian products. The liabilities are $118,000, principally in this city and Halifax, N.S.

Stop All Fight Films.

Montreal, March 25.—Morality Inspector O'Keefe declared yesterday that having unearthed a bylaw which prohibits the exhibition of prize-fight pictures of any nature whatever he will at once take steps to put the ordinance in force throughout the city.

The Children's Aid Society, the inspector said, was responsible for the stopping of the exhibition of the Jeffries-Johnson fight films shown at the Theatre Royal this week, but other pictures were shown in their place which evidently did not come under the terms of the bylaw. These, however, Inspector O'Keefe says he will stop, too.

Senator Not Guilty of Bribery.

Springfield, Ill., March 25.—State Senator John Broderick was found not guilty by a jury in the Sangemon County Circuit Court yesterday. The jury was out twenty minutes. Broderick was charged with bribery in connection with the election of U. S. Senator William Lorimer.

WHAT IS TO FEAR?

Hon. Mr. Graham Discusses Reciprocity at Stratford—Says the Railways Know There is Nothing to Dread in Pact

THE LOYALTY CRY

Stratford, March 25.—Eight hundred people listened attentively, and with great enthusiasm, to addresses in favor of reciprocity here last night. The speakers were Hon. G. P. Graham, F. L. Fowke, M.P., Oshawa; Dr. J. P. Rankin, M.P. for North Perth, declared himself definitely as in favor of reciprocity as a proposition which will benefit the farmer, and through his prosperity all classes in Canada.

F. Wellington Hay of Listowel spoke very briefly along similar lines, urging that it was a national and not a political issue.

Mr. Fowke contended that Canada's prosperity has dated from the introduction of the Liberal finance policy of 1897. He challenged anyone to show one single instance in which any industry or class in Canada would be injured by the reciprocity pact, and declared that the opposition came only from a few monopolists in the big cities, who are using the Conservative party as its attorneys at Ottawa.

Hon. Geo. P. Graham said the idea of the past was "trade and get rich, just a little business matter between two countries, with benefits to both. To my Conservative friends I would say this—the present agreement is practically what Sir John A. Macdonald proposed in his national policy. Sir Wilfrid Laurier said he would never ask Washington for better trade relations, and he never has. Washington has asked him."

Mr. Graham, speaking of the effect on transportation, said: "The railways of Canada, deep down in their hearts, are not afraid of the pact." He instanced the record price of Canadian Pacific Railway stock, and the immense sums to be spent on railways in the west this year.

Increased population, he urged, must mean a large demand for manufactures, and hence the manufacturers will be benefited by reciprocity. Quality counts, and will preserve the identity and high price of Canadian cheese and bacon in the American market. He decried the favored nations objection and the loyalty cry as ridiculous and ungrounded, as well as cowardly. Canada must not be content to "let well enough alone."

Diaz Cabinet Resigns.

Mexico City, March 25.—The Diaz Cabinet resigned in a body at a special meeting of that Board yesterday. The President deferred action upon the resignations.

The reason given for the action in an official announcement is the belief that it will contribute towards the re-establishment of peace and facilitate the reforms which are in contemplation.

Enrique C. Creel, Minister of Foreign Relations, presented the resignations on behalf of all the Ministers. Gen. Diaz thanked the retiring members for their efficient and patriotic co-operation in the past, and announced that he would postpone his acceptance or rejection until later.

The resignations included that of Ramon Corral as Minister of the Department of Gobernacion, corresponding to the Department of the Interior in the United States, but not as vice-president.

Failed to Do the Work.

Cincinnati, March 25.—Imprisonment in the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kas., for three years and fines aggregating $1,000, was the sentence imposed yesterday upon W. P. Harrison, wealthy head of a mail order concern, in the U. S. District Court here yesterday. Harrison was found guilty upon all seven counts of two indictments, alleging that he advertised and sold through the mails a vacuum carpet cleaner and a washing machine, neither of which would do the work required of it.

The trial lasted more than four weeks and cost the Government thousands of dollars to bring witnesses here from all parts of the country.

Member of Canadian Contingent Dead

Brockville, March 25.—The death occurred here yesterday of Henry Winford, aged 33 years. Shortly before the close of the Boer war, he was a member of the last contingent sailing from Canada, and upon arriving at Cape Town, found that hostilities had ceased. Winford was at one time an active athlete and a member of the Old Bohemian war canoe crew that won Canadian and international honors. For four years he was a member of the Royal Canadian Regiment, and was stationed at Stanley Barracks, Toronto, and Wolseley Barracks, London.

Gaynor Now Free.

Atlanta, Ga., March 25.—John F. Gaynor, who, with B. D. Greene, served terms in the federal prison here for participation in the Savannah harbor improvement frauds, was allowed to take the pauper's oath late yesterday afternoon and was released from custody. This procedure clears him of the necessity of paying the $575,000 fine imposed in addition to the prison sentence. Greene was released under similar procedure on Wednesday.

Just Like Ontario.

Winnipeg, March 25.—With the minimum of publicity, the closing hours of both the Manitoba and Saskatchewan Legislatures have been characterised by a salary grab of $500 for each legislator. Manitoba led the way and the press was supposed to say little about it. Next day came the report of a one-hundred dollar boost for the Saskatchewan legislators, but on investigation it appears to be five hundred. They will all now draw about $1,500 for five or six weeks' arduous labor.

WILL SEND ULTIMATUM.

Russia Is at End of Her Patience With China.

St. Petersburg, March 25.—Russia is on the point of addressing to China an ultimatum fixing a date for entire satisfaction of her demands.

The Chinese replies to Russia's successive notes dealing with the demands of Russia in Mongolia have been described by the Chinese Government as conciliatory, but the text in each case has been unsatisfactory to Russia because it has evaded the points at issue.

The last Chinese note received by the Russian Government consents to the establishment of a consul at Kobdo, whereas Russia actually demanded its location at Shirasumo, to which place the Chinese transferred the administrative seat of the district. The Chinese reply also attempts to limit Russia's rights to trade to articles of foreign origin, whereas the treaty specifies that Russia's right in this respect extends to merchandise of any origin and coming from any country.

This reply in effect also denies the right of the Russians to trade in tea, which is one of Russia's most important contentions. It also proposes to place Russian tradesmen on equal conditions with the natives. This would subject Russians to taxes and imposts not contemplated by the treaty.

The Nevoe Vremya in a leading article which betrayed their irritation of the Government, accuses the Chinese of mockery and demands that an ultimatum with a fixed term for its satisfaction be sent to China.

London, March 25.—Private cables received by London business houses from representatives in the Far East yesterday were disquieting. They assert that it is expected that Russia will soon declare war against China.

The rate at Lloyd's to cover risks on the outbreak of hostilities within four weeks jumped yesterday afternoon from five to ten guineas per cent.

Captain Dead: Ship Lost.

Honolulu, March 25.—With her captain dead and mourned by his widow in the cabin, a scanty supply of food on board, and without a correct reckoning of her position, the American barkentine James Johnson was sighted flying signals of distress 160 miles off this port by the steamer Persia, which arrived yesterday from Hong Kong.

A boat from the Persia was sent to board the almost helpless vessel, the officers of which reported that Captain Carl Jensen died of heart failure on Jan. 13, that the ship's bearings had been lost, and that the stock of provisions was almost exhausted.

After the barkentine's larder had been replenished by the Persia, and her first mate informed of the latitude, the acting commander decided to proceed to Honolulu unaided.

The James Johnson has on board a cargo of coal from Newcastle, N.S.W., consigned to San Francisco. She is owned by the Charles Nelson Co. of that city, and carried a crew of about 25 men.

Insurance Fraud Miscarries.

San Francisco, March 25.—Dr. L. C. Chisholm, a physician of this city, was arrested here yesterday in connection with the death of J. D. Powell, an aged man whose body was found in a tent near Fort Ross, Sonora County, several weeks ago. Powell had been shot. The arrest was the result of an investigation by Sheriff Smith of Sonora County.

A card found near the tent contained the name and address of a San Francisco woman, whose identity is being withheld by the police. Sheriff Smith interviewed this woman, and says she told him Chisholm had declared that if she would pose as a widow, he would produce a corpse and collect a large sum of life insurance.

Stolypin Will Stay.

St. Petersburg, March 25.—Premier Stolypin, who last Monday sent in his resignation, has agreed to remain in office and the Cabinet crisis therefore is at an end.

An imperial decree issued yesterday suspends M Trepoff and M. Dernovo, members of the Council of Empire, from all sittings of the council until January, 1912. M. Stolypin had insisted on the removal of these reactionary opponents of his policy as the price for his retaining office, and it is understood that it was the negotiations of this point that led to a prolongation of the Cabinet crisis.

A Quadruple Entente?

Washington, March 25—Negotiations for the quadruple entente, to include the United States, England, Japan and France, to put an end to war between nations, has progressed so far that the agreement has already been put into written form. It was learned yesterday that a draft of the proposed abolition of war treaty is already in the hands of the British Foreign Office and Baron Uchida, the Japanese ambassador, while Ambassador Robert Bacon is taking a copy to France. The original draft remains in the keeping of President Taft.

Fatally Injured.

Sault Ste. Marie, March 25.—H. Milton, 40 years of age, of North Bay, and employed at the C.P.R. round house, was fatally injured yesterday morning at 9.15 and taken to the general hospital, where he will die. Milton was walking up the track to the round house and was struck by the transfer engine. His leg was severed and he sustained other injuries of a serious nature. Milton has a family at North Bay.

Six Burned to Death.

Lille, France, March 25.—Six persons were burned to death yesterday in a fire which destroyed a motion picture theatre. There were many women among the spectators. Panic followed the outbreak of fire and in the rush for exist many were knocked down and trampled.

Strike Declared Off.

Washington, March 25.—Representatives of the conductors, firemen and locomotive engineers on the Cincinnati, New Orleans & Texas Pacific Railway, who have been striking because negro firemen are alleged to have been given preferred runs on the road, reached a tentative basis of settlement with the railway through the national mediation board yesterday.

Four Horses Drowned.

Port Elgin, March 25.—Four valuable horses were drowned yesterday in Mill Creek, near this place. A team belonging to P. Cummings, hauling a load of logs, broke through the ice and the same fate befell a team owned by Dr. Parks, who drove on to pull the other horses out. Parks had sold his team for $550, a delivery to be made to-day.

Died of Blood Poisoning.

Galt, March 25.—John Nichols of Hespeler died at the Galt Hospital yesterday of blood poisoning. A week ago he had his hand cut while at work, but did not consider it serious enough to call in a doctor. Blood poisoning set in and resulted fatally.

Quick Justice.

Niagara Falls, Ont., March 25.—Within fifteen minutes after he returned to the city, Fred Moffatt, charged by his mother-in-law, Mrs. Ada Cushman, with assault, was arrested yesterday, pleaded guilty before Magistrate Fraser and was sentenced to 30 days in Welland Jail.

Powder Merger.

Montreal, March 25.—Official confirmation was yesterday given to the proposed consolidation of the interests of the Standard Explosives, the Hamilton Powder, and the Ontario Powder companies.

William McMaster, the president of the new corporation, which is to be known as Canadian Explosives, Limited, declared yesterday that the capitalization of the concern will be $3,750,000, and that the head office will be in Montreal, the Standard Explosives having moved over from their old quarters in the Board of Trade building to those formally occupied by the Hamilton Powder Co. in the Canadian Pacific Telegraph Co.'s building. F. H. Langford of Montreal is treasurer of the company, and H. B Brainard is secretary.

Cornwall House of Refuge.

Cornwall, March 25.—The House of Refuge committee of the counties council has accepted the plans of A. L. Weeks of Ottawa, subject to certain modifications arranged for by the committee. The estimated cost is within the $40,000 fixed by the counties council. The building will be largely modelled on the lines of the Belleville House of Refuge, with some changes suggested by the officials of that institution, which their experience has shown them would be an improvement. It has been practically decided to build on concrete blocks, but tenders will be called for both brick and concrete. The building will be made thoroughly fireproof.

Bold Diamond Robber.

Chicago, March 25.—More than $2,000 worth of diamonds and jewelry as stolen in a bold robbery in the loop district early yesterday. A thief with the use of a glass cutter and a piece of bent wire "fished" thirteen diamond rings and other valuables out of the show window of Le Bolt & Co., jewelers, in the Palmer House, after he had cut a section out of the glass.

More Local Option.

Kingston, March 25.—At a temperance convention here it was decided to institute a campaign for local option in Kingston and the three townships in Frontenac, which are not under liquor license law. The vote will be taken at the municipal elections in 1912.

THE HOLDS USED BY THE BIG WRESTLERS

Favourite Methods of Prominent Grapplers Being Copied by Amateurs---Gotch Sticks to His Old Style---Different Scissors Developed.

Contrasted with boxing, wrestling has proved through the last few months that matches are often won with a great variety of holds, whereas boxing matches are generally won by a limited number of well-known punches. The favourite methods of attack of the different prominent grapplers have become familiar this winter and are being copied by the amateurs. Perhaps the combination of locks that wins the most matches is a crotch and front nelson, which usually begins with an inside leg hold and a half nelson. Every one of the wrestlers usually resorts to these tactics wherever it is possible, and the majority of matches are won with holds above the wrist.

George Hackenschmidt, in the last two months, has been very successful in the development of the toe-hold with its extreme leverage on the knee and thigh. Hackenschmidt also employs the hammerlock freely and is remarkably successful at it. In some instances, he has earned falls with a double hammerlock, and is also exceptionally strong on the bar-arms and the arm locks.

Gotch's Style Unchanged.

Gotch's style has remained substantially unchanged. The champion has won the majority of his matches by his ability to keep his adversary out of plumb. In other words he succeeds in making the other fellow so extremely busy trying to right himself that he never gets quite ready to wrestle. Gotch has maintained his speed and skill throughout the season—although he was not in good condition from the wrestling point of view when he again went on the mat in January. Working on the farm was right, so far as keeping the big wrestler in health and strength went, but pitching hay and operating farm machinery did not give his long wrestling muscles any exercise. Gotch was off the mat for a period of nine months, and it took at least six weeks of good hard work in the arena to put him back in form. This fact may have had considerable to do with the failure to bring Gotch and Hackenschmidt together. The foreigner had the advantage of two months' work over the champion, and by the time Gotch was shaping up again, Hackenschmidt was in the hardest and best condition.

Scissors Holds.

The employment of the different scissors holds seems to have been relegated very largely to the middleweight and welterweight classes. Such grapplers as the Mysterious Conductor and Walter Walter Willoughby are prolific in the use of their legs in the execution of a great variety of locks. It may be assumed that those smaller men have greater speed than any of the big men could hope to have. The headlock and its twin, the chancery, have not gone out of vogue, and are employed by a number of wrestlers. The closing of the season demonstrates above all things the kindness of fate toward the rough contingent, such as Leo Pardello and the Mysterious Waffles. It is a marvel that they succeed in getting away without broken bones or cracked spines. The advent of so many amateurs in the professional square has brought about a casualty list greater than that of any other season for many years. A number of deaths have been of frequent occurrence. Ambition has usually been back of most of these results, and the younger wrestlers do not seem to be able to distinguish between the desire to gain ascendancy and the years of long, careful training actually necessary to make them proficient.

The Heavyweight Division.

The last few months have brought into prominence the members of the light heavyweight division, such as Beell, Lemm, and Americus. The heavyweight class has the greater number of representatives, and it is to be noted that among the best are the foreigners, Zbyszko, Hackenschmidt and Mahmout form the triumvirate of European stars who compare favourably with the three best Americans in the game. There have been a great many other foreigners that have worked on American mats since last fall, and several of these are good. There are a half-dozen Turks in the country at this time who are able to give a good account of themselves — and there are also several Germans who have given the Americans all they could handle.

HILLIARD LANG BEAT WILDFONG VERY EASILY

HAMILTON, MARCH 24. — The long-awaited contest between Hilliard Lang and Clayton Wildfong came off to-night before 1,200 fight fans in the Britannia Rink. "Hot-Spur" McBride, the third man in the ring, stopped the bout, which was scheduled for ten rounds, at the end of the sixth, in which Wildfong was on the floor twice. Chief Smith and Deputy Chief Whatley attended, with many officers, but there was no interference. It was a good, clean exhibition all through, but Wildfong claimed to be in poor condition, a growth developing in his nose last week, and as a result he made a poor showing. Lang was in fine shape and played fast and loose with Wildfong. The result was practically a knockout, but did not go that far in the decision. Wildfong showed his usual form three or four times in attempts to put over his famous hay-makers. He hit Lang four effective blows and got about fifty in return.

In the last three-round preliminaries between Hayslip and Smith and Britton and Lowe there were no decisions. "Hot-spur" introduced Mike (Twin) Sullivan and Paddy Lavin, of Buffalo, to the spectators.

BOY SCOUTS TO WAGE WAR ON THE YEGGMEN

NEW YORK, MARCH 23.—Daniel C. Beard, National Scout Commissioner of the Boy Scouts of America, and the originator of the Boy Pioneers and the Sons of Daniel Boone, which helped clear the way for the development of the Boy Scout movement, has devised a means by which the boys throughout the country can make a systematic war upon yeggmen and hoboes who molest housewives, and rob homes. He is doing this by teaching the boys the secret signs of the yegg fraternity, so that the boys may know them and tell what the mystical marks on fences, houses and other buildings mean. By making the secrets of the tramps common knowledge Beard hopes to destroy the communication between the tramps and thus prevent them from doing so much harm.

Beard not only studied the signs of the hoboes, but has gone back through the ages tracing the signs of different nations and studying their meaning even to the hieroglyphics of the Egyptians. He took special interest in this work when preparing to illustrate Mark Twain's book named "A Yankee in King Arthur's Court." Beard says that many of the yeggs signs can be traced back to ancient Egypt. He has learned the meaning of the majority of those signs which can be found on gate posts, barns and fences. By those signs the yeggmen communicates information about the house marked to their fellow-men who follow along the same path. Beard says that there are signs indicating whether the housewife is kind and whether it is easy to rob the house.

As Beard has learned these signs and can decipher them, he has arranged to teach them to the boys, and it is probable that in the New Manual of the Boy Scouts of America he will have several pages devoted to these symbols and their meanings. If the boys learn them they can read the messages of the hoboes along the public highways. If the signs are dangerous to people the boys can rub them off and warn the police. All this means that the secrecy of the hoboes will be destroyed, thanks to Beard and the energy of the Boy Scouts of America. It means that if the hoboes wish to continue their symbolistic communications, they must work out new signs and this would take years.

"Bronchitis"

This is an acute inflammation of the mucous membrane lining the air tubes in the lungs.

The disease begins with a tightness across the chest, difficulty of breathing, hoarseness, and there is a dry, harsh, croupy cough.

After a few days mucous begins to be raised. This is at first white, but later of a greenish or yellowish color and is occasionally streaked with blood.

Cure the first symptoms of Bronchitis by the use of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup and thus prevent it becoming chronic and perhaps turning to Consumption.

Mrs. D. J. McCormack, Cleveland, N.S., writes: "My little boy, two years old, caught a bad cold which developed into Bronchitis. He was so choked up he could hardly breathe. Reading about your wonderful medicine, Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, I decided to try a bottle, and with such good result I got another which completely cured him, without having a doctor. I cannot say too much in its praise and would not be without it in the house as I consider it a sure cure for Colds and Bronchitis.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents.

SPORTING NOTES

Mr. Billy Breen, trainer of the Peterborough Hockey Club, has returned to the city after an absence of several weeks. He has been engaged in securing some material for some boxing exhibitions, which may be seen in Peterborough in the course of a few weeks.

BASEBALL

Many are called but few are chosen
In the springtime of the year;
Warmest hopes sometimes are frozen
When official lists appear.
Wonders are they when recruited;
Wonders in the time of peace,
Wonders still until they're booted;
That's the way that wonders cease.

MARKET REPORTS.

LIVERPOOL, March 24.—Less favorable reports from Russia received after the close yesterday caused support at opening and checked the extremely bearish sentiment. Following the opening prices further declined ¼c, with the undertone heavy. Argentine shipments were heavy, and larger in excess of the forecast, with large shipments from Australia and prediction that the world's shipments other than America will show in excess of 3,000,000 bushels over last week or 12,400,000 bushels and heavy shipments from India. The Buenos Ayres market at the close was heavy.

CHICAGO, March 24.—Depression was the rule to-day in every pit on the board. World shipments of wheat more than 7 per cent. greater than a year ago, forced down the price of that cereal and affected all the other leading staples. Net losses were as follows: Wheat, ⅝c to ⅞c; corn, ¼c to ⅜c to ½c; oats, ⅛c to ⅜c to ½c, and provisions, 12½c to 47½c.

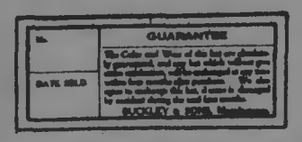
BUT if it happens to be a Buckley, he can get another without it costing him a cent.

You've seen "guarantees" before—but you never yet heard of a hat guarantee that guaranteed the owner even against accident.

Here's one that does—the sweeping Buckley guarantee—provides for such cases as that shown in the picture — provides for a new hat within 4 months from date of purchase, if, for any reason — accident or otherwise — your Buckley hat has not in every sense "stood the racket." Read carefully the broad, all-embracing guarantee.



Why, you ask, should the guarantee be made so far-reaching?

Well, in the first place, the makers of the "Buckley" have absolute confidence in their product—they feel sure it will give satisfaction in 999 cases out of 1,000.

But there's always that thousandth man—even he must be satisfied.

And, in order that he may get a new Buckley hat from any Buckley dealer, without having to answer questions or give a lengthy explanation, it has been thought well to provide that, whatever his reason, if the Buckley he's been wearing has not lasted four months, it will be cheerfully, promptly, unquestioningly exchanged

Don't let this remarkable guarantee feature of the Buckley overshadow the style pre-eminence of these hats. The quality is English, but the styles are American and up-to-the-minute. There's a Buckley shape to suit every type of man.

Buckley hats are made by Union workmen—there's high grade material and honest workmanship in every hat that bears the Buckley name. Price, $2.50, at all the best hat shops.

EXHIBITION AT THE Y.M.C.A. WAS A GREAT SUCCESS

A very pleasant evening was spent at the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium closing evening when a large number of the parents and friends of the boys were treated to an evening's entertainment, which largely represented the work that the boys have been getting from day to day throughout the winter months. Great credit is due the boys for the clever way in which they handled themselves. Also to Mr. J. J. Thompson for the thoroughness of the work and the snappy way in which one group followed up the other. The camp scene was well arranged and made one think of the good old summer time. The programme around the camp fires was of the order that does not allow a restless feeling to exist. The Salvation Army Band added greatly to the entertainment all through.

The presentation of prizes won last summer and fall, and the other indoor event prizes was performed by Mr. J. J Turner, jr., during which he congratulated the boys and their energetic physical director on the result of their efforts. Following is the programme

Camp Scene .....
German Horse and Spring Board—Business boys
Exhibition Parallel Bars — Junior Leaders.
Exhibition—Members of Wrestling Club.
Presentation of Trophies and Prizes by the President, Mr. J. J. Turner, Jr.
Dumbbell Drill—Junior class.
German Horse—Intermediate Leaders.
Games .....
Tumbling—Junior Boys.
Elephant Jump—Collegiate Class.
God Save the King.

A BUSY SEASON

St. John's Junior Auxiliary Has Done Good Work

The final meeting of St. John's Junior Auxiliary was held on Friday last, when the bale was packed and despatched. The season has been a very busy one. An idea of the work may be gleaned from the annual report.

Two outfits for an Indian girl; $5 for missionary children; $5 Lytton Hospital cot; $5 Japanese Kindergarten; $5 Dr Archer's Hospital, Bengal; $5 Bishop White's Girls School Honan, China; $20 Toronto Diocesan Mission.

Twenty-eight meetings were held and Mrs. W. E. Conway, Superintendent, gratfully acknowledges valuable help throughout the season from Mrs. R. J. Devey, and Mrs. W. Common and to Mrs. E. B. Clegg, Mrs Nesbitt, Mrs Morphett, and Mrs Crowe for kindly help for the Christmas Sale; also to all those who in any way supported the Juniors in their work.

FORMER PETERBORO' PREACHER MAKES A SOMEWHAT STARTLING REQUEST

Rev. Dr. Symonds, Formerly of St. Luke's Church, Asks His Congregation for One Hundred Square Inches of Human Skin to Save Life.

THIRTY VOLUNTEER

Special to The Examiner.

MONTREAL, MARCH 27.—Rev. Dr. Herbert Symonds, of Christ church cathedral, made a rather startling request last night from the pulpit for one hundred square inches of human skin necessary for a grafting operation to save the life of a man terribly burned by falling on a red hot stove while trying to fix a stove pipe. He said that if thirty members of the congregation gave up their skin it would be sufficient. Thirty members volunteered.

CAN BE NO WAR

China Must Accept Ultimatum From Russia

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, ENG., MARCH 27. — The Daily Graphic points out this morning that China cannot honourably accept a declaration of war with Russia or allow hostilities to go on without reference immediately to the Hague Tribunal, In other words, China must accept Russia's ultimatum, and there can be no war.

TWO KILLED IN EXPLOSION

Special to The Examiner:

MANCHESTER, N. H., MARCH 27. —Two were killed and seven injured by an explosion of a steam pipe in a factory here this morning.

TO CURE A HEADACHE

The experience of Mr. O. Barber, Simcoe, Ont., is of interest to all who suffer from headaches. He writes: "For a long time I was troubled with headaches which came on about once a week with such violence that I could not eat or do my work. Headache powders and quick cures did me no good. I then used six boxes of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food and have not been troubled with headache since. That was eight months ago."

Is Dying In Prison

Woman Alleged to Have Killed Husband Refuses to Eat

Special to The Examiner:

CHICAGO, ILL., MARCH 27.—Mrs. Theresa Schenk, a former Hamilton girl, who is alleged to have killed her husband at Parkridge, is dying in prison, according to Coroner Hoffman. He says she hasn't eaten anything, or slept naturally since arrested. The life insurance companies have declined to pay the claims on policies held by Mrs. Schenk on her husband's life.

OTHER DANGEROUS FIRE TRAPS IN NEW YORK

Fire Chief Croker Discusses Saturday's Terrible Accident---Building By-law is Deficient---Authorities Talk of Arrests but Nothing has Been Done.

Special to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, MARCH 27. — Fire Chief Croker is out this morning with the statement that several large office buildings and factories in Gotham are just as dangerous fire traps as the structure in which nearly one hundred shirt waist workers lost their lives Saturday afternoon. The building inspector and others were busy this morning placing blame on somebody else for the disaster. It seems now that the buildings by-law is deficient. The coroner and district attorneys are talking of arrests, but nothing definite has been done.

Thought He Was Defending City From Insurrectos Engineer Goes Insane

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, ONT., MARCH 27.—Under the impression that he was defending the city against the Mexican insurrectos, John D. Stafford, an engineer 45 years of age, and a South African veteran of Montreal, ran amuck and shot at Albert Arnold, a Grand Trunk engineer and Melville McLeod. One bullet tore through McLeod's coat and overcoat a quarter of an inch from his throat. Stafford was remanded to-day. He is 45 years of age and has a wife and seven children.

Ratepayers in West End of City Enthusiastically Support Independent Tire Company By-law---Sub-Committees Have Been Appointed.

A meeting of the West Ward committee in connection with the by-law for the Independent Tire Company, was held on Saturday evening. Mr. Elliott, chairman of the committee in the chair.

The merits of the By-law, of which all the members of the committee are enthusiastic, believing it to be in the best interests of the city, if it carries, were discussed. The following sub-committees were appointed for the five divisions in the West Ward, the first named in each of the committees is chairman of it:

Division No. 10—Mr. Williams, Mr. Christopher, Mr. Downie, Mr. Hodgson, C. Huffman.

Division No. 11—Peter Campbell, R. Neill, Ald. Brown, H. W. Morphett, Ex-Ald. J. J. Duffus.

Division No 12—A. McFarlane, Mr. Galbraith, T. H. G. Denne, A. H. Stratton, Mr. Harstone, W. C. Austin.

Division No. 13.—R. Hicks, D. O'Connell, Jos. Batten, W. H. Denham, Dr. McNulty, W. R. Travers.

These gentlemen are looking after their several divisions and enlisting the services of all those in favour of the by-law. They would like to meet any who may not be in sympathy with it, in order that the details of the proposition may be placed before them for consideration.

A WEDDING GIFT FROM SIR WILFRID LAURIER

Mr. Johnston Paudash Brings Back Present From the Premier—Has Been on Official Business at Ottawa.

WELL RECEIVED

Mr. Johnston Paudash, a well-known resident of Hiawatha, was in the city to-day on his way home from Ottawa, where he has spent a week in official business in connection with the rights of the Indian people of Hiawatha. Mr. Paudash had interviews with Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon. Frank Oliver, the Minister of the Interior, and Mr. Peddlar, the Deputy Minister of the Interior. The Premier presented Mr. Paudash with a very handsome silver tea set, as a wedding gift. Mr. Paudash is to claim as his bride, in the near future, Miss Florence Johnston, daughter of Chief Johnston, of Scugog. From the Minister of the Interior and his deputy, Mr. Johnston states that he received courteous and generous treatment, and his people will appreciate very much the way in which they are being looked after by the authorities.

HAND OF IMPROVEMENT UNCOVERS THE PAST

In the course of the renovation of the premises lately occupied by Mr. Adam Hall, 407 George street, to prepare them for occupation by Mr. C. M. Moneur, druggist, the removal of the "Adam Hall" sign revealed on the beam, over the doorway, the legend "Pharmic Store Works". This takes the old citizen back to the eleven years previous, to 1887, during which time the late Thomas Lannin carried on business at the old stand. The sign was covered over in 1887, when Mr. Adam Hall, established the business that was conducted at 407 George street till he retired from the retail business to enter into manufacturing on Bethune street

A FAMOUS BICYCLIST

Mr. Jas. Thompson Visits His Home After an Absence of Nine Years.

After an absence from home of 9 years, Mr. Jas. Thompson, son of Mr. Peter Thompson, city plumbing inspector, paid a flying visit to his parents here on Friday night. Mr. Thompson is a trick bicyclist of the first rank and has just completed a tour of the world, returning to Ameross a short time ago. He was one of the head-liners in the bill at Shea's in Toronto last week, under his professional name. His visit home was only for a few hours, a matter of much regret as he has many friends here who would have been delighted with the opportunity of renewing acquaintances.

CHANGE NAME

Forget's Bank May be Known as the General Bank of Canada.

Special wire to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, MARCH 27. — It is expected when the bill for the incorporation of Forget's Bank comes before the Commons this afternoon a compromise will be reached whereby the title objected to by the Finance Minister "The Bank of Canada," will be changed to the General Bank of Canada or some such name. There will surely be a fight over the Commee bill representing Ontario and Minnesota Power Company on the score of provincial rights, as the Ontario government says its powers are being illegally used.

THIS ONE IS ON US

But, as usual, we blame the man who sets the type. The item was made to read "$150 to $2.50," where it should have read "A saving of $150 to $200" on every course in stenography is effected by the 30-day Syllabic Shorthand method, copyrighted by the Moon College, 282-286 Yonge street, Toronto. This error would have been apparent, had he, for a moment, stopped to realize that not only are the fees reduced by one-half, but the length of study is reduced by from four to five months, and the student thereby earns a salary just this much earlier than under any other system.

LICENSE TRANSFER

Mr. Samuel Long Will Re-open the Old Peterborough House.

The License Commissioners of West Peterborough met this morning and granted the transfer of license from Mrs. George Long of the American House to Mr. Sam Long, who will remove to the old Peterborough House, formerly occupied by Mr. Jas. Head — on the opposite side of the street from the present premises where the license is now held. Mr. Long will make some improvements, bringing it up to the standard desired by the Commissioners.

SLOW, BUT SURE.

Englishmen and English manufacturers are often derided as slow; but they are sure. The Grand Trunk Railway Company are replacing several miles of fifty-six pound rails, laid in 1869, more than forty years ago. After that length of service the rails are in good condition, and are to be re-laid on sidings, but they are found to be too light for the extremely heavy traffic that modern conditions have developed. These rails were manufactured in England, and the stamp on an article, "Made in England," is an indication of first-class quality, in material and workmanship. There is some difference in those rails and some others. A despatch a month or two ago, told of one journey of the Halifax-Montreal express, resulting in the breaking of sixty-three American-made rails. The English motto seems to be, "what is worth doing, is worth doing well"; this takes time, but if it earns a reputation for slowness it is well worth while in ultimate satisfaction.

BERLIN VOTES RECIPROCITY.

On Friday night a mass meeting was held in the busy manufacturing town of Berlin to discuss reciprocity, and the following resolution, to the effect that reciprocity would be a good thing for everybody—the farmer, manufacturer and consumer — was passed almost unanimously:

Whereas, the proposed reciprocal agreement with the United States will secure wider and more stable markets for the natural products of the Dominion and prove a benefit to those engaged in all kinds of agriculture industries.

And whereas, under the proposed agreement this result will be obtained without disturbance to the manufacturing interests of the country.

And whereas the proposed agreement is not in the nature of a treaty, which is binding irrespective of results, but leaves Canada free to legislate independently, in respect of any details in which the working of the agreement may be found unsatisfactory and in such manner as may seem most expedient in the interests of all classes.

And whereas increased industrial development means more favourable conditions for consumer as well as producers, for wage earners as well as employers.

This meeting, composed of manufacturers, farmers, workingmen, business and professional men, and therefore representative of all interests, heartily endorses the proposed reciprocal agreement as calculated to further enhance the industrial and commercial development of the Dominion to the advantage of all concerned.

This is another evidence that the more the agreement is discussed with a sincere desire to understand it and its bearing upon the country, the more it commends itself to popular favour.

"TIN-POT" LOYALTY.

Hon. V. B. Morine has been talking on patriotism, and says in regard to Canadian patriotism that it is only "skin deep." While he made the application of his remark general, he must have had in mind some of the bed-horn patriots of his own party, the Conservative party, who mistake patriotism for argument, and who talk as if they had all the loyalty extant. Speaking before the Sons of England on Friday night in Toronto, on "Imperialism, Mr. Morine is reported as saying:

"Who pays for the Empire?" "who pays for the army and navy and the flag of which we boast? Our share is to shelter ourselves in its folds, without cost to ourselves. The difference is that the Englishman pays and does not talk, while we talk and don't pay. We take a parochial view of Imperial questions; our patriotism is not more than skin deep—it never gets through our clothes into our pocket. We have recently been treated to an exhibition of this Canadian public spirit, in the utterly selfish appeal which has been made to the commercial instinct in a particular class. We in Canada have certainly done nothing to justify our title to the so-called Imperial spirit."

If this is to apply to Canada, an exception should be made of the action the Dominion of Canada has taken in relieving Great Britain of a part of the burden of defence, as represented by the establishment of a Canadian navy in cooperation with the Imperial navy and the maintenance of an effective and expensive militia. We have done some little in helping straighten out the South African tangle. We have shown something more than mouth loyalty by giving the Mother Country a preference in our markets. While we have done, and are doing, these things, it seems that we can better help and serve the imperial cause by using the main part of our enterprise in pushing a vigorous policy of development of our resources, so that we may from year to year, become, to a greater degree, the Imperial Commissariat department, the granary of the Empire, becoming a country to which, in time, Great Britain can look, in common with other dominions beyond the seas, for her food supply, when possible international conditions may shut her out from other sources.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The yellow journals manufactured the Japanese-United States war scare, the Mexican war scare; they largely manufactured, or magnified the German war scare—to kill the Canadian Navy bill, and now to try to kill the reciprocity agreement they have manufactured the annexation scare.

It is said by some speculative journalists that Hon. Mr. Sifton is looking foward to the leadership of the Conservative Opposition. There will have to be a good deal of talk taken back before he can feel at home on the left of the speaker. Not long ago the Conservative party to a man railed upon Mr. Sifton as the "bad man" of the Liberal party. Possibly the reasoning, may be that a bad liberal is good enough to be a good Conservative.

The $320,000 voted in Parliament on Friday to provide seed grain to give beginners at farming a start in the West, if distributed to those who will make proper use of the privilege, is a good investment. If a bushel of seed yields fifteen bushels of crop, the result would be an addition of nearly five million bushels to the wheat production of the West, which at 75 cents a bushel, means a value of a million and a quarter. Pretty good interest from a national point of view.

The fog-horn patriots represent the reciprocity agreement as an equivalent to hurling Canada into the jaws of the United States, greedily gaping for our reception. It looks if the United States were as little anxious for annexation as Canada. The press of the United States, practically without exception, is condemning President Taft's action of massing troops on the Mexican border, and the reasons against given show that the United States people want to be just to Mexico and have no designs on her territory.

A STANDING INVITATION.

(Toronto Star.)

In an article in the Canadian Century, Prof. Leacock says:

Ever since the Republic was founded we have had extended to us a standing invitation to throw in our lot with the independent community to the south of us. The Articles of Confederation drawn up in 1777 contained this information, drawn up as a formal and standing clause of the agreement which was afterwards remodeled to make the constitution of the United States. I am not aware that in the course of American history this attitude has ever been renounced, or this original invitation (extended to us, be it granted, in a spirit of all friendliness) has ever been rescinded.

We do not see how the United States could have rescinded this invitation in a more specific way than by omitting it in the regular constitution which superseded the hastily drawn articles to which Prof. Leacock refers. These articles were drawn in the midst of a war, in which the United States hoped to secure Canada as an ally. They were not regarded as satisfactory by the statesmen of the Union. Prof. Bryce says of the plan: "It worked badly, even while the struggle lasted, and after the immediate danger from England had been removed by the peace of 1783 it worked still worse, and was, in fact, as Washington said, no better than anarchy." Why does Prof. Leacock rest his case upon a document that was discredited and discarded? It was superseded by a constitution which was drawn up at leisure and carefully weighed by the ablest American statesmen of the time. The constitution contained no such invitation as Prof. Leacock refers to. It was amended from time to time, but by no amendment was the invitation rescinded. How can this discarded lumber be treated as "a standing invitation?"

An Illuminating Contrast Between United States And Canadian Prices

There are few men better qualified to discuss reciprocity from a farmer's point of view than Mr. Kohler, the representative of Haldimand in the Legislative Assembly.

Mr. Kohler is a large dealer in cattle, and in that capacity is not only brought into close touch with the farmers of this section of the country, but he is also more observant than most men of the relative prices of live stock and farm produce on both sides of the boundary line.

	Toronto Per.	Buffalo Per.
1904 October	$4 50	$6 00
November	4 75	5 80
December	5 60	7 00
1905 October	6 00	7 70
November	5 80	7 75
December	6 15	7 65
1906 October	6 25	7 90
November	6 10	7 25
December	6 40	7 80
1907 October	5 60	6 00
November	5 35	6 15
December	5 50	6 35
1908 October	5 25	6 00
November	5 35	7 00
December	5 75	7 35
1909 October	5 75	6 90
November	5 85	7 30
December	6 60	8 35

Mr. Kohler next dealt with hogs, showing the relation of the two markets from March, 1908, to the present time. These figures, he said showed the highest prices for each month in each market, and in only three instances was Toronto as high as Buffalo the difference in some instances running to over $1 per cwt.

As to butcher cattle, the average prices in Buffalo and Toronto markets are given as follows:

	Toronto Per.	Buffalo Per.
1908 October	$4 45	$5 35
November	4 30	5 45
December	4 85	6 35
1909 January	4 60	6 38
February	4 80	6 55
March	5 10	6 40
April	5 30	5 90
May	5 55	6 25
June	5 80	6 40
July	5 25	6 10
August	4 75	6 20
September	4 85	6 00
October	4 85	6 00
November	5 00	6 25
December	5 00	6 25
1910 January	5 55	6 15
February	5 65	6 40
March	5 80	7 10
April	6 45	7 85
May	6 40	6 40
June	6 45	7 45
July	6 35	7 00
August	5 70	6 57
September	5 60	6 50
October	5 70	6 50
November	5 50	6 20

Having given similar figures for calves, Mr. Kohler stated that no better evidence could be adduced to prove the value of the United States market to the farmers of Ontario than the serious falling-off of cattle shipments to the Buffalo market following the high duties under the Dingley tariff. For example, in 1879, Canada shipped to Buffalo 79,164 cattle; in 1898, 71,131 cattle; 1899, 62,311 cattle, and in 1910, after the passage of the Dingley bill, 26,441 cattle.

Mr. Kohler continued:

I need not enlarge upon the advantages of the Buffalo market for poultry and fowl, as the large quantities shipped to that market from Western and Southern Ontario affords ample proof of that.

Turning to other products of the farm, I direct your attention to the difference in the price of hay in the Toronto and Buffalo markets. I made enquiries at the stock yards in this city and one of them quoted an average price of $13.61 for last year and $13.05 for this year and the other quoted $13.50 for last year. I also made enquiry at the stock yards, Buffalo, and found the average contract prices there were $18.00 last year and $19.00 this year, a vast difference between the Canadian and American markets. I mention these two markets because they are the largest wholesale purchasers and consumers.

The honourable member for West Hastings admits that the farmers of his constituency made a great deal of money out of growing barley, but that the McKinley Bill dealt them a fatal blow. Is there any reason why we should not accept free entrance to that market again? I well remember when the farmers of Haldimand also made a great deal of money from their barley crops and I am sure they would welcome a re-opening of that market. It may be argued that the barley could be used for feeding purposes, but if we could sell our barley to the Americans for a good price, and buy their corn cheap, which is heavier and stronger feed, it would be much more profitable.

I have no figures of the difference in price of dairy products of Canada and the United States, but every honourable gentleman in the House is aware that these products sell higher in the American markets than here.

Now let us sum up and see what effect this reciprocity agreement would have on advancing the price of what the average farmer produces:

8 two-year-old steers and heifers at $6.00 to $10.00 each.

5 sheep, saving the duty, at $1.50 each.

30 hogs, saving the duty, at $1.50 each.

300 bushels barley at a greatly advanced price, besides higher prices for all dairy products.

Mr. Kohler's testimony is valuable, because he speaks as a man conversant with both the Buffalo and Toronto markets and knowing the interests of the agriculturists of Southern Ontario thoroughly. His statements are not guess-work, but the result of both observation and experience.

hay into meal, which is shipped to all parts to be used as stock feeds, like wheat bran, and as a basis for stock foods.

Alfalfa has added greatly to the prosperity of the farmers over there, and, of course, this is passed on and is felt by those living in towns and cities. Hence it is that I view with satisfaction the fact that alfalfa is being brought to the attention of the farmers here. The alfalfa competition for Peterborough County farmers, details of which you announced on Wednesday evening, should do a world of good, and since all progress is conditional on public opinion, and this, even in the country, is a very much town-made thing, it would be well if our citizens would take occasion to inform themselves about this crop and interest themselves that much in the welfare of our country brethren, which we recognize to be very closely connected with our welfare.

Might it not be well if our Board of Trade, or some other body of business men in our city here take a little more interest in our farmers. In this alfalfa question now placed before our farmers we have a suitable subject on which to make a start. It is a somewhat ingenuous proposal that our city people should take the initiative in bringing the alfalfa crop more prominently before our farmers, nevertheless when we consider the tremendous possibilities of alfalfa in increasing the general prosperity we shall see the question to be quite within our province to discuss, and, in fact, see it to be even our obligation.

POST CARD COLUMN

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—It has been said that the farmer does not think for himself. No less an authority than Sir Horace Plunkett has put it that in a rural community there is a lack of collective thought as there is of co-operative action. And because of this I write you commending you for the articles that have appeared in your columns this past week, some of them inspired, I believe, by our locally printed farm journal—Farm and Dairy, in regard to that wonderful forage plant, Alfalfa.

I am pleased to note from the articles you published Saturday that so many farmers in Peterborough County are growing alfalfa successfully. Would that it were more generally grown. In various states that I have visited, notably the western states of Washington, Nebraska, some of the central states, and now latterly New York state, the farmers make a big thing of alfalfa. In many towns and cities, around which alfalfa is extensively grown, large mills have been erected and are thriving industrial concerns for grinding the alfalfa

A MANUFACTURED ROW.

Go Ahead, Sir Wilfrid.

For empty-headed nonsense and for meaningless verbosity,
Commend me to the Telegram and News on reciprocity.
'Tis all the purest tommy-rot—I never heard the like before;
They say Sir Wilfrid's plotting hard (the grits are rebels to the core),
To sell our bloomin' birthright to old Uncle Sam across the line,
And day by day they're sighin' for the loyalty of Auld Lang Syne,
Those were the times, and those the men, who traded not in product raw;
Because, forsooth, they stayed at home, and ventured not into the dark,
For fear, unwary mariners, they'd captured be by some Champ Clark.
Those were the times, and those the men, who rallied 'round the Union Jack,
And safe would be our Canada, if only we could get them back;
And when we'd fain remind these gents that, when they held the reins of power,
They travelled off to Washington with samples of our wheat and flour,
They just walk round the question, don't reply to us at all, somehow,
Which goes to show that all this noise, and all this manufactured row,
Is simply party politics, a lot of Tory jingo bluff.
Sure, bless my soul, there's not a child would swallow such transparent stuff.
So steam ahead, Old Mariner, keep reciprocity in view,
An open hand for Uncle Sam, a heart to King and Country true.

—(Rev.) D. A. Casey.

ELLIOT'S

"The Strange Case Of Eleanor Cuyler"

By KINGSLAND CROSBY

"Seen 'em lately?" asked Wotsirb.

"Seen the old man this afternoon. Said as how he or th' Perfessor was goin' to Titusville later on. He bought th' white mare an' the old buggy from me, a few days ago, and paid a darn big price for 'em, too. Yessir! They got dreams o' money, that crowd has! Well," he added, pulling up his horses, "here's where I live. . . . Wunt ya come in?"

"No, I guess I'll walk back now."

Quite a ways ahead of you. Perhaps though, the Perfessor, or his wife's father, 'll come along and give ye a lift.

"Perhaps so," Wotsirb said, stepping down from the waggon. "Good night."

The farmer responded in kind, and turned up the lane leading to his home, while the detective started back on foot toward Pheasantville, miles beyond which lay Titusville.

At the first turn in the road he paused, wondering whether he had better reveal his identity to the man he had just left, gather one or two farmers, and at once surround the last house in Pithole, and capture the gang. Then he reflected that Bill Tyson might not believe him, and that Bill had made considerable money out of Miss Cuyler's captors, and maybe that the latter might escape in a goodly country mile. It was not yet dark, although night was coming, and perhaps some of the gang were not in the house at Pithole. Later on they would all be together, and any one could not well go further, for Tyson had said that beyond Pithole lay almost a wilderness.

No, the thing to do was to push with all speed to Titusville, wire his men at Buffalo and Pittsburg to come on, and when they arrived rush them to the scene. That was the only safe way. He would do it.

On he strode at a rapid pace, past one field after another, past woods and hills, and had almost reached the village of Pheasantville when he heard a vehicle coming behind him. Turning around he saw a dilapidated buggy, in which sat a smooth-faced young man wearing spectacles. He was slenderly built and looked like a student. The horse he was driving was white.

"Good evening," he said, stepping to one side.

"Good evening," the stranger responded. "Which way are you bound?"

"I'm going back to Titusville old Bill Tyson gave me quite a present of the way out to his farm."

"Oh, he did?"

"Yes," said Wotsirb, looking squarely into the pair of spectacles over that young man's head through and through.

"Want a lift? The other road's bad."

"Don't mind if I do," the detective responded, stepping into the buggy. "You're Professor Simpson, aren't you?"

"I suppose you heard that from Tyson, too. What else did he tell you?"

"Oh, nothing much. Said you were studying the lay of land at Pithole, so as to learn why the oil gave out there so suddenly at the time of the excitement."

"Anything more?"

"I can't say he told me anything more except that your wife hasn't been feeling well, and you all brought her there to get rest and quiet. Some day when I have time, perhaps a week from now, I want to look Pithole over. I've never seen it—but I won't get a day off for the next week anyhow; maybe not for two weeks."

"Get up!" said the other, striking the white mare with his whip.

They drove on rapidly after that, through Pheasantville and won the plank-road. Soon the stranger spoke again in lower tones.

"Did Mr. Tyson tell you what is really the matter with my wife?"

"He thought it was a case of nervous prostration."

"We thought so at first—but it is something more. I'm sorry to say. Unless I am much mistaken Mrs. Simpson has developed a virulent form of smallpox."

He spoke gravely.

"You don't mean it!" Wotsirb exclaimed.

The other nodded. "I am going now for a doctor to find out what ought to be done in the matter. You will see the danger of coming out to Pithole at least for some time; until the period of infection is over."

"Oh, I'm not afraid," Wotsirb replied cheerfully. "I had smallpox myself a few years ago—you can't catch it twice, you know."

"But you might carry it in your clothes to other people," the Professor insisted. "Perhaps you'd better get out of the carriage here, before we get to Titusville?"

"It's only a little distance further. I'll go on with you to the town. If there was any danger of having the germs in my clothes they would be full of them now as half an hour later."

"Of course it's none of my business—but if you are seen driving along with me, you will be quarantined as soon as it becomes known that my wife has smallpox. I presume you will be placed under observation for several weeks in the pest-house."

"Tell you what I'll do," Wotsirb replied after a few moments. "I'll go to the doctor's office with you, and ask him if it's dangerous for me to walk around the streets after having this drive."

The man by his side moved uneasily.

"I'm not going there directly," he responded with noticeable hesitation. "I have several errands to do first."

"All right then" the detective said, regretfully. "You can put me down here—my boarding place is just around the corner."

Without further words he stepped out of the buggy, which started on again, down Main street. Just there the old vehicle was bound for Wotsirb did not know; but he must keep it in sight long enough to find out. Fortunately a grocery waggon came along just then. He hailed the driver and jumped in.

The buggy did not go near a doctor's office. It turned the first corner and started toward the business section of the little city. Evidently the young man in spectacles suspected something. Here was a time when Wotsirb must use his own judgment. Instructions or no instructions, he felt the imperative necessity of calling on the Titusville police without the loss of a single minute. He sprang from the grocery waggon and started toward the Mayor's office.

Then he paused, recalling what Mortimer Cuyler had told him—that under no circumstances must a word about his daughter's disappearance get to the police or the newspapers. The banker's orders were explicit and peremptory. Wotsirb was acting under them. The whole responsibility lay on Cuyler.

"Yes, he would have to wire for his men and wait for them to arrive. By using special engines one party or the other ought to be in Titusville by ten o'clock. He would arrange to have light waggons and fast horses ready to start on a moment's notice. He believed he would turn the trick after all, especially as the abductors would have to bring Miss Cuyler to Titusville in order to get on board a train. If they should attempt to escape by going across country, over those terrible roads late at night, they could not get far before he would be after them—there were two men and two women in their party, and they had only one old mare and a ramshackle buggy. They wouldn't dare to ask Tyson or some other farmer to help them escape late at night—any countryman would refuse such an extraordinary request and promptly notify the nearest constable. Yes, it was safe to let the matter rest for a few hours; but of course Wotsirb would keep close watch of both railway stations—and if the gang showed up at either, he knew how to act promptly, decisively, effectively.

He walked rapidly to his hotel, and sent a bellboy to the telegraph office with duplicate messages; one addressed to Buffalo, the other to Pittsburg.

Then he called at a livery stable and ordered two spring waggons to be ready to take some gentlemen out to Bill Tyson's farm when they should have arrived in Titusville a few hours later.

When this was done he commenced to walk back and forth between the two railroads, which were situated some distance apart. Half a dozen times he had patrolled his beat, keeping careful watch on the streets, when he suddenly came face to face with Sheldon Winthrop.

Wotsirb did not waste an instant in shaking it. Instead, he seized Winthrop's arm, whirled him around and started for his hotel.

"Come along!" he commanded. "I'm glad to find you. There's quick work ahead."

"Hold on a minute," the other remonstrated, speaking rapidly. "I've got two friends with me—one of them just stepped into this cigar store—we have traced her out this far and just arrived to-day."

"Bring your friend along, and hurry! Where's the other man?"

Cold Upsets the Kidneys

And Uric Acid Poisons Bring Pains and Aches to Back and Limbs

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

You feel pains in the back, find the urine heavy and unduly coloured, have indigestion and irregularity of the bowels and these may be the rheumatic twinges.

You wonder what has gone wrong until you recollect that you have been exposed to sudden changes of temperature, perhaps sitting in a draft or passing from a very warm room to be chilled by the outdoor air.

The kidneys are most susceptible to cold, and a sudden lowering of temperature throws an extra burden on them by closing the pores of the skin, which are ordinarily a great aid to the kidneys in removing poisons from the blood.

The danger lies in not understanding the meaning of the symtoms given in the first paragraph. Once you know that the kidneys need assistance you can help them promptly by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Every day you put off treatment you are taking the risk of developing Bright's disease, dropsy or rheumatism. Because of the inactivity of the failing kidneys your system is being loaded with poisonous impurities, and that means pains and suffering.

Get Dr Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to-day. One pill a dose; 25 cents a box, all dealers or Edmunson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

PEOPLE'S PULPIT.

GOD'S KINGDOM

No Common Level There—"As Star Differeth From Star"—"The Greatest and Least in the Kingdom."

Berlin, Germany, March 26.—Pastor Russell delivered three addresses here to-day—one of them to the Jews on "Zionism in Prophecy," another on "Hereafter" and the third, which we report, from the text, "Of those born of women there is not a greater Prophet than John the Baptist, but the least in the Kingdom of Heaven is greater than he" (Luke vii, 28). Large and interested audiences attended. He leaves to-night for Copenhagen and Stockholm. Crowds of Jews are reported to have heard him during the last three days in Vienna, Budapest, Lemberg and Krakow.

There can be no better illustration of the sharp line of distinction between the earthly and the heavenly classes and their calling than is shown by our text, said Pastor Russell. The great Teacher freely attested to the loyalty and courage and saintliness of His cousin John, as evidenced by the words of our text. But if so great and honorable a Prophet, why could not John be a member of the Bride class? Why could he not be numbered with the disciples of Jesus and be an Apostle, or at least a footstep follower? The answer is that he was not called to the heavenly plane, but to the earthly. He was honored of God, in being made one of the Prophets of the Jewish Age—the last of them. Although a different honor from that conferred upon the Apostles, John's was a great honor and we have reason to believe that, under Divine providence when perfected in the resurrection, he will appreciate the earthly blessings and privileges which will be his more than the spiritual and heavenly privileges bestowed upon the Apostles and the less prominent members of the Church.

The Lord "will choose our inheritance for us," we read (Psalm xlvii, 4). Happy are those who repose implicit confidence in Divine goodness and who seek to obtain whatever may be God's choice for them. If we have been called with the heavenly calling, let us not shrink back and declare ourselves unworthy and decline to accept the favors of God and to choose an inferior position. Let us, rather, be glad to say, Thy will be done in my heart, in my life, in all my future. "Order Thou my steps in Thy Word."

Jesus had a two-fold mission:

(1) He came "that the world through Him might be saved"—that He might give Himself "a ransom for all, to be testified in due time" (I. Timothy ii, 6).

(2) Incidentally His mission was to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord—the time in which God is willing to accept the sacrifices of such as desire to walk in the Redeemer's footsteps, and to constitute these the Bride and Joint-heir of Messiah.

John the Baptist referred to the latter feature of our Lord's work, saying, He that hath the Bride is the Bridegroom, but the friend of the Bridegroom heareth His voice and rejoiceth greatly. This, my joy, therefore, is fulfilled (John iii, 29). It was not for him to be a member of the Bride, but he rejoiced to be a friend of the Bridegroom. As our Lord's forerunner he announced the Bridegroom; he called upon the nation of Israel to turn from sin, to purify their hearts, to come back into harmony with God and thus to be prepared to receive the Bridegroom and to become the Bride. So far as the nation was concerned John's mission was a failure, as God had foreknown and foretold. But so far as the Bride class was concerned John's mission was a success, for, as the Scriptures intimate, those who believed John's testimony accepted Jesus and He accepted them.

We must remember that the Church is the "Kingdom of God"—now in a formative or embryotic state, but in the end, by "the resurrection," to be spirit beings and partakers with Jesus, their Bridegroom, in His wonderful glory, honor, immortality and Kingdom work. This Kingdom class is not reigning now, but merely forming. It is joined "on probation," after the Methodist style. If the probationary period of the present life be faithfully used, the full induction into the Kingdom, its glories, honors and immortality, will surely follow—by participation in the First Resurrection.

Amongst the faithful followers of the Master there will be differences, as St Paul explains. "as one star differeth from another star in glory" (I. Corinthians xv, 41). We cannot know, and it is not necessary for us to guess, who shall occupy the chief places in the Kingdom. These shall be given to those whom the Father prefers, as the Redeemer explained to the woman who asked that her two sons might sit, one on His right hand and the other on His left hand in the Kingdom (Matthew xx, 21).

If we were to guess who shall be closest in position to the Master we would suppose that St. Paul would be first, with St. John, St. Peter and St. James near by in glorious excellence. And yet we know not how nearly up to the Apostolic standard some may be who have lived very humble and obscure lives, have fought a good fight and finished their course with joy. Indeed, the twelve Apostles seem to occupy, by Divine decision in advance, the very highest stations in the Kingdom, next to that of the Redeemer. Who said of them, "Ye who have followed Me, in the regeneration . . . shall sit upon twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel" (Matthew xix, 28). Again, they are pictured to us as the "crown of twelve stars" to the Church (Revelation xii, 1), and yet again they are pictured to us as the twelve precious foundation stones of the Church in her future glory, as the New Jerusalem (Revelation xxi, 14).

Those called of God to this high salvation, as members of the spiritual kingdom which shall bless natural Israel and through her all the nations, are required to demonstrate their loyalty to God by faithfulness even unto death—in the narrow way of self-sacrifice. As there is no other Name than that of Jesus whereby any may be saved to eternal life, so, likewise, there is no other path whereby any may reach the Kingdom except the narrow way, "and few there be that find it." All who attain to the Kingdom must be overcomers of the world to the extent of self-sacrifice. The gradations of glory will be because of special manifestations of zeal for the Lord and His cause of righteousness and Truth against sin and error.

The Scriptures clearly show another class in process of salvation during this Gospel Age, quite separate and distinct from the Bride class. These are referred to in various parts of the Scriptures. They will all be loyal, to the extent that they would not deny the Lord nor wilfully practice sin. Their failure to reach the status of the Bride is indicated in an insufficiency of zeal in connection with their loyalty. This class is described in Revelation vii, 14. They are represented as having failed to keep their garments unspotted from the world—failed to live circumspectly, carefully enough.

Hence in a great time of trouble in the end of this Age these are represented as washing their robes and making them white in the blood of the Lamb and then coming up through that tribulation to glory and honor, but not to immortality, nor to the same degree of glory and honor as the Church, the Bride. The distinction in their glory is indicated in that instead of being in the Throne they are before it; instead of being the Bride, they will serve; instead of wearing the crown, they will bear palm branches; instead of being the Temple, they will be servants in the Temple.

This same class is referred to by the Apostle in his declaration respecting the end of this Age. He intimates that some will have an abundant entrance (II. Peter i, 11) into the Kingdom, while others will be "saved so as by fire" (I. Corinthians iii, 15). The fire of this Day will test every man's work of what sort it is. Some will be proved to be gold, silver, precious stones. These the "fire" will not consume. Others will be proved to be an admixture of hay and stubble, which will be consumed, though themselves will be saved from the fire (I. Corinthians iii, 12, 13).

The tribe of Levi pictured the entire "Church of the First-born," but it contained two classes—the "little flock" of priests and the "great company" of Levites—the Bride class and the servant class, none of whom have any inheritance in the earth, all of whom have the heavenly inheritance.

As Isaac typified our Lord, the Redeemer, and as Rebecca typified the Bride class, so Rebecca's maidens typified this "great company" class. This same thought is brought to our attention in Psalm xlv, where the Bride class is pictured as being presented to Jehovah in the end of this Age in glory, honor and immortality, illustrated by raiment of fine needlework and gold. Following the Bride come "the virgins, her companions, who follow her." These also will be greatly honored, greatly blessed, though theirs will be a less honor. This "great company" will not constitute the Kingdom, although they will be identified with it and its wonderful salvation and blessing for mankind.

The Great Teacher's declaration that they who break God's commandments and teach others so to do shall be called "least in the Kingdom" has caused considerable perplexity in the past. The question has been, How could anyone be fit at all for the Kingdom who breaks God's commandments and teaches others so to do? The answer is that many of God's people have labored under more or less of blindness and have done things which they ought not to have done and left undone the things which they ought to have done. As an illustration, John Calvin, noble man as he was, burned his Christian brother, Servetus. Such violation of the Divine commands and such wrong teaching must, according to our human judgment, assign Brother Calvin to a lesser place in the Kingdom than if he had more carefully, more earnestly sought the will and Spirit of God. However, it is not for us to judge. We are merely seeking to ascertain the spirit of our Lord's words.

Begotten of the Holy Spirit and privileged of the Lord to be disciples and to be guided of the Holy Spirit, we should be so faithful in the study of the Scriptures as not to be mistaken in respect to the general application of their meaning. Wrong practice and false teachings do not always represent disloyalty to God, but they surely do always represent slackness or inattention to the Divine message; though we may be sure of the Lord's faithfulness in enlightening all who are of the proper, teachable spirit.

To what class does John the Baptist belong, and what will be his share in the Kingdom, according to our text?

Since the call of God began with the call of the Church, and since the Church began at the First Advent of Jesus, it follows that no one was called of God to salvation prior to Jesus' time—none for forty-one hundred and fifty years after sin entered the world.

God did, however, recognize the loyalty of heart of His Prophet Enoch and communed with him and blessed him, etc. God also recognized Abraham's faith and spirit of obedience, and Isaac's and Jacob's, and that of Moses and Aaron and numerous prophets and other faithful ones less notable.

Did he not call these? We answer that he did not call them to salvation, for no salvation could be positively offered until the Redeemer had sacrificed; nor were they called to the Kingdom, for the same reason. God did tell them that in due time He would bless all the world. He did tell them that in due time the great Ruler of the world would come forth from Abraham's posterity in the line of Isaac and Jacob and the nation of Israel. But telling them of a coming blessing and giving them eternal life are different matters. St. Paul declares that none of them got everlasting life, and that "by the deeds of the Law no flesh can be justified before God."

Israel's Law Covenant served to instruct the Chosen People. It was a call to do right, and a promise of eternal life if they would keep the Law. "He that doeth these things shall live." Israel learned the lesson that a perfect Law could not be kept by imperfect beings. Some of them and some of the Gentiles in due time heard of Jesus and how God has provided justification through His sacrificial death.

St. Paul tells us the status of those noble characters, of whom John the Baptist was the last. They were volunteer servants of God, so to speak. Those of them who were born under the Law Covenant, by their faith lived above it and will be fully rewarded, although they lived before any specific call or offer of eternal life was made. Their faith and obedience was pleasing to God; as St. Paul relates, "All these died in faith, not having received the things promised (them), God having provided some better thing for us (the Gospel Church), that they without us should not be made perfect" (Hebrews xi, 13, 40).

"The Church of the First born" is to be perfected first, and on the spirit plane, "partakers of the divine nature" (II. Peter i, 4). In due time those Ancient Worthies will come forth from the tomb to receive the blessing which God declares shall be the reward of their loyalty. As the Church will have the "better resurrection" on the spirit plane, so those Ancient Worthies will have the "better resurrection" on the earthly plane. They will come forth from the tomb actually perfect, while the remainder of mankind will be obliged to attain perfection by the slow process of faith, works, obedience, during the thousand years of the Kingdom.

Moreover, those Ancient Worthies, while not members of the Kingdom, per se, which will be spiritual, will be members of that Kingdom in its earthly phase. They will be the Kingdom's earthly representatives, princes or rulers, in all the earth, as the Scriptures declare (Psalm xlv, 16). We remember the words of Jesus to this effect: "Ye shall see Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and all the Prophets in the Kingdom," but He said not a word about Himself or His disciples being seen; properly so, because they, as spirit beings, will be invisible to men.

The Scriptures still further intimate that during the thousand years of Messiah's reign, all the faithful of mankind, all the obedient, will be privileged to come into relationship with the King. This is figuratively represented in the statement that the great ones of earth "will bring their glory and honor into the New Jerusalem."

With such glorious hopes before us, with such appreciation of our Heavenly Father's glorious character and wonderful Plan, with such a grand view of our Saviour's work, with such a hope of a share with Him in His Kingdom, what manner of persons ought we to be in holy living and godliness! Nor should it be thought strange that any of the spirit-begotten now, or the restored of the future, who would turn their backs upon the gracious provisions made for their salvation, would be considered unworthy of further favor or blessing at the hands of God and would die the Second Death—annihilation. As Paul says "they shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and the glory of his power" (II. Thessalonians i, 9).

Soon the disciples of the Master will be one with Him beyond the veil, sharers of His glory and Kingdom. Then will come the time when the world will believe. The knowledge of the Lord will fill the earth and all the blinding and stumbling influences of the present will be at an end. The Saviour will then exercise His power on behalf of the world, overthrowing evil and uplifting every good principle and all who love righteousness, and destroying those who would corrupt the earth.

MEN AND WOMEN CURED DAILY

BY "FRUIT-A-TIVES", THE GREAT FRUIT MEDICINE

Few people realize the enormous amount of good which "Fruit-a-tives" has done and is doing to-day. "Fruit-a-tives" is curing hundreds of sufferers from Rheumatism, Neuralgia and Chronic Headaches—hundreds of others who were almost frantic with Stomach Trouble, Indigestion and Biliousness—still others with Kidney and Bladder Irritation—many with apparently "hopeless" cases of Constipation, Nervousness and Skin Diseases.

"Fruit-a-tives" will do the same for you if you give it a trial.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c. At all dealers, or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

An Obliging Model.

"Never undertake," he said, "to do too much. In applying for a position it is almost better to promise too little than too much. Remember the model.

"An old chap, you know, applied to a New York artist for the post of model.

"'Well,' said the artist, 'what do you sit for?'

"'Oh, anything, sir,' said the model, fingering his beard nervously, 'anything you like, sir—landscape a specialty.'"

Smart Tailored Waists and Lingerie Blouses

EXCLUSIVE MODELS AND DESIRABLE FABRICS ARE THE SIGNIFICANT FEATURES THAT COMMEND THESE NEW ARRIVALS TO YOUR SPECIAL CONSIDERATION.

Of course, the early visitors will get first choice, and deservedly, but there are enough for all Peterborough; and no first, second or third day attendance can diminish or affect the assortment.

The designs pictured here, are indicative of the graceful lines, and smart appearance of our latest styles, but we want you to see the fine materials and workmanship of each garment.

All are this Spring's debutantes, possessing all the characteristics of good style and good quality of custom-made waists, but no semblance of their costliness.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

SHOULD a woman tell the man she is about to marry her past if it contains something she is ashamed of?

A few weeks ago I passed on to the public that query which a poor little motherless girl had put to me.

I trust they will help both the little girl who asked for help and any others who may be in similar doubt.

They seem intensely interesting to me, because they show how honest opinions may differ, and because some of them are real human documents from people who have learned what they tell us from that harshest but surest of teachers—experience.

"I think you were justified in advising the girl you spoke of not to reveal her past, provided you feel well convinced that the young lady is honest. I am a man along in life and I have seen many cases like this one.

"And I am sure there is not more than one case in ten where any man would expect and exact any more correct, upright, virtuous living in woman than in man.

"Not one man in a hundred could begin to tell the woman he was about to marry his past, and they have no right to expect a woman to do so.

"If this girl, before God, can say that she is now pure and intends to remain so, I would say, 'Keep silent.'"

"In reading your column the other evening about the girl who asked advice as to whether she should tell her past or not, it seemed to me as though that girl were voicing my thoughts.

"Like her, I have no mother. When I was about eighteen I became engaged to a man from a distant city. I thought at the time I cared lots for him, but he was the first, so what did I know? We were to be married, putting it off from time to time. He didn't work, so we spent lots of time in each others company and finally we became too intimate. I was shamed. Not openly. But I knew it, the one whom it meant the most to.

"Finally, realizing he was a worthless fellow and would ruin my whole life, I got rid of him. About two years ago I met a good man who in time asked me to be his wife. I said 'No,' telling him I did not care for him. You see the old sin rose in front of me continually and I could not lose his esteem by telling him. I did want to tell him but I was afraid. Finally he went away and no one knows but myself how my heart ached day and night for him. I think heaven arranged that we should meet and I should love him. But I think if he ever comes back to me I will tell him. I am writing this to you in the hopes that you will publish it and that some good man will answer and say if he thinks a man would overlook a woman's sin if all the rest of her life were blameless. And then I want all your girls to read this and keep themselves good and pure. God knows how I would atone but it can never be undone."

Here is another experience.

"You are right when you say, 'If the woman knows in her own heart that she is free from physical and moral taint and that she will never be tempted that way again she will do well to marry the man without telling him.' Tell that little girl who hasn't a mother not to tell the man her past. If the man is the right sort he will not turn against her, but why take a chance of future happiness and protection by this confession? With the man's love and trust her suffering will gradually grow less and happiness will reign.

One who has had the same experience."

In the next two days I am going to give you two more extremely interesting human documents on this subject.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES OF ST. JAMES' CHURCH DREW LARGE CONGREGATIONS

Eloquent and Impressive Sermons Were Preached by Rev. H. M. Manning, of Whitby, a Former Pastor---A Social To-night.

A large congregation turned out last night to hear an excellent discourse by Rev. H. M. Manning, of Whitby, a former pastor at St. James' church. The occasion was the second anniversary of the opening of the new church. "Distrust and Skepticism," was the theme of Rev. Mr. Manning's discourse. He took for his text Jeremiah, second chapter, fifth verse, "Thus, saith the Lord, what iniquity have your fathers found in me, that they have gone far from Me, and have walked after vanity, and are become vain?"

"Distrust is one fatal weakness of mankind," said the speaker. When we entertain distrust we leave ourselves open to that adversary who is ever ready to trip us up. We ask ourselves if it is so. Why is it thus, that we weaken away by thinking of distrust of self, with distrust of God that is the time when we weaken and fall away from him. God will never fail you or forsake you. When you commence to judge Him with one or two ideas a moral calm of the heart takes place. The word of God is dry. Heaven is but brass. Another class of people get in this state of mind because they are made sport of. This class is as a rule up to-day and down to-morrow, fluctuating, swerving from the true path of righteousness; comparing self with others often suggests doubt. There are no two people alike. And yet we come to the house of God and think we are turned out like machinery from a factory, every face alike. Every man has his peculiarities and diversity of opinion. God sees every circumstance that affects his children and He will not allow any such circumstances to obstruct the righteous path of his children. We haven't enough audacity, not enough soldier bone to go down and save men, and contend with the devil in the battle for right and might. The man who comes to church to get the word of God and goes to the world for his enjoyment does not comply with the regulations that are laid down in the Bible. To be in close contact with the world will weaken your faith. Skepticism in general is a very superficial thing. It assails us on all side in books, in every day conversation and even in the church in the form of higher criticism. The Bible is the true faith. It is the book that settles the question forever, no matter what Ingersoll said or any other advocate of a new faith. Its practical Christianity that we want. No honest doubter can study it and remain unconverted. Neglect of religious opportunities is one reason why people get into this condition, especially the young people. The boys should not leave the Sunday school or cut away from the church. One fruitful cause of skepticism is being sinful and thinking that God is against you. Your faith reverts to infidelity and you gradually fall away, and begin to think there is no redemption. God will forgive you if you are a thousand times worse than you are. Dispel all distrust lift the blind of prejudice, raise the shutters that the light may enter, and your mind will be drawn toward God.

In connection with this the second anniversary of the opening of St. James' church, a congregational rally will be held to-night. Tea will be served from 6 to 8 p.m., and a general business meeting will be held.

YOU CAN SEE IT WORK

The beauty of Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment as a healer of the skin in eczema, salt rheum, itching skin disease and old sores is that you can see from day to day exactly what it is doing. There is no guess work, no experimenting. It simply heals the skin and makes it soft, smooth and natural. It heals as if by magic. Prove this to your own satisfaction by trying it.

A SERIOUS MISHAP

Buggy Was Overturned and Occupants Thrown Out in a Collision

Fast driving was the cause of a serious mishap on George street last night about 8.45 p.m. Mr. and Mrs. John Howden were driving south on George street at a leisurely pace, and when near the roller rink their buggy was struck by another rig coming behind them, with such force as to completely overturn the former. Mr. and Mrs. Howden were precipitated out into the road. No bodily injuries were sustained, but their clothing was badly bespattered with mud. The rig was badly damaged and it was found necessary to secure another in order to drive home. The other parties concerned in the melee were two employees at a local hotel, who were driving a fast pacing mare, which they had hired from a local livery for the evening.

A DOUBLE CURE FOR DOUBLE TROUBLE

Father Morriscy's No. 26 Cures Catarrh by a Combined Treatment.

The sudden weather variations in our climate result in a great many cases of catarrh—a troublesome disease usually considered hard to cure, and one which often leads to serious pulmonary and intestinal troubles.

A neglected cold in the head weakens the nasal membranes, so that at every future exposure the trouble returns. At length these conditions are fastened onto the system, and the sufferer undergoes the annoyance and danger of chronic catarrh.

Some doctors confine themselves to prescribing external applications, and thus do not reach the seat of the trouble. Others give internal treatment exclusively, and thus do not promptly relieve the affected parts.

Father Morriscy, the skilled physician, rightly regarded catarrh as a double trouble, consisting of unpleasant local effects and their fundamental causes, the latter having to do with impaired general vitality.

His famous remedy, No. 26, is a combined cure for catarrh. It consists of tablets to be taken three times a day, and an especially compounded salve.

The salve is antiseptic, and quickly heals the inflamed membranes of the nasal passages. The tablets go to the seat of the trouble and restore the system to its usual tone. Together, they cure.

Instead of neglecting a disease that is unpleasant to yourself and to others, and one which often leads to pneumonia and consumption, it is surely the part of wisdom to take timely steps to do away with the effects and at the same time remove the cause. No. 26 does just that.

50c. for the combined treatment. At your druggist's, or from Father Morriscy Medicine Co.; Ltd., Montreal, Que.

Selecting Wall Papers and Homefurnishings each in Separate Stores VERSUS Making Your Selections in One Store, in One Department

REDECORATING and Refurnishing the home has long had its terrors in the shape of making selections. It has been a most trying time from the fact that most stores which carry wall decorations do not stock the carpets, rugs, draperies, etc., which are sure to be needed and more than that, need to be selected to match or blend with the papers. The good housewife would first select her rug or floor covering whatever it was, then the draperies and curtains being next in importance, were the next. She was delighted, got just what she wished. She then went out to get the paper; looked over hundreds of samples here, hundreds more some place else and so on until she became discouraged in trying to match her rug and draperies. We have all gone through it to our sorrow and often the end was anything but a cheerful looking combination. 'Tis past, we have solved the problem.

We have the finest stock of Wall Papers and Wall Decorations that have ever been shown in Peterboro', not the largest, we do not claim that, we claim the finest. With this claim we also add that we have the latest ideas and most modest prices. We yet have an additional claim and this is: that we carry a most complete range of Carpets, Rugs, Linoleums, Window Shades, etc., that one could wish to select from and moreover, they are selected to match or blend with the wall decorations and vice versa. Our buyers see to it that we have the complete combinations, no conflicting of pattern and color where they should blend. Is this not a convenience that has long been needed in Peterborough? Think this over, think of the comfort of choosing your complete wants in wall paper and housefurnishings away from the noise and bustle of the main floor and also think of the difference there is in having to make your own ideas, like you do in most stores, and selecting where expert men give you the latest ideas and suggest various schemes both in the wall paper and accompanying furnishings. Stocks complete now—come.

EDUCATIONAL SERMONS WERE PREACHED

LARGE CONGREGATIONS

In the Charlotte and George Street Methodist churches of the city, yesterday, educational sermons were preached, and the contributions were in aid of Victoria College. There were very large congregations present during the day, and the contributions correspondingly generous, the congregations responding liberally to the appeals made to them.

At the George Street Methodist church Rev. Dr. Long of Brampton, occupied the pulpit, in the morning, while at night, a special sermon was preached by Rev. Dr. Graham, of Toronto. Rev. Dr. Graham was the speaker at Charlotte Street in the morning, while in the evening Rev. Dr. Long gave the address. Both speakers were forcible and eloquent and their addresses received an attentive and responsive hearing from the congregations.

There was special music at the Charlotte Street church. In the morning the anthem was "Holy Art Thou" while Miss Pringle sang the solo "My Redeemer and My Lord." A male quartette composed of Messrs. Lee, Fleming, Downey and Skitch, sang the number "A Night of Rest," while the anthem "Hark, Hark, My Soul" was feelingly rendered by the choir.

FAMOUS DRIVERS OF LOGOMOTIVES

Ferdinand of Bulgaria Recently Drove an Express from Abbeville to Paris

Miss Ethel Roosevelt, the daughter of the ex-President of the United States, is among the very few ladies who have actually not only ridden in the cab of a locomotive, but who have driven it at express speed. She had, it appears, whilst travelling upon the Atlanta and West Point Railway, tried unsuccessfully to get her mother's permission to go on the locomotive, and finally, at a station on the way, she left the private coach and reached the driver's cab by climbing over the top of the coal on the tender. She then drove the engine for thirty-six miles. The speed maintained was sixty-five miles an hour, and the testimony of the engine-driver was that Miss Roosevelt had managed everything as well as he could have done it himself.

Many American millionaires, and especially those who have made their millions by controlling railways, manage to make the great trunk lines serve their pleasure as well as their profit. In fact, they use the locomotive of the train as if it were a private motor-car. They have private trains of their own, fitted up as luxuriously as our own or any European Royal train, and they and their guests career across the country from New York to San Francisco, or anywhere else that fancy dictates, and stop whenever and wherever they please. Needless to say, th cuisine on board the train is that of a first-class hotel. This kind of luxurious travelling house-party often continues for weeks together. Both the Railway King and his male and, occasionally, his lady guests, will join the driver on the foot-plate, and all the Vanderbilts, Mr. George Gould, and Dr. Edward Webb, who are fond of this recreation, are expert engine-drivers.

Although the Duke of Saragossa is very wealthy, and owns large estates in Spain, he prefers the life of an engine-driver in the service of a French railway. When dressed in the rough garb of a driver there is nothing about him to indicate that he was not born to the business, except, perhaps, his white linen collar and his smartly-cut boots. He qualified five years ago, and since then he has been employed on sevral railways in Spain and France. The Duke of Saragossa is very popular with his comrades on the railway, and he is the only engine-driver in France who smokes gold-tipped cigarettes.

Several European royalties are deeply interested in engine-driving. The King of Spain, for instance, used to take every possible opportunity of getting upon the foot-plate with the driver of any train he might be travelling with. Probably, now that he is a married man with family responsibilities, he may not indulge in this propensity so often, although he is quite expert and absolutely fearless, and has often driven his mother and sisters on the railway. Ferdinand of Bulgaria is another Royal engine-driver, and some time ago actually drove the express from Abbeville to Paris.

A SMART EXCUSE

Little Lily was three years old, and very fond of sharp cutlery. Little Lily's mother knew this, and forbade the child to play with knives or scissors, in case she should hurt herself.

One day mamma entered the nursery, to find little Lily sitting on the floor, apparently attempting to cut a hole in the air with the remnants of what was once a pair of scissors, but which had completely lost one handle.

Mamma took the baby up, and said quietly but firmly:

"Lily, haven't I told you never to play with scissors?"

"Oh," replied little Lily innocently "but these isn't scissors—they's only a scis!"

Nevertheless, little Lily was spanked.

A BUSY MORNING

It was at St. Andrews, the home of golf, where the links stretch away over the moors by the sea, and dear, quiet Aunt Mary had gone up from London to visit a golfing family of nephews and nieces. At tea the first afternoon someone managed to stop talking golf long enough to ask:—

"Well, Aunt Mary, and how did you spend the morning?"

"Oh, I enjoyed myself immensely my dear. I went for a walk on the moor. A good many people seemed to be about, and some of them called out to me in a most eccentric manner. But I didn't take any notice of them. And oh, my dear, I found such a number of curious little round things. I brought them home to ask you what they are."

PECULIAR EMPLOYE

The modern employer is exacting in his demands. Witness this advertisement in a London paper: "Youth wanted, with one leg. Must have right leg off; about 18; height about 5 feet 6 inches. Active, willing. No objection to travelling.—Address, etc.

CORONATION ROSES BY THE THOUSAND

New Industries in Rose Designs Have Been Started, Particularly in Hertfordshire

Hertfordshire, by reason of the suitability of its soil the greatest rose-growing county in all England, is preparing Coronation roses in thousands, not only in single blooms and trees, but even in grotesque forms to suit the taste of a considerable section of the public. There are some people who will not be content with Coronation roses merely as buttonhole flowers or table decorations. To satisfy this class, several large rose growers have started a new industry in rose designs, such as the crown and orb, crown and sceptre, Japanese umbrellas, windmills, pergolas and pagodas, the Prince of Wales' feathers, field guns, shields, and even triumphal arches and ships in full sail. One single firm has planted 50,000 Coronation rose trees, all timed to bloom in une. "They are mostly of the famous type," said the manager of the nurseries the other day, "such as the Dorothy Perkins, Lady Gay, Hiawatha, and other well-known varieties, and in view of the coming festivities, we have started to train roses in almost every conceivable shape. Here, for instance, is a gun mounted on wheels, which might be used to decorate a houseboat." Two imperial figures, similarly fashioned in bamboo and wire, stood out in the open rose garden apart from the other trees. Each represented the King in his Coronation robes, wearing his crown. The delicate rose boughs were so skilfully inter twined with the bamboo and wire that even in its skeleton shape the graceful folds of the robe could be traced. "This is what will be in June," the manager continued, "a statue of the King in roses. It is a life-sized figure and will be a mass of pink blooms from the top of the crown to the feet. We hope to train the roses so that the King's profile will be easily recognizable." These two remarkable specimens of the grower's art will b part of a decorative scheme in London at the time of the Coronation. Some of the boughs are breaking profusely, and they will be carefully watched and pruned in the open till a few days before the Coronation, and then, while in full bloom, they will be removed and placed under a glass for a final cleaning. Each statue, it is expected, will be wreathed in about 1,500 roses.

A RICH CABINET

Six Members of the New French Government are Millionaires in Francs

France's new Cabinet has an interesting personal side. There are six millionaires in it—millionaires in francs. They are M. Monis, M. Berteaux, M. Caillaux, and three of the minor Ministers. A curious peculiarity of the new Ministry is that seven of the Ministers and three Under-Secretaries of State have never been in power before. Another peculiarity is that there are eight representatives of the South of France, five of the centre, one of the west, and two of the east, in the Cabinet, and that the north of France is not represented at all.

All Paris is laughing at the narrow escape of M. Masse, the new Minister of Commerce. Just before he received the offer of his portfolio from the new Prime Minister, M. Masse wrote an article for the "Lanterne" in which he was extremely plain spoken about M. Monis and his attempt to form a Cabinet. In the evening Mme. Masse arrived in great haste at the office of the "Lanterne" to ask for her husband's article, which, for private reasons, he did not wish to be printed. Since writing it M. Masse had been offered a portfolio in the Cabinet he had attacked so eloquently, and he has accepted it.

STEAMER GOES DOWN.

Little Sechelt Goes Down In Squall on West Coast.

Victoria, B.C., March 27.—With 29 passengers and crew on board, the steamer Sechelt, a small shelter-deck steamer operated between Victoria and Sooke by the British Columbia Shipping Co. is lost.

The latest information is that thirteen lives were lost. Five whites and eight foreign laborers.

The Sechelt left Friday afternoon with about 35 passengers, mostly laborers, bound to the Canadian Northern Railroad construction camp at Peddar Bay, and a crew of four men with Captain H. B. James, manager of the company, in charge.

Saturday morning a boy arrived at Esquimalt in a gasoline launch from William Head quarantine station, with news that the steamer had capsized. All that the boy knew was that the Sechelt had capsized, and he believed all were drowned. He had been sent to get assistance.

The tug William Joliffe was sent out as soon as the news were received and wireless messages were sent to the Australian liner Mona, which left for the Antipodes early Saturday morning, notifying Capt. Morrise of the disaster.

The steamer seemingly made the call at William Head and proceeded to Peddar Bay, when she encountered the strong southwest squalls which prevailed about 4.30 p.m.

She was then off Beachy Head, a wooded cliff forming the western entrance at Beachy Bay.

The Sechelt was 32 feet in length, with a gross register of 73 tons.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

The first monorail for passengers and freight will be opened in Germany this summer.

H. T. Van Wagner was fatally injured by being thrown from his buggy near Hamilton.

It is estimated that Toronto hotels will contribute $80,000 to the Government under the amended license act.

Twenty-nine thousand dollars were subscribed for the new Bathurst Street Methodist Church Sunday school, Toronto.

The amendment to the chartered accountants act, passed by the Ontario Legislature, has been disallowed at Ottawa.

The Advisory Board of the Toronto Industrial Refuge, Aged Men's and Aged Women's Homes inaugurated a campaign to wipe out the indebtedness.

Dr. E. Mabel Henderson, one of the best known lady doctors in Hamilton, was found dead of heart failure in her bed yesterday morning. She had been ailing a year.

Postmaster Thomas E. Hay died at Listowel last night, aged 71 years. He has been ill for about a year and last fall underwent an operation in a Toronto hospital. He was Liberal in politics.

Gordon Milne, the two-year-old Hamilton boy, who was frightfully burned Saturday night at his parents' home, when he pulled a lamp off the table, causing it to explode, died at the hospital yesterday morning.

After a two weeks' diligent search the body of Kenneth South, of Brampton, was found. The young man was working on the mill dam at Meadowvale with Henry Brown, the owner of the mill. The ice gave way, both losing their lives.

The Magantic, which arrived in Halifax on Saturday, made a new record in wireless telegraphy, sending a message Friday night to Poldhu, Cornwall, when the ship was 2,500 miles distant from that station. An answer was received from Liverpool Saturday morning.

McCurdy Protests Award.

New York, March 27.—J. A. D. McCurdy, the Canadian aviator, has entered a formal protest with the Aero Club against awarding the $3,000 City of Havana prize to Rene Barrier, the French aviator. It is alleged that McCurdy completed the flight from Camp Columbia, Havana, to and around Morro Castle, and return on Feb. 6, in 16 minutes, 51 1-2 seconds, and as the conditions of the prize called for the fastest flight between Jan. 25 and March 1, the prize should go to Mr. McCurdy.

After McCurdy had left Cuba the time for making the flight was extended to April 1. Of this change, it is alleged that McCurdy was not notified, and further, that the donors of the prize had no right to extend the time. Barrier on Thursday made the flight in 15 minutes 1 3-5 seconds.

Claims Estate of $45,000.

Kingston, March 27.—On Saturday, J. W. Curry, K.C., of Toronto, was here conducting an examination into the case of Albert Cottonden of Toronto, against Mrs. Joseph George, Kingston. Joseph George died in this city last summer, and the plaintiff is recognized as an illegitimate son of his. He claims he is entitled to the estate of George, valued at about $45,000. At the time of George's death his will could not be found, and the body was exhumed, it being the belief that it was placed in the coffin, but it was not found. Mrs. George was recently granted letters of administration.

New Lutheran Church.

New Hamburg, March 27.—The new Trinity Lutheran Church, costing about $15,000, which is built upon the site of the old church, was opened here yesterday. The dedication ceremonies at the three services held were attended by overflowing audiences. Special trains were run from both Stratford and Berlin, bringing over 500 people. The local choir was assisted by choirs from Stratford, Waterloo and Berlin.

Shot Fired Through Window.

Edmonton, Alta., March 27.—William Lennox, a wealthy American rancher of the Buffalo district, was assassinated by an unknown man, who fired through a window of his house Friday.

Steam Barge Burned.

Brockville, March 27.—The steam barge Cataract, owned by the Cataract Ice Co., Niagara Falls, Ont., was practically destroyed by fire yesterday morning in Tunnel Bay. The loss will be between $4,000 and $5,000. Four of the crew had been at work for weeks fitting her out for the season, and the blaze is supposed to have originated from a small stove which became overheated. When the alarm was turned in, the after portion of the craft was ablaze and the whole upper works, including the engine and boiler room, were badly gutted before the efforts of the brigade triumphed. The hull above the water line from amidships to the stern was charred, and it will be necessary to dock her for repairs.

Subonic Plague Spreads.

Kingston, Ja., March 27.—The bubonic plague is prevalent in Trinidad. A quarantine against that island has been established here, and this is likely to result in complications.

Killed by Trolley.

Toronto, March 27.—Dr. Charles M. Stewart, 142 Carlton street, eye, ear and nose specialist, was killed by a southbound Newmarket car on the Metropolitan line at 5.30 Saturday afternoon. He was out horseback riding and his mount shied at something, throwing him in front of the car just south of Christ's Church.

His head and face were terribly mangled, and it was considerable time before he could be positively identified. The body was removed to W. M. Ketchel's undertaking establishment at the corner of Yonge and Price streets, and there Dr. George Graham, Avenue road, and Dr. Porter of Huron street, identified the remains. There may be no inquest.

Unearths Treasure Trove.

London, March 27.—Treasure trove to the value of $1,250,000 is reported from Jersey, where it was uncovered by Athelstan Riley while he was pulling down the ruins of an old manor house built in the 13th century, with the object of using the stone to enlarge his present manor.

The discovery includes ancient urns filled with spade guineas coined during the reign of King George III., and bearing the British arms on a spade-shaped shield.

One urn bears the monogram of Emperor Vespasian, the Roman, who flourished in the first century.

An Old Woman's Suicide.

Ingersoll, March 27.—Boys hunting muskrats found the body of Miss Johnanet Huntbach in a stream a short distance from the outskirts of the town Saturday evening. The body apparently had been in the water since Monday last, which was the last time so far as known that she was seen alive. Coroner Neff gave it as his opinion that it was a clear case of suicide and deemed an inquest unnecessary. Miss Huntbach, whose home was in Norwich, was 75 years old.

Came From Kingston.

Kingston, March 27.—Chas. Thompson, found frozen to death at Port Arthur, is believed to belong to Portsmouth, a suburb of Kingston. He had a letter in his pocket addressed to Charles Thompson, Portsmouth. He was 50 years of age, employed as a sailor, and left here a year ago. His wife is living in Portsmouth.

Provisional Schools.

Ottawa, March 27.—Militia orders announce the establishment of a provisional school of instruction for infantry, to be held at St. Catharines, for a period not to exceed six weeks, commencing on or about April 3. Certificates will be limited to ranks not higher than subaltern.

Three Killed In Wreck.

Winnipeg, March 27.—A train of empty passenger coaches eastbound to Toronto, on the C.P.R., met headon Saturday with an immigrant train of stock and effects en route to Winnipeg, near Schreiber, east of Fort William. Both of the trains were badly wrecked. The wreckage caught fire. Three persons—S. T. Kimball, brakeman; Berges, fireman, and an unknown passenger — are reported to have been killed. All the injured were taken to Port Arthur. They were: Harry Pullen, engineer; Mac. Christy, fireman; Ambrose Kelly, engineer.

Lobsters.

To avoid buying lobsters which have been cooked and laid on ice until all their firmness and sweetness have been sacrificed lay the creature on its back and straighten out the tail. If when the tail is released it springs back into its normal curled position it may be considered fresh, but if it lays back and seems limp and flab by it is unfit for use.

THE DEATH LIST 150

A RAIN OF BODIES

New York, March 27.—One hundred and fifty persons—nine-tenths of them Jewish and Italian girls from the east side—were crushed to death on the pavements or smothered in smoke or shrivelled crisp in a factory fire on Saturday afternoon in the worst disaster New York has known since the steamship General Slocum was burned to the water's edge off North Brother Island in 1904.

One hundred and forty-one bodies had been recovered from the ruins at midnight Saturday, and seven of the fatally injured had died in hospitals. Two more were found yesterday.

Mothers, fathers and other relatives, literally mad with grief, stormed the police lines at the morgue all Saturday night and yesterday shrieking, sobbing and in some cases fighting with the officers in their frenzy. Hysterical women fell writhing in the streets and had to be carried away in the already over-burdened ambulances. Among the bodies are more than 80 burned beyond all semblance of human form, and they will perhaps have to share a common grave as unknown dead.

The regular morgue was far too small to accommodate the dead, and the so-called Charities Pier bore the bulk of the charred burden. The bodies were ranged in long lines down both sides of the pier, each in a brown stained wooden coffin, such as the city provides for its pauper dead.

Nearly all, if not all, the victims were employed by the Triangle Waist Co. on the eighth, ninth and tenth floors of a ten-storey loft building at 23 Washington place, on the western fringe of the downtown wholesale clothing, fur and millinery district. The partners of the firm, Isaac Harris and Max Blanck, escaped unscathed from the office on the tenth floor, carrying with them over an adjoining roof Blanck's two young daughters and a governess. There was only one light outside fire escape on the building.

How the fire started will perhaps never be known. A corner on the eighth floor was its point of origin, and the three upper floors only were swept. On the ninth floor 50 bodies were found; 63 or more were crushed to death by jumping, and more than 50 clogged the elevator shafts. The loss to property will not exceed $60,000.

Pedestrians going home through Washington square at 4.50 were startled by the whis of something rushing through the air before them, there was a horrible thud on the pavement and a body flattened on the flags. Wayfarers on the opposite side of the street shaded their eyes against the setting sun and saw the windows of the three upper floors of the building black with girls crowding to the sills. The only fire escape was in a small courtyard of the building.

"Don't jump, don't jump," yelled the crowd. But the girls had no choice. The pressure of the maddened hundreds behind them and the urging of their own fears were too strong. They began to rain on the sidewalk like peas from a hot skillet.

Four alarms were rung in within 15 minutes before the engines could respond, before the nets could be stretched or the ladders raised, five girls had fallen from the eighth and ninth floors so heavily that they broke through the glass and iron roofs of the sub-cellars, and crashed through the very streets into the vaults below. In an hour the fire was out; in half an hour it had done its worst; probably the death list was full in twenty minutes.

The building stands on a corner with exposure on two sides, but the only fire escape was interior, opening on a light and air shaft. In all there were seven exits—the single fire escape, two freight elevators in front, and two passenger elevators in front, and two stairways. All of them proved almost useless, and practically all who escaped either climbed to the roof and scrambled thence to the roof of the adjoining building or fled in the first rush for safety before the crush and the smoke got too thick.

The building stands to-day with shell intact and barely scarred, rather only smudged; the partitions of architectural tiling between floor and floor are sound, and it is impossible for one who did not see it to imagine how the flames in so short space could have wrought such havoc. Seven hundred hands, 500 of them women, were employed by the shirt waist company. They sat in rows at their whirring machines, the tables of most piled with flimsy cloth, the floors littered with lint, the air itself full of flying inflammable dust. The first rush of flame was almost an explosion. Operators died in their chairs, their lungs seared by inhaling flame. Others were crowded into the elevator shafts after the cars had made their last trip. Still others were pushed off the inadequate fire escape.

In such a horrible stream did the bodies overflow from the windows that the fire nets, stretched by the first companies to arrive, were soon forged beyond capacity. Twelve bodies weighted one net to the bursting point, but the bodies kept on raining to the pavement, through meshes that could no longer support them.

When the first breath of flame curled over the edge of a pile of shirting on the eighth floor, five minutes before quitting time, hundreds were in line before the cashier's window. In the office buildings across Washington place scores of men detained beyond office hours, worked at their desks. One of them saw a girl rush to a window and throw up the sash. Behind her danced a seething curtain of yellow flame. She climbed to the sill, stood in black outline against the light, hesitating, then, with a last touch of futile thrift, slipped her chatelaine bag over her wrist and jumped. Her body went whirling downward through the oven wire glass of a canopy to the flagging below. Her sisters who followed flamed through the air like dockets. Their path could be followed, but hardly heard. It was 85 feet from the eighth floor to the ground, about 95 feet from the ninth floor, 115 feet from the cornice of the roof and upward rush of heat and the crackle of the flames drowned their cries.

A thirteen-year-old girl hung for three minutes by her finger tips to the sill of a tenth floor window. A tongue of flame licked at her fingers and she dropped into a lifenet. Two women fell into the net at almost the same moment. The strands parted and two were added to the death list. A girl threw her pocketbook, then her hat, then her furs from a tenth floor window. A moment later her body came whirling after them to death. At a nineth floor window a man and a women appeared. The man embraced the woman and kissed her. Then he hurled her to the street and jumped. Both were killed. Five girls smashed a pane of glass, dropped in a struggling tangle and were crushed into a shapeless mass.

A girl on the eighth floor leaped for a fireman's ladder, which reached only to the sixth floor. She missed, struck the edge of a lifenet and was picked up with her back broken. From one window a girl of about 13 years, a woman, a man and two women with their arms about one another threw themselves to the ground in rapid succession. The little girl was whirled to the hospital in an automobile. She screamed as the driver and a policeman lifted her into the hallway. A surgeon came out, took one look at her face and touched his hand to her wrist.

"She is dead," he said.

One girl jumped into a horse blanket held by firemen and policemen. The blanket ripped like cheese cloth, and her body was mangled almost beyond recognition. Another dropped into a tarpaulin, held by three men. Her weight tore it from their grasp and she struck the street, breaking almost every bone in her body. Almost at the same moment a man somersaulted down upon the shoulder of a policeman holding the tarpaulin. He glanced off, struck the sidewalk and was picked up dead.

Sickness is usually caused by the accumulation of waste matter and impurities within the body.

Medal for St. John Hero.

Ottawa, March 27.—His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to award the Edward medal of the second class to Albert H. Adcock, for risking his life to save a little girl from being run over by a train.

On the morning of August 25, 1909, at St. John, N.B., a train from Montreal was entering the train shed, when a little girl about five years old, ran across the track in front of the engine.

The engine driver applied his brakes, but could not stop the train in time, and the child would have been killed had not Adcock, with great quickness and presence of mind, jumped at once to the centre of the track, seized the child and swung her clear of the track.

The engine brushed Adcock's coat as he saved the child, showing how narrow was his own escape.

Not Sisters

Now and again you see two women passing down the street who look like sisters. You are astonished to learn that they are mother and daughter, and you realize that a woman at forty or forty-five ought to be at her finest and fairest. Why isn't it so?

The general health of women is so intimately associated with the local health of the essentially feminine organs that there can be no red cheeks and round form where there is female weakness.

Women who have suffered from this trouble have found prompt relief and cure in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It gives vigor and vitality to the organs of womanhood. It clears the complexion, brightens the eyes and reddens the cheeks.

No alcohol, or habit-forming drugs is contained in "Favorite Prescription." Any sick women may consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. Every letter is held as secredly confidential, and answered in a plain envelope. Address: World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Pres., Buffalo, N.Y.

STIRRING ADDRESS

Hon. Mr. Fielding Gets a Great Reception at Montreal—Converts Audience to His Proposals

A SPLENDID SPEECH

Montreal, March 27.—Not since the present discussion of the tariff agreement commenced has there been such an able presentation of the facts of the case as were given by Hon. Mr. Fielding, Hon. Mr. Fisher and Mr. Ralph Smith, M.P., on Saturday night at Windsor Hall. The place was packed to suffocation, while thousands outside were unable to secure an entrance.

The meeting was a striking tribute to Mr. Fielding and his associates, as well as to the cause they represented.

He faced an audience largely hostile, but by the sheer force of his convincing logic and irrefutable arguments he changed them into a cheering, converted crowd. Although questioned by scores of his hearers he was "always ready to give a reason for the faith in him" and in the end won out.

Mr. Fielding was given a warm reception. He opened by replying to Mr. Thomas C. Casgrain's attack on him at Mr. Sifton's meeting. Mr. Casgrain, he said, made statements which were without a shadow of foundation when he declared that Mr. Fielding, Finance Minister, was an advocate of annexation to the United States.

"If he had known the Province of Nova Scotia better he would have known that no man under the suspicion of disloyalty could ever have been permitted to occupy a position of prominence in that province. Nova Scotia is loyal and always was loyal. Even under strong provocation she never forgot that constitutional agitation is the proper course for people who have a complaint. She was loyal when many in Canada were disloyal. (Cries of "No.") She was loyal when young patriots were burning down the Parliamentary buildings — she was loyal when the Tories in Montreal were signing the only annexation manifesto that was ever signed. Nova Scotia was loyal when the Tories of Montreal were pelting the King with rotten eggs.

"I challenge any man to show that I have ever spoken or written any word in favor of the annexation of this country with the United States. It is a pure fabrication, without the ghost of a shade of foundation."

Montreal's interest was to preserve its prosperity as the commercial capital of a prosperous and contented people, and if the effect of this measure would be to fill the western prairies with a prosperous and contented people, that would be the surest way of supplying customers for the merchants and manufacturers of Montreal. Then there has been some outcry amongst the British Columbia fruit growers, but he believed that was passing away. The lumber men were alarmed, too, but their alarm has passed away. Mr. Fielding declared that Saskatchewan was almost unanimous for reciprocity, as was shown when Mr. Haultain, the Opposition leader in the Legislature, joined in the resolution of approval. "You have had anti-reciprocity resolutions from the Ontario Legislature, but that's not surprising. They would almost vote there for a resolution to hang Laurier.

"Then in Manitoba, where political feeling ran high he believed that a great mass of the farmers were in favor of reciprocity and would show it when the time came."

A voice: "Why don't you give them a chance to vote?"

Hon. Mr. Fielding: "Oh, they will get that chance a great deal sooner than they want it." (Loud cheers.)

One of the first cries against reciprocity was that the Government had no mandate for doing this thing. Those who had been in politics for long were used to that sort of thing.

Mr. Fielding quoted Sir William Van Horne's letter, that for fifty years there had been a mandate from the Canadian people in favor of reciprocity. Sir William said this was true in the sixties and seventies, but it had not been true since.

The statement was greeted with cheers from some of the audience.

"I am glad," cried Mr. Fielding, "that there are some to cheer that statement, because I will hold them responsible for the words."

In face of Sir William's statement that in 1880 no one advocated reciprocity, Mr. Fielding read a paragraph from the statutes of Canada with a standing offer of reciprocity in various natural products. This was ten years after Sir William Van Horne said the mandate had ceased in 1866, the statutes were revised and this standing reciprocity offer was crystallized into pre-eminent law — yet Sir William said no one wanted reciprocity.

In the last speech Sir John Macdonald put into the mouth of a Governor-General, he declared his Government was doing all it could to secure reciprocity. (Applause.) In 1891, when the Conservatives made their last tariff act, they put into it an offer, not so broad as the previous one, but of very much the same kind.

Then the Liberal party in their convention of 1893 declared reciprocity as part of their platform.

As to the cry of "let well enough alone," Mr. Fielding said that "this was another compliment to the Liberal party.

"What a contrast that is with their statements after we brought in our tariff policy in 1897."

Hon. Adam Beck Overcome.

London, March 27.—Hon. Adam Beck was overcome while assisting the firemen to extinguish a serious fire at the cigar box factory on Albert street last night. The chairman of the Hydro-Electric Commission was with the two firemen holding a hose when suddenly the three of them dropped to the ground. They recovered sufficiently to crawl out. The fire started in the dry kiln and caused a loss of $8,000. The loss of the dry kiln will cripple the plant for some time.

TORONTO WINS CASE

C. P. R. Must Build the Viaduct Says Privy Council—Four Year Legal Battle is Ended

NEW UNION DEPOT

Toronto, March 27.—"Appeal dismissed after three days' argument. Original order stands. Reasons to be given later.—Dewart."

The above cable from London was received by Corporation Counsel Drayton shortly after one o'clock on Saturday afternoon, and was the cause of great rejoicing among civic representatives and officials. It means that the viaduct for which the city has been fighting for years must now be built, and that the death-traps on the Esplanade and other points east and west where the railways enter are to be eliminated and a new Union Station built on the site which was secured by the companies shortly after the great fire. This site is bounded on the north by Front street, on the west by York street, on the south by Esplanade street, and on the east by the Dominion Government customs buildings.

Mr. H. H. Dewart, K.C., who at some inconvenience to himself took the case in hand, is to be congratulated on the splendid legal victory he so materially helped to win for the city. Sir Edward Carson, K.C., the eminent Irishman who, besides being a distinguished lawyer, held office in the Cabinet of Hon. A. J. Balfour, was senior counsel.

The momentous decision of the Privy Council will have far-reaching effects outside of Toronto. It will probably be the last appeal from the decision of the Dominion Railway Board and will enable that body to proceed with the consideration and decision on some similar cases which it is understood have been held somewhat in abeyance pending this decision.

Weather on the Atlantic.

New York, March 27.—European steamships arriving here report experiencing much rough sea and heavy squalls, but during the greater part of the westward passage no strong and protracted gales were encountered.

It is quite probable that weather conditions on the transatlantic route will continue unsettled for several weeks, and occasional gales of short duration but much intensity are to be expected on voyages from the English Channel to New York.

Storms moving from the American coast to the Newfoundland Banks after the March equinox are not usually so severe as those of winter, but the winds in the northwest quadrant of the storm frequently attain great force.

As spring advances, however, there is a gradual decrease of storminess throughout the route from New York to Europe.

Menace to the Ocean.

New York, March 27.—The first iceberg on the Great Banks this season was reported yesterday by the French liner La Savoie, in from Havre. Last Thursday the ship skirted an ice floe estimated to be 60 miles long. A few hours later, a detached berg 350 feet long was seen drifting southward.

From now on, transatlantic skippers will keep a close watch ahead.

Suffered for Years From Constipation and Sick Headache.

Headache seems habitual with many people; indeed, some are seldom, if ever, free from it, suffering continually, and wondering why they can get no relief. The most frequent of all are bilious or sick headaches, and are caused by some derangement of the stomach or bowels, or both.

Burdock Blood Bitters regulates the digestive and biliary organs, removes acidity of the stomach, improves digestion, regulates the constipated bowels, and promotes a perfect circulation of pure blood to all portions of the body.

Mrs. C. Meadows, Clarksburg, Ont., writes: "For years I was troubled with sick headache and dizziness, and was also constipated. I was advised to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I only took three bottles of the medicine, and now feel like a new person as I am completely cured. I can truthfully testify that B.B.B. is the best medicine I have ever used."

Burdock Blood Bitters, has, during the last 35 years, built up an unrivalled reputation as a cure for all troubles arising from a constipated condition of the bowels.

FIRST SOCCER GAME OF SEASON ON SATURDAY

Two C. G. E. Teams Battled in Snow and Water on the Brinton Field, the Brass Department Winning a Hollow Victory by 7 Goals to 1---Some Entertaining Features.

As the result of a challenge from the Transformer Department, who kindly put up a (?) valuable cup and medals, teams from the Transformer and Brass departments of the C. G. E. met in a football match on Saturday, March 25, on the Brintons' ground. In spite of the fact that the Transformers had the assistance of Miller, the prolific goal scorer of the C. G. E. team, they were ignominously defeated to the tune of 7 goals (and one disallowed) to 1.

The Transformers won the toss, and elected to play against the wind. The ground was playable, in places, but the deepest pond wasn't more than two feet deep, there were also several deep snow drifts. The Transformers were early in the picture, a pretty run by Williams, causing danger to the brazen goal, but Mason cleared in grand style, and promptly sat in a puddle to the detriment of his Sunday suit. The Brass forwards now got going, only to be pulled up by a stubborn defence, who, in spite of the state of the ground, played a great game. About this time Jameson, the genial skipper of the Transformers, showed his fondness for water, by taking a roll in the largest pond in the field; he says he slipped but the general verdict was that he was again thirsty. French got possession of the ball, and with a pretty run, shot for goal at twenty yards' range, beating Bert Leader, to the wide, who made a valiant dive for the ball, but, alas, he only hit empty air.

This success was soon followed by another, from a fine centre, by Sandiford, who was playing the game of his life. Mud and snow had no terrors for him.

The transformers played up well, but Pagett was always there, and time after time nipped the ball off Stacey's toes. When by any chance the forwards did get past him, Braun and Mason did the needful, and in the first half Big Bill was only troubled once. At half-time the Brass Dept. were three goals up.

The second half was a repetition of the first. French and Pagett did pretty much as they wished, the former bagging a couple more goals, and the latter, one. Braun did a fine run the length of the field, dodging all opponents, steadied himself, and at two yards 'range, gave Leader a hot handful. Leader kept goal in fine style, saving shot after shot, high or low, and if he hadn't been on the top of his form, the Brass Dept. would have had another dozen goals, one save from Miller being worthy of L. R. Roose, at his best.

Towards the end of the game the Trans. dived nobly through the mud and Miller crowned a pretty bit of work by completely beating Big Bill who was having a smoke at the other end of the goal.

Five minutes afterwards the game ended, with the Trans. still going strong, except Irwin, who was having his inexpressibles wrung out by two or three spectators. After the match Mr. Jameson presented the Cup and Medals to the fortunate team.

Mr. Braun suitably replied in a neat little speech, congratulating the Trans. on the sportsmanlike way they took their licking and concluded by saying it was the most unique game he had ever witnessed during his fifteen years in the football field.

The frequent baths taken by the players caused considerable amusement to a large number of spectators. Irwin's fondness for water looked remarkable in a Scotchman, and several players say they wont need a bath till next fall.

Both teams expressed satisfaction at the way the referee handled the game, his decisions, at times, bordering on the marvellous. He was admirably supported by Mr. B. Bedworth, who assisted on the line.

The teams were as follows:

Brass Dept.—Brown, Hall, Briem, Turner, Paggett, Dickson, Miller, Farr, French, Walsh, Sandifort.

Transformer Dept. — Leader, Cole, Yorkston, Smith, Yeates, Mervin, Jameson, Miller, Stacey, Bleakley, Williams.

WON BOTH GAMES

All Canadian All Stars Victorious—Hefferman Played

TORONTO, MARCH 27.—The All-Star Ontario Hockey team returned from Cleveland last night, after playing two exhibition games there, one on Friday and the other on Saturday night. The All-Stars won both games landing the Friday night game by 9 to 6, and the last by 8 to 6. The Canucks were always in the lead in both games, and, according to the Cleveland people, outclassed their team at every angle. Both games drew large crowds.

The line-up:

ROLLER HOCKEY LEAGUE

There will be a meeting at the Brock St. Roller rink to-night for the purpose of organizing a Roller Hockey League. All teams intending to enter are asked to have representatives present, as it is desired to have the League started at once when the weather is cool. Nearly all the teams which played in the Mercantile League this season, as well as a number of other clubs, will be in line. The meeting is called for eight o'clock to-night.

PRIZE WINNERS

Prize winners for the different events pulled off at the Peterborough bowling alley and shooting gallery last week were as follows: In bowling ten pins, F. Smithson won the gold cuff links, 5 pins, H. Kent won the silk tie.

In the shooting gallery S. Brown won the box of cigars given for the highest score in the professional class and V. Bostell won the gold stick pin for the amateur class.

Similar prizes will be given next week.

FOOTBALL

All the officers and those wishing to become members of All Saints' Football Club, please attend a meeting on Tuesday evening at 8.15 in the chapel hall. A good attendance is asked for. Park Street Baptist Church is willing to enter a football team in the Church League. Two more church teams are needed to make up the Church Football League.

BASEBALL BREVITIES

Baseball Brevities.

It is time something was being heard about the City Baseball League.

Toronto's Eastern League team won and lost in their first games of the season on Saturday. One squad under Manager Kelley, with the regular infield and McGinley and Lush pitching were beaten at Columbus by 7 to 2, while the other consisting of the regular outfield and a scratch infield applied a kalsomine daub to the Macon team by 9 runs to 0.

CHURCH SOCCER LEAGUE IS TO BE FORMED

There will be a meeting in the parlours of the Park street Baptist church on Tuesday night of all those interested in the formation of a Church Football League. Already Knox church Park street, St. James' and All Saints' have signified their intention of entering such a league and the prospects for a successful season look very bright. It is hoped that there will be a large attendance to-morrow night.

MARKET REPORTS.

LIVERPOOL, March 25.—Wheat—Weakness in American and Buenos Ayres caused some additional realising, and opening values were ⅝d lower, and during the morning there was a further decline of ¼d to ½d, with undertone weak. The Hat and the Guarantee

The arguments that might be advanced, as to the superior quality of the Buckley Hat, are all summed up in the broad, conditionless, all-embracing Buckley guarantee.

For it will be readily seen that no hat manufacturer could afford to attach to his product such a guarantee as this, unless he had fullest confidence in the wearing qualities of his hats.

English quality, in American styles, the Buckley Hats have long been recognized as the highest type of gentlemen's headwear.

If you have yet to learn the "why" of Buckley popularity, you'll be doing yourself a good turn in asking your hatter to let you get acquainted with Buckley comfort, Buckley durability, and Buckley style.

Ask him to show you the many new shapes; and when you've selected the one you like, see that the Buckley guarantee slip appears under the leather sweat-band.

Then you'll have the satisfaction of knowing that—fair weather or foul, easy wear or wrecking travel—that hat has no excuse to offer you—it must last you four full months—if it doesn't, you get a new one free of cost from the hat store at which you purchased the first one.

Even accident doesn't invalidate the guarantee, for there's a clause in it that says:

"We also agree to exchange this hat, if same is damaged by accident during the said four months."

The Buckley is UNION MADE—and sells for $2.50.

Japan Checkmated?

London, March 27.—The real reason why President Taft sent the American troops to the Mexican frontier is the subject of much conjecture and open comment among the diplomatic and financial interests here.

It is openly asserted that the expedition to the Rio Grande was planned by President Taft to influence the Mexican Government against the consummation of the treaty with Japan, which would have given the island empire unusual advantages in Mexican territory.

It is asserted that had the treaty been signed it would have replaced a similar secret agreement and given to the Mikado a coaling station on the Pacific, with full right of fortification.

In diplomatic circles it is understood that the negotiations between Mexico and Japan were made known to President Taft and that he took drastic means of notifying Mexico of his protest.

It is understood that the action of the President resulted in breaking off the negotiations between Mexico and Japan.

Crew of Ship Missing.

Eureka, Cal., March 27. A vessel thought to have been a steam schooner bound north, is believed to have burned at seat Friday night, four miles off Table Bluff, south of here.

The name of the vessel or the fate of its crew could not be learned early this morning.

A dense fog made it impossible to discern anything but the misty outlines of the vessel, as it was lit up by the glare of the flames.

No sign of the vessel could be found by the tug Relief, which searched for hours on Saturday around where the flames were seen.

The beach in the vicinity also has been searched, but no flotsam has been found.

Had Severe Pains In His Back.

Could Hardly Work.

Mr. Alfred E. Davis, Gorrie, Ont. writes:—"For some years I suffered from severe pains in my back and could hardly work at all, and when I stooped down to pick up anything felt as if my back must break. I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills, and after taking two boxes I was entirely cured, and feel that I cannot speak too highly in their favor.

"This was nearly four years ago and I still remain cured."

Those who have never been troubled with kidney trouble do not know the suffering and misery which those afflicted undergo.

Weak, lame or aching back comes from the kidneys, and when the kidneys are out of order the whole system becomes deranged.

They help the kidneys to flush off the acrid and poisonous impurities which have collected, thus clearing out the kidneys, bladder and urinary passages.

Price 50c per box or 3 for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

If ordering direct specify "Doan's".

OBITUARY

ANDREW SHEARER.

An old resident of the township of Otonabee passed away yesterday in the death of Mr. Andrew Shearer at the age of seventy-seven years. The late Mr. Shearer had been a resident of the township for many years and was held in the highest possible esteem by the community, his many good qualities earning him the regard and affection of a very large circle of friends and acquaintances, and his death will be deeply regretted. The deceased was a Methodist in religion and a Liberal in politics. He is survived by two sons, Messrs. John Sharer at home and James Shearer of Keene, and six daughters, Mrs. Hall, Mrs. Brookenridge of Indian River, Mrs. Andrew Evans, Jermyn, Mrs. Breckenridge, Westwood, Mrs. Porter of Otonabee and Mrs. Foster of New Liskeard.

The funeral will take place on Tuesday, March 28th at 2 p.m., from the family residence, lot 26, concession 3, Otonabee to Fife's cemetery for interment.

MRS. JOHANNA CAVANAUGH.

Mrs Johanna Cavanaugh passed away last night after a lingering illness. Deceased who was in her 84th year of age, was a highly respected resident of Douro, and was the relict of the late Richard Cavanaugh. Funeral will take place to-morrow morning at 9 a.m. from the family residence, Douro, and proceed to St. Joseph's church, thence to St. Joseph's cemetery for interment.

EARLY MORNING BLAZE

The Fire Dept received a call about 2.55 Sunday morning to a fire in a work shop in the rear of the residence of Mr. LePlante, corner Crescent and Lock streets. The roof was burned off and some of the contents burned, but through the prompt action of the brigade, the fire was prevented from spreading to the adjoining buildings, which were mostly frame and would have made a bad and disastrous fire had it gained headway. The damage to the building was between $25 and $50, and contents $30 or $40.

A SPLENDID SERMON

By Rev. Dr. Langfeldt upon "The Infallibility of the Bible."

Rev. Dr. Langfeldt preached a very interesting sermon in St Luke's church last evening, on "The Inspiration and Infallibility of the Bible." Lack of space to-day prevents the publishing of the sermon,b ut it will be given in to-morrow's Examiner.

FURIOUS DRIVING

Two young men in the employ of a local hotel, were charged with furious driving on George street on Sunday evening.

Mr. Howden, the complainant, said that while driving his horse last night, in company with his wife, he had been run into from the rear, by the accused, with the result that his buggy had been overturned, and he and his wife had been precipitated into the roadway, the buggy had been badly damaged, and their clothes were in a likewise condition, due to the adhering consistency of the mud, which adorns the streets. The driver of the rig which ran into Mr. Howden, stated that his horse had become unmanageable, caused by another horse driving rapidly up behind it, and he was unable to pull it up in time to prevent the collision.

His Worship deferred judgment for one week, during which time Mr Howden will be enabled to ascertain the cost of making repairs to the buggy.

POLICE COURT

Henry Wright appeared in the Police Court this morning on a charge of being mentally unbalanced.

Walter Downs, the first witness called, stated that the accused had been affected since last Thursday. He also gave evidence, showing the nature of the delusion with which the victim was affected.

Henry Wright next took the stand and gave evidence to the effect that he had received injuries to his back while a youth, and he now suffered from pains in the head.

The case was left over, in all probability he will be given medical attention, as it is thought that the injury which he sustained to his back some years ago and which was neglected, is responsible for the temporary unbalanced mental condition
